THE OREGON MIST.

SUBSCRIPTION, $1.50 PER YEAR.

ST. HELENS, APRIL 29, 1892.

THE COST OF BAD ROADS.

The whole country seems to have had a grand awakening lately in the matter of good roads, says the Oregonian. Judging from the reports sent out by the newspapers, the public highways in each locality must be in a worse condition than those of any other. It has been asserted that the farmers throughout the Mississippi valley are mud-bound during many weeks of each year; that the highways of New England are practically impassable to teams during intervals all winter; and even from staid, careful Pennsylvania and arbitrary New Jersey come similar reports. The loss from this cause is not confined to the farmer, though it falls heavily upon him, nor to the small trader, who is the middleman in the traffic in small farm products, nor upon the consumer who is forced to live at a high price upon a scant market. All of these suffer from impassable roads during one, two or three months during each year, but the loss is not confined to them.

The Philadelphia Press cites in this connection the fact that the people of the United States pay annually $140,000,000 for the maintenance of their public schools and estimates that more than 30 per cent. of the pupils entitled to the benefits of the school system are absent on every school day of the year. Of these the larger proportion is composed of farmers' children, whose absence is due to the impassable condition of the country roads. It is estimated further that 16,000,000 farm horses and mules above the age of 2 years, are kept in their stables in enforced idleness by the deep mud of spring and fall for a period averaging twenty days each year at an annual loss of $80,000,000, a sum sufficient to build 16,000 miles of excellent Telford or Macadam highway.

Whenever the farmers in the more densely populated states or communities can be made to see some of these points an improvement in country roads will result. It is only necessary to convince men of a thrifty agricultural district that bad roads mean waste and loss, while good roads promote economy, to secure something more than lip service in the matter of road-making. The trouble in the past has been that the cost of good roads, calling for a stated sum per mile, has obscured the greater cost of bad roads. The present agitation of the question will, it is thought, correct this mistake, and there is reason to believe that the movement to secure better roads will make reasonable, if not rapid, progress in communities where this idea has been developed.

THE DEMOCRATIC PROGRAMME.

Tony Noltner, secretary of the democratic state central committee, says in his Portland Dispatch:

"In Minnesota the farmers' alliance leaders are preparing to follow the example of their brethren in Kansas and Nebraska, and uniting with the democrats to defeat the republican candidate for the presidency. The basis talked of for a fusion is to have the democrats support an alliance man for governor, and divide the presidential electors, giving five of the nine to the democrats. At the last eletion in 1890 the democrats polled 85,844, the republicans 88,111 and the alliance 58,514. The union, therefore, if carried out, would give an anti-republican majority of over 50,000."

This sounds very nice. Is this the programme in Oregon? Has not this arrangement a familiar clang? It seems to us some such thing has been tried before. A fusion with the alliance is being attempted in nearly all the Southern states, and the plan seems to be to fuse all along the line. But alacrity to fuse has been an old-time weakness of minority parties.

REPUBLICANS should bear in mind that Oregon elects two congressmen this June, and in November the presidential election takes place. It is very important that all republicans should vote the republican ticket in June, thereby encouraging a republican victory in November. There is too much at stake in this campaign to take up any side issues, which are bound to fall by the wayside. The scheme is now being encouraged by the democrats for the peoples' party to secure the electoral vote of several states, thereby throwing the election of president into the house of representatives, which is overwhelmingly democratic, in which case Grover Cleveland would be elected president. We don't believe the protectionists of Oregon will lend their influence to any such conglomeration.

THE reports that are being spread abroad over the county by the peoples' party to the effect that Professor T. J. Cleeton, candidate for the office of school superintendent, has a homestead in Clatsop county, are false and malicious. Mr. Cleeton does not now and never has held a homestead in Clatsop or any other county of this state.

THE question has been asked us lately why THE MIST does not publish the peoples' party ticket. The reason is simply this: In the first place a party ticket is an advertisement; is paid for the same as a merchant advertises his goods. From our advertising columns we expect to receive compensation, the same as the farmer receives pay for the products of the soil; it is our stock in trade; we charge the same rates to all for the use of these columns and all alike have access to them who are willing to renumerate us at our regular rates. No further explanation is necessary.

THE peoples' party of Oregon are crying out because taxes are high. Even in the rural counties the taxes of all kinds range from 1 to 2½ per cent. But when the valuations are considered the taxes are not high. Property is assessed at about one-third of its value. Put the assessment up to what it ought to be, and the tax levy would be small. But in most cases it is these very persons who pay little or no tax that are raising this cry of "high taxes" and yet so seriously object to proper valuations.

