REPEALING THE PENSION LAW.

One of the most important decisions ever issued out of the department of the interior was last week sent by Secretary Smith to Pension Commissioner Raum. This decision annuls the act of 1890, known as the dependent pension bill, whereby all ex-federal soldiers now incapacitated for labor or unable to earn their living, are allowed pensions ranging from $6 to $12 per month, regardless of whether their disabilities were contracted during actual service, or were the results of accidents or sickness since their discharge. The object of the law was to assist old soldiers, who are now broken in health and estate, in supporting themselves and families, and was given them as a complimentary acknowledgment of their services and to liquidate a debt of gratitude for the same, in which the government considered itself held. This law was a boon to those to whom it applied, and worked no particular hardship upon the government. It involved the disbursing of about $20,000,000 annually, but the money was systematically distributed all over the country and directly benefitted poor people and those who are particularly deserving of it. The suspension of this law will simply withdraw $20,000,000, or thirty-five cents per capita from circulation. This will be the general result, and the practical result will be to withdraw almost the only support of thousands of crippled, destitute veterans who ruined their health and pauperized themselves and familes to support their country. Undoubtedly, there are men drawing pensions under this law who are not deserving of them, but this fact should be no argument in favor of entirely suspending the law. This money is, or was paid to a class of people who were obliged to pay it out immediately upon receipt, for their living, thus keeping it in constant circulation, and as they are residents of every county in the United States, the money was systematically distributed in every part of the government. The withdrawal of this vast sum will, therefore, be universally felt and will surely have a perceptable effect upon the business interests of the country, for with the present depressed monetary conditions thirty-five cents per capita cannot be withdrawn without visibly and injuriously effecting the finances of the country.

MESSRS. Evans and Sontag, the modern Dick Turpin and Claude DuVal, of Visalia, Cal., continue to make things interesting for aspiring young detectives who camp on their trail. The latest exploit in the checkered career of these gentlemen is the probably fatal shooting of a detective named Black. Black and another detective went to the neighborhood inhabited by the outlaws last October and engaged in cutting wood and hauling lumber keeping a lookout in the meantime for the bandits. The latter soon "spotted" the detectives and sent them word to leave the country on pain of death. Black thought no more of the threat untill last Saturday, when upon returning to his cabin he was fired upon from ambush and riddled with buckshot. Black crawled to where his rifle was and returned the fire as the bandits retreated. One of the bandits was seen alone shortly afterward, and it is believed Black succeeded in killing the other one. The capture of these fellows furnishes a brilliant opportunity for some ambitious young detective to cover himself with glory, but so far all who have attempted this hazardous enterprise have only succeeded in getting a hide full of cold lead.

VISITORS to the world's fair will have an opportunity to see a perfect reproduction of a Viking ship, the kind used by the Norsemen or Northmen, during the 8th, 9th and 10th centuries. The ships were very similar in size and appearance to the Roman galleys, of the same and earlier periods, and were propelled by means of sails and numerous oars. The Viking ship was built in Norway, manned by Scandinavians and started for the world's fair nearly a month ago. A series of festivities has been arranged to take place at Newport, R. I., upon the arrival of the Viking, after which it will be towed up the St. Lawrence river and through the lakes to Chicago. The hardy adventurers who first used these queer vessels were the boldest, most venturesome navigators of early history and anticipated the discovery of America by Columbus by fully five hundred years. Their early expeditions to this and other countries were made purely for the love of adventure and the purpose of plunder, and no country which they visited ever profited therefrom or wished to see them return. The Viking will be the center of attraction to all students of antiquity and will be second in interest to the coravels of Columbus only.

"HENRY BRIGGS," again bobs up serenely and his nauseating squable with his dearly beloved brethren is one for a long engagement. It was sincerely hoped by a long-suffering public that Mr. Briggs was effectually suppressed and his disgusting wrangle settled but it seems that he had only let go for a short time to "blow" and get a new hold. The principles—if there are any—involved in this pow-wow, one of no practial interest to the people engaged in it, and certainly of no interest or benefit to the public. All parties involved in this nerve-rasping rumpus are making themselves ridiculous and would appear more consistent and to for better advantage in the eyes of the public if they would throw their creeds, dogmas, inelegant contentions and heresy trials aside, and go peacefully about the work of saving souls in which commendable occupation the church people are supposed to be unitedly engaged. It makes no difference with the general result how or by what means a sinner is saved, and these people are not doing the cause of religion any good by bringing their petty jealousies into such questionable prominence.

WHAT'S the matter with St. Helens doing something in the way of preparing for the fourth, by cleaning up the streets and improving the appearance of the place by removing the numerous piles of slab-wood, old boxes and wagons, garbage and all other kinds of debris which lies scattered along the strand from the mill to the court house. We expect to entertain a number of strangers here next month and they would probably not form a very favorable opinion of our city unless it is put in a more presentable appearance. It is none too soon to begin these minor preparations and the streets would not suffer from a few attentions any way, besides everything should not be left untill the last minute, as there is going to be plenty to do every day to properly prepare for the celebration. The attention of the city council is respectfully called to this matter, and it is hoped it will have the cooperation of the citizens in the work.

