Money Lenders in Europe.

The continental mounds of pieta, large numbers of which were founded in Italy throughout the sixteenth century, and the objects of which were, in the first instance, essentially charitable, the avowed purpose of the institution being to counteract the injurious effect of usury by lending money on deposits at an almost infinitesimal rate of interest. The Franciscan monks were the first to lend money on goods, and in 1315 they were allowed by the pope to receive a moderate amount of interest, but in process of time the Italian mounds of pieta became extensive banking corporations, which were occasionally plundered or half ruined by forced loans exacted by tyrannical princes, and sometimes brought to entire collapse by injudicious financial speculations.—London Telegraph.

UNITED AT THE LAST.

PITIFUL TALE OF AN EMIGRANT FAMILY THAT PERISHED.

The Terrible Blizzard of 1881 Had for Some of Its Victims a Whole Family Which Proze to Death in Dead Man's Cove—Heroic Efforts of a Mother.

"That's Dead Man's cove right before your eyes," said the old man as he pointed to a recess of half an acre in extent in the southern face of the Little Rocky mountains. "That's Dead Man's cove, and you kin see the iron work of the wagon lynx about when ye git closer. When I first looked in here that was five human bodies lying dead in that wagon. Me an my pard we dug a big grave and buried 'em all together back agin that cliff, thar whar the rocks is. We piled the rocks that way so the wolves couldn't git at the dead."

"But there is no headboard—no names," protested as I rode closer to the spot pointed out.

"Couldn't be no names, 'cause we couldn't find any," he replied, "and them rocks is a gravestone as will last forever. We'll git off the sled down fur a smoke, and I'll git ye the full particulars. Two passed here a hundred times in the last three years, and it allus gives me the heartache. Poor husband—poor wife—poor children!"

"It was this way," he continued after his pipe was alight. "Me and pard had our shanty down the valley about a mile. Plenty of emigrants in their kivered wagons used to come by this trail and turn south into Wyoming, or keep west into Idaho. They'd come five or six families at a time, and they'd come singly. Some of 'em would take such chances of Injuns, sickness, landslides, starvation and death as would make your hair stand on end to think of. No man kin begin to guess how many graves thar be of men, women and children between the Dakota line and the west branch of the Missouri river. I've counted a hundred in a day's ride."

"Waal, one December mornin me and pard woke up to feel that thar was a blizzard makin ready to bust on us. It had been coolish but pleasant up to that time. We could tell by the feel of things that was comin, and began to get ready fur it. It was just arter noon when a woman walked into our shanty. She was an emigrant. Right here in this cove she had left her husband and four children to try and find some help. He had bin sick fur three weeks and was little better than a dead man, and she had bin drivin the team an takin keer of things gen'ly. She orter to hev turned back long before, but some fool of a doctor had told the man he'd get well if they kept on."

"They had got separated from the party they started with, and had made the last hundred miles alone. They war out of grub, hadn't a match left to build a fire, and the woman knowed a change fur the wus was blowin up. She was a frail, little woman, and she had gone through with nuff'to down a man, but she hadn't lost all her pluck yet. As soon as she told us the story we got ready to go back with her an bring in the outfit. We made a start, but we never got thar."

"The blizzard prevented, eh?"

"She did. She came swoopin down all of a sudden, like some great bird droppin from the sky. A fine snow begun to fall, the wind started right in to blow a livin gale, and I believe the thermometer went from 45 degs. above to 10 degs. below inside of half an hour. We hadn't any with us, but the change was sudden an amazing. You couldn't face that gale to save your life. It just stopped us and turned us around before we had got fifteen rods from the house. As to the cold, it just paralyzed you. We had to go back, and arter takin a big drink o' whiskey all around and puttin on more clothes we tried it agin."

"Me and Sam was as tough as b'ars them days and could hev laid down in a pond of water and let it freeze up with us, but we couldn't buck agin that blizzard. When we made the second start we got about half way up here, the little woman leadin the way all the time. Then we had to stop. You couldn't see three foot from your nose, and all of us was frozen to death by inches."

"And you went back?"

"We did. The woman was determined to push on, and we just had to pick her up and carry her back. It was only by the Lord's hand that the way that we ever reached our cabin agin. We had our ears, noses and fingers fraz, and an hour arter we got back we had friz solid in our cabin within five foot of a roarin fire. The woman prayed to God and appealed to us, but we knowed it was no use. That was the blizzard of 1881, and I've heard men say it was 42 degs. below zero in this valley that night."

The woman got nipped wuss than we did, but her mind was on the family back here. She was bound to come back alone, but we stooed her off till about dark. Then she made a bolt fur it and got away."

"And went to her death?"

"Just as certain as if she had jumped off that cliff. The blizzard shot us in fur three days. When we got out we found her within twenty rods of the cabin. She had friz to death going that fur. Of course we knowed how it would be up here. The horses had been hitched and turned out. They lay over that tree. The folks in the wagon had crowded together and kivered up with all the blankets, but all war stoo dead as hard as rocks. They never saw that fust night come down."

