More Emphatic than Ever.

Housekeepers who have been induced to try some new brand of baking powder in place of the Royal, "just for a change," become more emphatic than ever in their praise of the Royal.

The mail frequently brings over a thousand letters a day commending the great qualities of the Royal Baking Powder from patrons in every part of the world, many of whom have used it for over a quarter of a century without a single failure. It never loses strength. The last teaspoonful in a can is as good as the first.

How to Come to a Stop.

When we least expect them, accidents will befall us, a verification of the old adage that the unexpected always happens. The following recites how an active business man was suddenly brought down.

THE TRAIN STOPS.

CINCIN., O.—" Recently while in the act of alighting from my car, I stepped upon a stone, which, turning suddenly under my foot, threw me to the ground, with a severely sprained ankle.

THE MANAGER STOPS.

Suffering exceedingly, I was helped into my car, and my man rubbed me most generously with arnica and kindred remedies, but to no avail.

A POINT TO STOP AT.

Reaching a station where St. Jacobs Oil could be procured, two bottles of it were bought, and the application of it resulted at once in a relief from pain, which had well nigh become unbearable. I was out and about my work in three days."

"German Syrup"

Justice of the Peace, George Wilkinson, of Lowville, Murray Co., Minn., makes a deposition concerning a severe cold. Listen to it. "In the Spring of 1888, through exposure I contracted a very severe cold that settled on my lungs. This was accompanied by excessive night sweats. One bottle of Boschee's German Syrup broke up the cold, night sweats, and all and left me in a good, healthy condition. I can give German Syrup my most earnest commendation." ●

Did you ever see a sickly baby with dimples? or a healthy one without them?

A thin baby is always delicate. Nobody worries about a plump one.

If you can get your baby plump, he is almost sure to be well. If you can get him well, he is almost sure to be plump.

The way to do both—there is but one way—is by CAREFUL LIVING. Sometimes this depends on Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil.

MERCURIAL

Mr. J. C. Jones, of Fulton, Ark., says of S.S.S. "About ten years ago I contracted a severe case of blood poison. Henry Labouchere's Political Experience.

It was in 1864 that Mr. Labouchere retired from the diplomatic service and promptly turned his attention to politics. By an odd coincidence this extreme Radical entered the house of commons as a member for the royal borough of Windsor. Within a short time he was unseated for alleged bribery and corruption on the part of his election agents. That was in 1866. In the following year came the general election, and though all over the country Liberals were returned in swarms, Middlesex left Mr. Labouchere out in the cold.

Up to this period he had not secured wide recognition outside of parliament. The leading Liberal newspaper of England, The Daily News, was not a paying property. Labouchere was a large stockholder in it. For a time he devoted his energies to daily journalism, and the breaking out of the Franco-German war gave him his great opportunity. It was through his influence that Archibald Forbes was at once sent as war correspondent. Labby himself chose a different field of action. Foreseeing the siege of Paris, he voluntarily went over to Paris and took up his pen to give the outside world his famous "Diary of a Besieged Resident." These letters, as published in The Daily News, securely established Labouchere's reputation as a clever journalist. They were subsequently gathered into a volume, but it has been long out of print.—Cor. New York World.

Living Statues.

Novel pieces of statuary, pictures and casts are constantly being placed in shop windows to attract the attention of the passer by. There was recently opened up town a large cigar store, which has introduced a new style of shop window advertising. It is a group of three figures, apparently statues, the center one of which is an Egyptian girl dressed in the oriental style, with flowing robes, standing on a pedestal and holding out a lighted taper for the smoker to light his cigar. The other two figures are colored boy slaves sitting motionless on highly carved chairs, also dressed in the eastern way. The chairs are partly turned toward the street. To a casual observer the three figures appear to be statues, but on close observation the girl is seen to be artificial, while the boys' eyes are occasionally seen to roll, thus betraying the fact that they are alive. To watch the people go up to the window and try to make out whether the figures are plaster of paris or real human beings is most amusing; but let somebody mention the word "darky" and those eyes will roll around as quick as a wink. —New York Times.

Music from Electricity.

The public is becoming accustomed to the sound of organs whose mechanism is actuated by electricity; but the idea of a musical instrument in which the electric current produces the musical tones by no other means than the conductor itself is startling as well as puzzling. In the experiments of Von Lepel, in Germany, a disk of glass or paper rubbed with paraffine, placed between the terminals of the conductor (small copper wires) from a strong induction machine, have thrown out with great rapidity tiny balls of fire, which disappeared with a faint whistling sound.

A more definite and practical instrument has been constructed, consisting chiefly of coils of wire of various sizes and lengths. On passing through the electric current a distinct musical sound of peculiar quality is given out.—New York Telegram.

And the Band Played.

General Custer believed in having martial music on all possible occasions. He would have the band out at 5 o'clock in the morning and the last thing in the evening. One day when the narrator's regiment had just come into camp General Custer ordered the band out. The men were tired and reported that they had lost the mouthpieces of their instruments.