G. A. SANFORD, editor and proprietor of the Hillsboro Democrat, is deserving of no little credit for the manner in which he published the last number of his paper, especially so, since his entire office was destroyed by fire only a day or two previous to publication day. It was a hard blow and Brother Sanford is deserving of much sympathy.

PENCIL AND SCISSORS.

The owners of the Netarts Beach Hotel, in Tillamook county, are making preparations for a lively summer business. This is one of the most beautiful summer resorts on the Pacific coast, and that invariably commends itself to the continued patronage of those who visit it.

Eastern philantropists should remember that the Chinese were given every opportunity for a period of one year to register. They did not do so under the advice of the Six Companies, by whom they are held slaves. They have knowingly violated and set our laws at naught, and should be deported. The necessity of enforcing the law becomes more apparent when the nature of the Chinese is considered.

The Dallas Transcript shoots a pretty solid blow at Brother Pentland, of the Independence West Side. He says: "The Independence chronic kicker gave the business men of that city a rest last week and turned his batteries loose on Dallas, because of the Cooper Hollow road. Somebody aught to give that fellow a bile bean, set him off in a little country by himself and make him a monarch. But even then, he'd be kicking himself in a short time."

As the county of Clatsop is finely adapted to the business of dairying—a large creamery being now in successful operation in the Nehalem valley, it will no doubt interest many of our readers to read that in a recent test of the daily qualities of Jersy, Guernsey and short-horn cows at the world's fair, with twenty-five cows of each breed, the Jerseys came out far ahead, both in the amount of milk, percentage of butter and cheese. The questions of the amount of food consumed and the loss or gain of flesh is yet to be determined.—Astoria Budget.

The old phrase, "better half," as applied to a married woman, was merely a graceful courtesy, a trick of gallantry, but it has a substantial meaning now. In this state, by late legislation, the widow's dower has been enlarged so that now she takes one-half the land her husband has siezed of, instead of one-third. Every legislature for many sessions has gradually enlarged woman's civil rights until she is in some respects in a better position than her husband. She only lacks the right to vote and hold office generally to be more favored than her husband.

It is reported that what is believed to be the original text of the Gospels has been discovered in the shape of a palmipseet recently unearthed in a convent on Mount Sinai. It is in the Syrian language, and, if authenticated, will be the most interesting historical discovery of the age. The translation used by us is taken from the Greek version, which was borrowed from the original Syrian, now said now said to be discovered. There is no subject of such world wide importance as that which the alleged discovery is connected with, and it is to be hoped that upon further examination the authenticity of the sacred manuscript will be confirmed.

During the four years ending on May 1st of this year, Larson & Peterson, of the Lewis and Clarke, paid to other ranchers in that portion of the county a sum exceeding $26,000 for milk, being unable of themselves to suply the demands of their customers. In collecting this milk, they covered an area extending no farther than Chadwell postoffice, a fact which speaks volumes for the possibilities of that portion of Clatsop county through which the Lewis and Clarke river flows. Around Chadwell there are several farmers who contemplate visiting Chicago and the world's fair this year being amply able, out of the proceeds of their butter and eggs during the last few years, to indulge in the luxury.

The last session of the legislature of this state made some very important changes in the old law in regard to the filing of chattel mortgages. It makes it the duty of the county recorder in counties where there is a county recorder of conveyances, to file chattel mortgages, instead of the county clerk, as before. The legislature also made the following provision: That at the request of either the mortgagee or trustee, such an instrument may be recorded in the same manner as a mortgage on real property, but in a book or record kept exclusively for chattel mortgages; and if such instrument be so recorded, and after the same has been duly recorded, it may be delivered to the person authorized or entitled to receive the same. As some of the county clerks in this state thought the new law not clear as to which officer, the clerk or the recorder, should file them in case they were filed and not recorded, the matter was referred to Judge McBride, of the fifth judicial district, who decided that the recorder was the proper officer to file the same.

Read it in His Paper.

People who never read the advertisements in their newspapers miss more than they presume. Jonathan Kenison, of Bolan, Worth county, Iowa, who had been troubled with rheumatism in his back, arms and shoulders, read an item in his paper about how a prominent German citizen, of Fort Madison had been cured. He procured the same medicine and to use his own words: "It cured me right up." He also says: "A neighbor and his wife were both sick in bed with rheumatism. Their boy was over to my house and said that they were so bad that he had to do the cooking. I told him of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and how it had cured me. He got a bottle and it cured them in a week. I have great faith in Pain Balm and believe it will cure the worst cases of rheumatism. 50 cent bottles for sale by Edwin Ross, druggist.