IT is amusing to hear some of the democratic organs expose their inconsistency, when they claim that the Judiciary should be non partisan, and with the next breath denounce the republicans for wanting to elect the supreme judge from among their number. If the Judiciary is to be non partisan what difference does it make who is elected so long as they have the ability. We think our democratic brethern would have a hard time to find a more bitter partisan than Judge Bennett.

POLITICAL.

EDITOR MIST:—In writing to the chairman of the central committee recently, I said that if Mr. Ellis could refute the charges made by the so-called peoples' party speakers, we would like to hear him at Rainier, if not he may stay at home. For this I have been denominated an adherent of said peoples' party. While I do not wish to encumber your columns with personal explanations, allow me to briefly say that I have little respect for any person so biased as to be unable or unwilling to see faults when they exist. That there are and have been corrupt practices in both parties, all candid persons will, I think, admit, but though my opinion and vote is only one among millions, it is nevertheless this: That the principles and general policy of the republican party are best calculated to promote the prosperity of all classes, as a whole, and I firmly believe the protective policy to be conducive to the welfare of the manufacturer, operative, and producer alike. Furthermore, if foreign operatives do come here even largely, they soon become a part of our great body politic—they at once become consumers and immediately demand the same conditions that are conceded to the nations, hence the so-called competition soon turns into a larger development of idle natural resources.

In regard to the peoples' party doctrine, the few points worthy of an experiment are copied from laws of republican states, while the balance, together with the incendiary mode of advocating them, I regard as obnoxious and dangerous as the anarchial views and expressions of Schwab, Spies, or Parson.

If our institutions are at fault, it is on account of indulgence and leniency towards such seditionists.

Yours Respectfully,
W. M. PERRY.

Oregon's First Newspaper.

RAINIER, Or., April 24, 1892.

EDITOR MIST:—Allow me to call attention to an error in the answers to the question as to what was the first newspaper published in Oregon.

The answer is given in your paper of the 22nd as the Oregonian. This is a mistake. The first paper published in Oregon was the Oregon Spectator, published in Oregon City; I think it was started in the winter of 1847-8, by a man by the name of Curry, I believe. It was a very small paper, and printed on a wooden press. I think it was discontinued in the gold excitement of 1849.

There was still another newspaper published in Oregon before the Oregonian came out. It was published at Milwaukee by Waterman & Carter, and called the Star. It was afterwards removed to Portland, and the name changed to the Times. I was a subscriber for several years. I do not recollect the exact dates of the starting of either of the papers, but I personally know that the Spectator and the Star were both published before the Oregonian made its first appearance in Oregon. The editor of the Oregonian's name was Thomas J. Dryer, not Dyer. GEORGE MERRILL.

It Pays to Advertise.

PORTLAND, Or., April 4, 1892.

EDITOR MIST: Dear Sir—Our contract with your paper expires with this issue. We have had good results from our ad in your paper, and will write you in June in regard to at least double or three times the space for next year. Hereafter we will make our contracts for a whole year. We remain yours truly,

F. L. POSSON & SON,
Seedsmen.

That Debate.

CLATSKANIE, April 26, 1892.

MR. EDITOR:—I notice in a recent issue of the Clatskanie Chief an attack on my personal character by E. W. Convers, of this place, growing out of a debate between him and myself. Now the reason I send this to THE MIST is, after I read the unkind statements of Mr. Convers, about me, I wrote a reply, in which I defended myself, but to the surprise of all good citizens here my reply was refused a place in the same columns that made the assault. You will see, Mr. Editor, this is unkind and ungentlemanly and unchristian. And also in my reply, in order to stop this newspaper clash, I set a night to renew the debate, namely, the next Tuesday after the issue, but as yet have had no reply to it, so I shall hold that Mr. Convers backed squarely down and is afraid to defend his unholy stuff he calls Bible (?) religion. Now, Mr. Editor, I'll hold myself against any personal abuse in this matter, but will wage a sensible war on that old public disturbance so called Christidelphian religion, and will defend my personal character and the office I hold in the church and the dignity of the church against all such slander and abuse. Yours kindly,

HENRY COATS.

MARSHLAND

Messrs. G. D. Sutherland and W. L. Graham, made a business trip to Clatskanie Sunday.

Miss Altla Matthews left for her home in Pittsburg Monday.