"Very well," said the general, "you may take pickaxes and shovels and help repair the roads. You may find the missing mouthpieces while you are working." It is unnecessary to state that the band played soon after.—Buffalo Courier.

Making Animals Useful.

It is said that a German family living out west have in their possession a tame fox with a beautiful bushy tail, with which the animal has been trained to dust the parlor furniture every morning. It would be a great saving in time and strength of many overworked people if dogs with long tails and cats with soft, furry sides could be trained to do similar work.—Harper's Young People.

CARELESS USE OF PAPER.

Some Remarks on a Public Evil That Are Applicable to Many Places.

Paper is an article of universal use, of a lightness aerial almost to the point of volatility, and so cheap that once used it is generally thrown away. In the careless hands of a slovenly people it can become the most disfiguring and offensive feature of a city's streets and parks.

In every street of New York there live or pass hundreds or thousands who daily make paper contributions to the city's unsightliness and filth. Paper falls upon the streets from all quarters, from the doors of houses, private and commercial, and from the hands of thousands of wayfarers who have finished reading their letters, newspapers or handbills, or have taken the wrapping off their parcels. Look up any street in the city, and if it doesn't carry paper marks that should disgrace any proper and self respecting community, it is probably because of the momentary immunity following the sweepers.

"No district anywhere, no block even, is free from this form of rubbish. In the parks it is fearful. Men please themselves with an hour's reading in the beautiful places so elaborately devised and so laboriously and expensively kept, and, in hoggish indifference to the public's enjoyment of the park's perfection, toss their paper aside to be scattered by the wind in all directions. Nursery maids sit with indifference while their children litter the walks with paper bags or torn book leaves or orange skins. Persons of all sorts of conditions, sizes and sexes carry their lunch there, and leave their temporary surroundings more like a pigsty than part of the fairest and most charming retreat which the skill of man and the generosity of a public spirited city can make.

Children are brought to play in the Central park in organized swarms led by women specially charged with their conduct, and perhaps also at other times with their education, yet under their theoretical supervision the clean, fresh lawns are permitted to assume an aspect of disorder and untidiness such as would be tolerated in no decent nursery. The quality of our pavements is rapidly rising to the standard indispensable for a really beautiful and finely finished city, but all in vain if they are to be continually strewn with paper.

There is no labor required to free New York from this offensive and long standing habit of slovenliness. Only a little care is needed, but it must be general and unflagging.—New York Sun.

The Horse in Mythology.

The Grecians placed in the sun the god of their wisdom and intelligence, and gave him a chariot and four fiery horses—the chariot to symbolize doctrine and the horses intelligences. So with their god of the sea; Neptune was drawn in his sea chariot by horses — the sea to symbolize all scientific knowledge in general, the chariot to symbolize doctrine or science and the horses intelligences. They mythologically described the birth of the sciences by the flying horse Pegasus, which with his hoofs burst open a fountain out of the hard rock, at the moment of his rising from earth to heaven, at which fountain were seven virgins who were the seven sciences.

The flying horse symbolizes an intelligence directed heavenward; the hard rock represents hard matter of fact or sensual knowledge; the fountain springing therefrom represents pure truth where the virgin sciences delight to dwell. — Our Animal Friends.

His Choice of Routes.

It was in a third class carriage on the Lancashire and Yorkshire railway. The talk all the way had been about foot racing. One young fellow had crowed so lustily as to what he could do on the cinder track that an old fellow sitting in one corner of the compartment thought he would take it out of the youngster.

"So tha con run a bit, con tha?" he said.

"Aw reckon aw con," was the reply.

"Aw'll tell thi what aw'll do wi' thi. Aw'll race thi for five peawnds if tha'll gi' me a yard start."

"Done; wheer will tha run?"

"Up a ladder!" came the answer, amid roars of laughter.—London Tit-Bits.

Putting Mice to Work.

A Scotchman one evening sat looking at some mice. An idea struck him. He decided to set the little thieves at spinning yarn, and it was probably a very astonished pair of mice that found themselves a few days later working a small treadmill in a cage like those in which rats and other small animals are kept, but without the slightest idea that they were paying their board in this way. An ordinary mouse can twist over a hundred threads on reels every day, although to do this he has to run 10½ miles.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Second Ditto—That's just why; for if my landlady knew it I should have to clear out pretty quick, I can tell you!—R. Haeusler.

She Told the Truth.

"Maria Jane," said a fond mother the other morning to her daughter, "did Daniel Jamieson kiss you on the steps last night?"

"No, mamma; he did not."

If the fond parent had said "lips" instead of "steps," it would have troubled Maria Jane to reply.—Exchange.

Unfortunate Bridget.

"Bridget is engaged to the postman," said Mrs. Bronson; "but it can't last. Bridget breaks everything she goes near."—Harper's Bazar.

AVENGING AN INSULT.

Attorney General Brewster's Effective Rebuke of an Ungallant Lawyer.