"Me and pard overhauled the wagon, but we couldn't find anythin givin the name of the family, and so, like hundreds of others out in this kentry of mountain and valley, Injun and wolf, we kivered 'em in to sleep till the Lord gits ready to call 'em fur judgment. Seems awful that a hull family should be wiped out that way, but they ar' sleepin thar together, and I guess the Lord'll know the spot even if thar is no gravestone to mark it."—New York Herald.

What Was the Matter with the Cake?

A sociably inclined young couple who are comfortably quartered in one of the large apartment houses up town invited a few friends to a card party one evening last week. Owing to a misunderstanding regarding the date not one of the expected guests appeared on the evening in question. The young wife was greatly vexed. She had prepared a tempting little supper, and her economical soul revolted at the idea of its being wasted. One of the features of her table was a large ornamental cake, which she had purchased at a neighboring confectioner's. She cut the cake and endeavored to induce her husband to eat a portion of it, but he did not like cake. She was determined, however, that somebody should eat it, and she offered it to the hall and elevator boys, which there were four. They accepted it with enthusiasm and quickly disposed of it.

The following day every boy was sick—very sick. A doctor was called, and his investigations led to the suspicion that something was the matter with that cake. He said that the boys had undoubtedly been poisoned. The confectioner's shop was visited, and the story of the alleged breeding cake was told to him. He had evidently heard a similar story before, for he hastily exclaimed: "Oh, it was part of that varnish batch of cake. I am so sorry. You must excuse me. My cook put in a cup of varnish. That is all. You see I have been getting the woodwork in my store varnished. Yes, that was it. He put in some varnish. That is all."

The boys got well, and the story of the "varnish cake" has been repeated all over the neighborhood. When the hidden guests who staid away from the card party heard of it they were glad that they had misunderstood the date.—New York Times.

Indian Chess.

Indian chess, or "chaturanga," is played with a rajah, an elephant, a horse and a ship, and four foot soldiers, corresponding to a king, a castle, a knight, and a bishop and four pawns, and there are four players. Each player faces his partner, and places his pieces in the order of ship, horse, elephant and rajah, beginning at the left hand corner—the four foot soldiers being of course in front. Partners are thus on the opposite diagonals. The players move in the order of the sun. The tactics of the game, apparently from the "Bhavishya Purana" are not to attack your opponent who has just played, as would be done in double chess, but to obstruct the opponent who has to play next. The game is distinguished from double chess by marked variations.

There is no queen, and the ship or bishop is "killed" and not to be squares at a time, though he can hop over an intervening piece if he likes. Moreover, a player can take his partner's rajah if things are not going well, and so assume command of both armies, and if both sides have lost a rajah they can be restored by mutual consent.

The game is thus pervaded by a military spirit, though not so stiff but that the opening moves are made by the aid of dice. In this early game the rajah could be taken, but he can always, if all the other pieces are taken, retire with the honors of war and draw.—London Spectator.

Punishments in Morocco.

The notion of suiting the punishment to the crime, however it may have found favor of Cordova, does not occur to the Marquise officials of today.

A Moorish law court is a parody of all the courts of the world. But the execution is the main object of the judges, and the contempt for suffering is absolute. The rich may escape with white skins, but those without "palm oil" have scant mercy.

For instance, the mere accusation of a paltry theft, if made from some favored quarter, may result in a severe and extraordinary punishment for such conduct. This consists in breaking the ankle bones and pitching the sufferer into the nearest lake or ditch, whence his relatives may or may not remove him. As there are no surgeons and no medical appliances, the bones cannot be set, and he is left to rot in the water, or to be devoured by the fish.

In the prisoners' men and women, chained together night and day under every circumstance of indescribable filth and horror, wait until their friends, who bring them all the food they get, are able or willing to offer a bribe sufficient for their release.—Nineteenth Century.

Do Not Sleep on Your Left Side.

When a patient complains of a bad taste in his mouth every morning on waking up, the first question I ask him is as to the position he assumes when going to sleep. An immense number of people sleep on the left side, and this is the most common cause of unpleasant taste which is generally attributed to dyspepsia. If a patient has been taken within two or three hours of going to bed, to sleep on the left side is to give to the stomach a task which it is difficult in the extreme to perform. The student of anatomy knows that all food enters and leaves the stomach on the right side, and he is to be congratulated if he is able to perform a simple operation which is anything but conducive to sound repose.

The action of the heart is also interfered with considerably, and the lungs are unduly compressed. It is probable that lying on the back is the most natural position, but few men can rest easily so, and hence it is best to cultivate the habit of sleeping on the right side. It is very largely a matter of habit, and the sooner it is acquired the better for the sleeper and the worse for the physician.—Interview in St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

At a Quaker Wedding.

No clergyman is needed at a Quaker wedding because the happy principals perform the ceremony themselves. This is the form reported by the bridegroom at a recent wedding: "Friends and neighbors, in the presence of the Lord and in the living presence, I take this, my friend, Edith Mary Hanbury Ages, to be my wife, promising, in the fear of the Lord and with divine assistance, to be her faithful and loving husband, to cherish her as the Lord's dear child, to comfort her as the Lord's dear child, to
