

HOW TO FINANCE, BUILD AND MAINTAIN PHONE LINES

By Mr. J. Victor A. Farnell, St. Helens Manager of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co.

This is the third and last of a series of articles by Mr. Farnell telling how to organize, finance, build and maintain rural telephone lines so that a maximum of service will be rendered to the stockholders.

It is unfortunately true that many rural telephone companies, having first completed a good construction job in the building of their telephone lines, thereafter promptly neglect to provide for the important task of properly maintaining their poles, lines and instruments.

Telephone plants deteriorate rapidly, and frequent repairs are required to keep the lines working satisfactorily. Commercial operating companies charged with the responsibility of rendering uniformly good service, with as little interruption as possible are required to keep a force of trained men constantly engaged in the upkeep of the plant.

For the most part the maintenance of farmer lines has been considered as the joint responsibility of all the farmers receiving service on the line and it has usually worked out that what is proclaimed as the responsibility of all actually becomes the responsibility of no one and the result is that farmer line maintenance has been irregular and inefficient.

Some lines have varied the plan by making each individual on the line responsible for a specified section of the line, with the result that the maintenance of the line is measured by the weakest section or the one least maintained. Neither plan is satisfactory and where they still exist they should be abandoned in favor of a plan which will get definite results namely make one man responsible for the maintenance of the entire line and compensate him for time devoted to such maintenance.

The first rule of good maintenance is to cure a bad condition before it actually menaces service on the line and to this end, the maintenance program should provide for periodical inspection of every foot of the line in order to detect and correct conditions which if allowed to continue, will sooner or later put the line in trouble. The trouble man should be provided with the proper tools and a small quantity of material necessary for ordinary maintenance of a telephone line. If he will call at the office of the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph company where a lineman or wire chief is regularly employed, our men will gladly give him all instructions necessary for ordinary line and instrument maintenance and will show proper methods of wire splicing, tying in line insulators and other repair work.

Testing Service Available.

In telephone exchanges where a wire chief is stationed there is in place testing apparatus and men skilled in its use who readily locate faults on lines and stations. This testing service may be also used by former line repairmen and they are cordially invited to make use of it in locating line and instrument troubles. Ask the central office operator for "wire chief" and when connected explain the problem to him and during his time, patience and energy will be saved in observing his instructions that will follow the tests for trouble he will make.

It is necessary to maintain good insulation between the wires and the ground and this is particularly true in a damp country. Wires should not be in contact with the trunks or limbs of trees or in contact with brush or poles. Cutting brush and trimming trees away from wires and poles is one of the jobs we seldom neglect. It is an unescapable task if good talking and ringing circuits are to be had.

Broken insulators and pins should be replaced. Bare wires should not be in contact with farm buildings unless made fast to insulators. Loose ends of wire should be cut off to avoid possible trouble from crossed or grounded wires. Loose connections are the most difficult of all trouble to locate on outside wires, and largely the principal cause of poor rural telephone service. As a matter of fact, we class poor line connections first of all causes for unsatisfactory rural telephone service. Many of the service faults charged to central office operator that may be listed as the failure to promptly answer calls, failure to properly ring bells and cutting off from your party during conversation may be traced to poor connections in the line wires. A noisy line cutting out and in during conversation with a party is usually found to be caused by a loose connection. Connections between the entrance wires going into farm house and the line wires making fast to the house are locations where line wire and copper in contact with iron sets up a chemical action which forms an insulation medium. His trouble can be avoided by soldering all connections between copper and iron wires.

Poor Connection Causes Trouble. A poor connection will frequently be found that will measure in line resistance the equivalent of several miles of iron wire. If there were found five loose connections in a short of five miles of No. 12 iron wire it would have the same effect as adding 25 miles of No. 12 iron wire to the line. We have removed many poor connections from farmer lines which have far exceeded in resistance five miles of No. 12 iron wire.

There are many things to do that a telephone line is in good condition, but the two most important things are to watch for and correct poor insulation of the line and loose connections.

Individual subscribers should be cautioned against attempting repairs to telephones. In any difficult or repeated case of instrument trouble, if the telephone is brought to our central office it will be thoroughly tested and repaired. On instruments brought to our office one half hour's work will be performed without charge and parts of the telephone damaged will be replaced at actual cost of material.

The replacement of dry batteries should be done at regular intervals by the rural lineman looking after the repair work and should not be left to the discretion of individual subscribers. The lineman should be provided with a Western Electric No. 35 battery gauge and all dry batteries more than six months in use or testing less than normal, as shown by the gauge, should be replaced.

It requires a careful patrol of the line and an inspection of the instruments from time to time to locate and remove faults mentioned, but it will be found the time and money involved is well expended. Rural subscribers observing the practices herein outlined will be appropriately rewarded in more satisfactory talking and ringing, and calling parties will be encouraged to transact business over the line that will be to the mutual advantage of the farmer and those who buy his products. Good telephone service plays an important part in the business of conducting a successful farm.

Household Hints

Flour sacks when bleached make good every day pillow cases, or even bloomers and skirts for the kiddies.

Do not neglect to darn or patch clothing ever time a break is noticed. A garment will wear twice as long if properly cared for.

Save all wool goods, even partly worn, and make quilts. Those that cannot be used for quilts may be sewed like carpet rags and hooked or braided into rugs.

When pancakes are sticky they aren't stiff enough. Pancakes made with buttermilk or sour milk must be quite stiff and those made with sweet milk and eggs should be very thin.

Do not turn house plants often than once in two weeks if you wish them to grow fast, as they always grow towards the light, and turning them is like resetting them, they have to make a new start.

At one time no taxes were levied in this country. But the country wasn't fit to live in then.

Nearly every day is a fine day in the police court.

NEVER SAW ITS EQUAL, STATES MRS. BROWER

Portland Resident Says No One Has More Reason Than She To Praise Tanlac.

"I've never seen such a change in anyone and I don't believe anybody has better reason for praising Tanlac than I have," declared Mrs. J. F. Brower, 662 E. 81st St., Portland.

"Nearly all my life I had awful spells of sick headache that kept me in bed days at a time. My nerves seemed to collapse and I would almost go distracted over any little noise. Then about three years ago my stomach began to trouble me and I have simply suffered tortures from indigestion. I had to be extremely careful about the little I did eat for gas made my heart palpitate until I could hardly breathe."

"I took Tanlac because a friend told me how much good it did her. Now I feel so well in every way I can't tell there was ever anything the matter with me and I gladly give this statement in the hope that others may profit from my experience." Tanlac is sold by all good drugists.