"Ten or twelve years ago I witnessed the most dramatic situation of my life in a Philadelphia courtroom," said Henry J. Erskine, of the Quaker City. "It occurred during the trial of an important suit involving certain franchise rights of the Pennsylvania railroad in Philadelphia. Benjamin Brewster, afterward attorney general of the United States, was then the chief counsel of the Pennsylvania company. Brewster, you know, was a frightfully ugly man on account of a terrible disfiguration of his face from burns, but intellectually he was a giant and in deportment a Chesterfield.

"So great was the admiration for the man's powerful mental parts that one soon forgot his ugliness. He was extremely sensitive of his facial misfortune, but never referred to it himself, nor did any of his thousands of friends ever ask him the cause.

"The trial to which I refer was a bitterly contested affair, and Brewster at every point got so much the best of the opposing counsel that by the time argument commenced his leading adversary was in a white heat. In denouncing the railroad company this lawyer, with his voice tremulous with anger, exclaimed: 'This grasping corporation is as dark, devious and scarified in its methods as is the face of its chief attorney and henchman, Benjamin Brewster!'

"This violent outburst of rage and cruel invective was followed by a breathless stillness in the crowded courtroom that was painful. Hundreds of prying eyes were riveted on the poor, scarred face of Brewster, expecting to see him spring from his chair and catch his heartless adversary by the throat. Never before had any one referred to Mr. Brewster's misfortune in such a way, or even in any terms, in his presence. Instead of springing at the man and killing him like a dog, as the audience thought was his desert, Mr. Brewster slowly arose and spoke something like this to the court:

"'Your honor, in all my career as a lawyer I have never dealt in personalities, nor did I ever before feel called upon to explain the cause of my physical misfortune, but I will do so now. When a boy—and my mother, God bless her, said I was a pretty boy—when a little boy, while playing around an open fire one day with a little sister just beginning to toddle, she fell into the roaring flames. I rushed to her rescue, pulled her out before she was seriously hurt and fell into the fire myself. When they took me out of the coals my face was as black as that man's heart.'

"The last sentence was spoken in a voice whose rage was that of a lion. It had an electrical effect, and the applause that greeted it was superb, but in an instant turned to the most contemptuous hisses directed at the lawyer that had so cruelly wronged the great and lovable Brewster. That lawyer's practice in Philadelphia afterward dwindled to such insignificance that he had to leave the city for a new field."—St Louis Globe-Democrat.

Jay Gould Describes a Raid.

Here is a specimen of style taken from Jay Gould's "History of Delaware County." In speaking of the antirent troubles in Delaware county, Mr. Gould (then only about twenty years of age) describes an attack upon his father's house by a lot of white men disguised as Indians in the following language: "The savage horde sprang from their hiding places and with demonlike yells rushed up and surrounded Mr. Gould, who was standing with his little son in the open air in front of the house. We were that son, and how bright a picture is still retained upon the memory of the frightful appearance they presented as they surrounded that parent with fifteen guns poised within a few feet of his head, while the chief stood over him with fierce gesticulations and sword drawn. Oh, the agony of my youthful mind as I expected every moment to behold him prostrated a lifeless corpse upon the ground!"

A Smart Young Man.

Smart Young Man—Good morning, Mr. Bullion!

Mr. Bullion (irascible old gent)—Um—ah! Good morn. Remarkable dog you have with you."

"Ya-as; Siberian bloodhound; terribly savage; takes this ox chain to hold him. If any one should even look cross at me, this dog would tear him to pieces—yes, indeed. I'm going to have him killed. Too dangerous, you know."

"I should say so."

"Ya-as; must do it in the interest of humanity, you know. By the way, Mr. Bullion, your daughter has accepted me and I have called to ask your consent."

He got it.—New York Weekly.

ON THE WAY TO PARADISE.

Let us hope that the people who habitually disregard their health will reach that desirable place, and avoid the locality which is less desirable as an eternal residence on account of the heat and surroundings generally. But while we tarry in this vale of tears, why should we voluntarily endure the tortures of dyspepsia when a systematic use of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will rid us of the atrocious malady which—unless physicians are very much at fault—tends to shorten the term of our existence. Heartburn, billiousness, constipation almost always accompany this complaint, and are symptomatic of it. These are all extinguished by the Bitters, which also conquers completely malaria, rheumatism, nervousness and debility. Since the appearance of "la grippe" it has shown a singular mastery over this formidable complaint that has carried off so many of our brightest and best.

It isn't the man who blows most who finds it the easiest to raise the wind.

Bad taste in the mouth or an unpleasant breath, when resulting from catarrh, are overcome, and the nasal passages which have been closed for years are made free by the use of Ely's Cream Balm. I suffered from catarrh for twelve years, experiencing the nauseating dropping in the throat peculiar to that disease, and nose bleed almost daily. I tried various remedies without benefit until last April, when I saw Ely's Cream Balm advertised. I procured a bottle, and since the first day's use have had no more bleeding—the soreness is entirely gone.—D. G. Davidson, with the Boston Budget, formerly with the Boston Journal.
