

REAL SOUTH IS SHOWN IN PICTURE

"The Prodigal Judge," which will be shown at The Liberty on Sunday and Monday, with the usual two shows on Sunday afternoon at 2 and 4, was adapted from Vaughan Kenner's famous novel of the same name. Jean Paige is featured in the production and heads an all-star cast.

In this production Vitagraph has produced one of the greatest pictures in its long and notable career. Sceneically it is a feast for the eye. With the action laid in Tennessee in 1835, there were splendid opportunities for costuming. The Southern scenery with its moss-covered trees, its board stretches of the slow moving Mississippi river and great vistas of plantations afford colorful and picturesque backgrounds for the wonderful story of the love of Betty Malroy for Bruce Cartington, the riverman, and the Damon and Pythias friendship between Stowum Price Tuberville, the prodigal but lovable judge, and Solomon Mahaffy, his dour but equally lovable companion. These two types, seen either to the screen or the stage, undoubtedly rank with the best known characters of stage tradition. There is a tear and a laugh; exciting spectacular scenes interspersed with quiet humor—everything that goes to make the perfect picture. "The Prodigal Judge" is more than a mere picture—it is the Rembrandt of the screen.

CRASHING TREE JUST MISSES TRAIN

Only the timely discovery of the fallen tree and the flagging of the train prevented what might have been a bad wreck on the main line of the S. P. & S. between Astoria and Portland Saturday afternoon.

Uprooted from its position on the hillside above by the vibration from a train which had previously passed the spot, a huge tree fell into the right-of-way and across the tracks of the Spokane, Portland and Seattle Railway company at Palm, the first station west of Clatskanie Saturday evening, completely blocking traffic for several hours while a large section of the tree trunk was removed from the track and a few lengths of steel rails which were badly twisted when the forest monarch struck the roadbed, replaced with others.

The tree fell across the tracks just a few minutes before train No. 28 carrying passengers from Astoria and due in Portland at 5:55 p.m. reached the spot. This train was flagged in time for the engineer to bring his train to a stop within 20 feet of the obstruction. This train was delayed at the spot until close to 7 o'clock when it pulled out for Portland, arriving there at 9:20.

DESPONDENT MAN ENDS HIS LIFE

Evidently tired of life and despairing of being restored to health, Finley McKinnon, aged 70, committed suicide Monday afternoon. The aged man, a widower, who had been living alone for a number of years in his humble abode near Clatskanie had been suffering from a cancer. It is said that he recently went east to consult specialists. Probably they gave him no hope for recovery.

That careful preparation was made for the suicide was evident. Coroner T. S. White stated that the weapon used was a rifle and that McKinnon had attached a string to the trigger and to his right foot and it is supposed that he placed the barrel against his forehead for the top of his head was blown off. Coroner White decided that an inquest was unnecessary as it was a plain case of suicide.

The body was taken to Clatskanie and prepared for burial. The funeral was held Wednesday afternoon. Deceased had resided in the Clatskanie section for a number of years and was well thought of.