Mr. Andrew Doyle was in the valley last week.

Mr. John Colvin returned home from a visit to Lewis river.

Robt. Camp, of Lewis river, is busy building a barn for W. B. Colvin.

Mr. Tom Colvin made a flying trip to Portland last week.

Mr. Richard Graham is down from Clatskanie nursing a cut thumb.

Mr. Oscar Elliott was in the valley last week.

Mr. A. S. Graham made a business trip to Astoria last week.

The debate Saturday evening, proved more interesting than was at first anticipated, judging from the small attendance. The topic for discussion was "Resolved; that Washington was a military genius." Julia Graham, W. L. Graham, and Mr. Geary were the principal speakers on the affirmative, and Mabel Graham, James Wallace, and G. D. Sutherland on the negative. Messrs Geary and Wallace made strong arguments for their respective sides, talking on history. The judge decided in favor of the affirmative.

The topic "Resolved; that knowledge is more beneficial to mankind than wealth.' W. L. Graham, A. S. Graham, and G. D. Sutherland, principal speakers on the affirmative, and Louis Jarvey, James Wallace and L. D. Graham, on the negative, will be the program for next Saturday, when an interesting time is expected.

OPPOSITION No. 2.

SCAPPOOSE.

Frosts and cold rains are doing a good deal of damage to fruit and garden prospects.

Much sickness exists hereabouts at present, evidently due to the extremely dissagreeable weather.

The two-weeks old babe of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Tompkins was interred in Fairview cemetery last week, and a child of Mr. H. Larson, of Gillton, was buried last Monday.

Grant Evans is the happy father of a ten-pound boy. All concerned doing well.

Miss Maud Henderson is "wielding the rod" in district 29, with good success. The school will give an entertainment next week, the proceeds to be expended in erecting a fence around the school grounds.

Rev. Roninger, of Portland will lecture on "Egypt and Palestine", at the church, May 2nd. A good subject and an able speaker.

Watts & Price's new store building is nearing completion, and will be a credit to the young town of Scappoose.

Several of our young people attended a ball at Gillton last Saturday evening, and on the return home a sudden lurch of the wagon precipitated six of the occupants up to their eyes in a mud hole. No serious injury resulting.

Jos. Holaday, had quite an exciting experience with a runaway team last week, which was attached to a harrow, but luckily escaped serious injury.

Our people were treated to an exhibition on the "Art of self defense" last Friday evening, by a company of experts from Portland, but strange to say our citizens do not take a fancy to said "art," even after the eloquent master of ceremonies, "Prof." Dan Murphy, had told of its great benefits to mankind.

CLATSKANIE.

J. H. Wilson, of Mist, was among the arrivals on the steamer Friday afternoon homeward bound.

Samuel Graham and wife spent a portion of Friday in town, having come by boat from Arshland. Mr. Graham thinks the new road around the hill needs considerable work yet to put it in good travelling condition.

John Holland has got back to see us again and his familiar form may be seen on our streets once more. We miss the colt John used to drive, but that may come later.

Miss Altla Matthews is spending a few days among Clatskanie acquaintances.

For the past few days the new steamer Sarah Dixon has been making regular bi-weekly trips between Portland and Clatskanie, while the Shaver has been coming in about as often for lumber. She came down Saturday night, and gave some persons who came down an opportunity to spend Sunday in town. Among others we noticed Mr. and Mrs. John English and daughter, Annie. George Tichenor and Miss Hannah Schluter. They chose an unfortunate day so far as weather was concerned or we have rarely experienced a more unpleasant day than last Sunday. Wind and rain, then rain and wind conspired to make the day a most disagreeable one to be out in.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Flippin spent a night in town this week.

George G. Mayger took time to come in on the steamer Monday evening and shook hands with his friends while he informed them that he was in the field for county assessor with the prospects of getting there.

W. A. Edgerton is again in the mercantile business as successor of Ed. Page, who purposes to engage in agricultural pursuits.

As a result of A. F. Myer's visit to Portland last week a large invoice of goods has been received, consigned to him, which since his return he has been getting in place, by having additional shelving built in his storeroom in the Central hotel. He has now embarked in a general store, and is a candidate for public patronage.

Ed. Page and family, with their trunk and sewing machine, left town on Tuesday, expecting to reside on a ranch for some time cultivate the soil, grow familiar with nature in looking out upon fir trees, and making rail fence.

