Room Necessary.

Under the influence of extremes of heat and cold steel car rails are subject to considerable contraction and expansion, the change of length of a 30-foot rail amounting to about three-quarters of an inch. It is this space between the railends that cause the clicking sound as a train moves rapidly along the track. This space is an absolutely vital factor in the safe operation of railways, for disaster would swiftly follow if the rails were laid and fastened with the ends fitting closely together.

A failure is a man who has blundered, but is not able to cash in the experience.

CARD OF THANKS.
