WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, September 28, 1892. The greatest week in the history of the great organization, the Grand Army of the Republic, ends today.

Washington is proud of its encampment record, as it has every right to be. It has disappointed the croakers at home and abroad, and shown that it has no superiors and few if any equals as a host.

free sleeping quarters to 55,000 veterans and arranged for an ample supply of food for them at reasonable prices.

The president, who returned to the White House in company with Mrs. Harrison (who is still in a critical condition) Wednesday morning, was in no frame of mind to take any part in the entertainments for his comrades...

Vice-President Morton, who took the president's place in receiving the parade, said: I am delighted. Everything has been perfect.

Secretary Tracy: It is the greatest thing out. Secretary Charles Foster: This is undoubtedly the biggest week in the history of the G. A. R.

Attorney-General Miller: Why, this is the biggest thing in the universe. It surpasses belief. It is highly creditable to citizens and soldiers.

Senator Manderson, Hawley and Palmer, all members of the senate military committee, agree in pronouncing the parade the greatest of the G. A. R., and everybody votes 'aye' with them.