Schoolhouse work progresses by slow and easy stages. We noticed the scraper at work one day this week leveling the ground for a foundation. The most of the lumber is already cut, and will be hauled as soon as the gentle rains show a disposition to ease up a little.

Uriah Kelly has made another move, this time to the coast, where he expects to embark in the dairy business. He has been gathering up a number of cows, and feel sanguine of doing a good business in that line. His friends join him in the wish that he may meet with an encouraging decree of success. Mrs. Kelly returned last week to attend the funeral of her grandmother, Mrs. Campbell.

A gentleman came in Wednesday desiring to secure a position as teamster in one of the logging camps. His funds seemed low, but he could raise a little for beverages so that getting his entertainment in that way his lodgings were obtained free under some friendly shed roof, and his meals were a trifle once in in. After spending two or three days in town he started out for Westport, but feeling a sense of goneness about the stomach, got on its best behavior and stopped at the residence of Mr. Badger where he very politely asked for breakfast. Mrs. Badger, with characteristic kindness, set to work at once preparing an elaborate meal, and in her desire to make the meal all the more tastefully could wish, opened some of her choice fruit and put it on the table. Her guest noticed what she was doing and told her not to go to any trouble on his account, and she replied, of course, "Oh it's no trouble at all." He got his meal which was eaten with a relish, and after a few remarks said, "Now if you will get my hat I will be going," and proceeded on his way, leaving one family surprised at the check of some men. They have the compensation, however, of feeling that they helped satisfy the cravings of hunger in one man in good shape, though if they had to do so again they might use plainer fare.

Miss Nellie Popham was unfortunate enough to run a nail in her foot at the Central hotel on Tuesday, and has suffered considerably from the injury.

Mrs. W. C. Wolfe, who has been spending two or three weeks with the family of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Blackford, left on the steamer last Wednesday evening for her home in McMinnville. Several of our ladies had the pleasure of forming her acquaintance, and would be pleased to have her come again. Maggie Blackford returned with her on a visit.

Justice C. C. Lee and wife were in town Saturday, and started on foot for their home 2½ miles out. The Justice manages to do some pretty good walking, notwithstanding his rheumatic limbs, and Mrs. Lee thinks nothing of a tramp to town and back, though many younger people would think it a great hardship.

Died—Mrs. Elizabeth M. Campbell, at the residence of her son, Nathan Nichols, in Clatskanie on Wednesday morning, April 20, 1892. Deceased was born in New York state, May 29, 1803, and nearly reached 79 years of age at the time of her death. Soon after the birth of her son, Nathan Nichols, her husband died, and she afterwards married a Mr. Campbell, who also died in Iowa in 1870. A few years ago she came to Oregon, and has since made her home with her son. She has been an invalid for the past three years or more, and her death would not have been surprising at any time during that period. Funeral services were held in Conyer's hall on Friday afternoon, Rev. Coats preaching a short sermon, and the casket was covered by many floral tokens of respect and affection from neighbors and friends. After the services, which were very largely attended, the remains were laid at rest in the cemetery on the Bryant place.

LOST HIS VOICE.

How Electericity Restored It—An Employe of "The Oregonian" the Happy Man.

Portland, Or., April 23, 1892.

Dr. Darrin—Dear Sir: In January I was taken sick with la grippe, which caused paralysis of the vocal organs. More than two months I was unable to speak but little above a whisper, and that with much difficulty. I could get no relief until I received your electric treatment a few days since. From the time of your first treatment I have improved every day, and am now able to talk with ease. Sincerely yours,

GEO. H. BERGER.

Mr. Berger, well and favorably known in this city, has been for several years collector for the Morning Oregonian, and can be interviewed at any time at his residence 190½ Jefferson street, or at the Oregonian office. The cure is certainly a very remarkable one, and only goes to show the superiority of electricity over other remedies in the cure of chronic and acute diseases. Dr. Darrin is certainly proving himself famous, as the many cures we are called on to publish from week to week testify. Five years ago Dr. Darrin opened an office in Portland, and it is safe to say he has treated more patients and cured more cases in that time than any five physicians in the city. The reason is this: He treats the poor free, and through their influence the rich apply to him, until now, his patronage is amongst the highest in our community. The doctor can be found at 70½ Washinton street, Portland, from 10 to 5 o'clock daily, where he gives free consultations, and when he finds cases incurable, he frankly tells them so, thus saving the patient time and money. His treatment is mainly by electricity, though he gives medicines and performs surgical operations when necessary.
