Royal Baking Powder is Superior to all in Purity and Strength

"For purity and care in preparation the Royal Baking Powder equals any in the market, and our test shows that it has greater leavening power than any of which we have any knowledge."

Prof. Chemistry, University of California.
Analyst California State Board of Health, etc., etc.

No careful housekeeper can afford to use any baking powder but Royal.

The Little Things.

The plainest room, in which are light, warmth, an easy chair, a soft lounge, extra clothing for the bed, may outrank in real luxury the elegant apartment in which are lovely embroideries, dainty toilet cushions, and the various knickknacks which please the eye, but are of no real use.

Plenty of matches in every room are a sign of good housekeeping. Who has not felt the wretchedness of hunting all over a house for a match? Matches need frequent replenishing. Everybody takes them. It is a good plan to give one daughter the duty of seeing that the matchboxes are always filled.—Harper's Bazar.

Always Plenty.

"Suppose coal were to give out, what should we use in its place?" asked Hicks.

"Poems," returned his editorial friend.—Life.

ARE EVIDENCE That the blood is wrong, and that nature is endeavoring to throw off the impurities. Nothing is so beneficial in assisting nature as Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) It is a simple vegetable compound. Is harmless to the most delicate child, yet it forces the poison to the surface and eliminates it from the blood.

Just a bad cold, and a hacking cough. We all suffer that way sometimes. How to get rid of them is the study. Listen—"I am a Ranchman and Stock Raiser. My life is rough and exposed. The Wife of a Famous Frenchman.

Mme. Blouet, who is now in America with her famous husband, Max O'Rell, on his lecturing tour, has had a large share in his literary successes. In all his work she feels as keen an interest as does he, and the first press notices of a book are as eagerly looked forward to by her as by the author himself. Mme. Blouet is in every respect the wife of a literary man, interested in his success and eager that he should show himself before the world at his best. She wields a clever pen herself.

And yet, despite her keen interest in her husband's work, Mme. Blouet's principal thoughts are in her home and for its best interests. She is in every respect domestic. The Regent park home of the Blouets is of her making, and in it she shines as wife, mother and hostess. For her husband she makes her home so bright that he is never absent from it but he is anxious to return to it. She is an excellent cook herself, and at times she has for days at a time prepared her own dinners, much to the gratification of her husband, who rather regretted the advent of a new cook. As a mother she is the constant companion of her only child, a daughter of sixteen. Leonie Marie is the counterpart of her mother in many things, and seen together they are more like sisters than mother and daughter. Miss Blouet accompanies her father and mother in America upon their present visit.

In appearance, Mme. Blouet has all the charms of a true woman, which binds friends to her with clasps of steel. She is a brunette, with dark brown eyes which speak almost as intelligently as her tongue. There is about her a combination of vivacity and quiet retirement seldom found, and the one quality vies with the other in conquests. In matters of dress she is a thorough believer in the simple. She prefers black, although the dark shades of red and yellow become her extremely well in evening dress.—Frederick Dolman in Ladies' Home Journal.

A Plea for Voice Culture.

A good deal is being done to educate the hands. In my opinion it is becoming a vital matter to also educate the voice, not for special purposes, but for everyday use. Women rarely use their lungs and throats wisely. I know many who can hardly be heard distinctly across a table. This is often affectation; more often it is a habit formed from a belief that a woman should not be loud voiced. It is not necessary to screech in order to be heard, that is if your voice has been discreetly used. A child's voice is generally pleasant until made unpleasant by bad habits or a bad spirit. But an unused, neglected voice, when driven to effort, makes a bad mess of it. I deny that a woman is formed by nature so as to be compelled to shriek in falsetto in order to throw her voice to the distance of five, ten or twenty rods.

Good etiquette requires for our comfort and highest accomplishment a clear, strong, full use of the voice. There never was invented by art so charming an instrument as a beautiful throat. Yet how many voices are wretchedly cracked and squeaking. I am ambitious as a mother that each one of my children shall have fine vocal organs; well developed, well trained and delightful to be heard. That is, we should not only be able to talk to people all the way to them, but so as to delight them when we are heard.—Mary E. Spencer in St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Why Some Women Go to Europe Often.

I wonder that the authorities are not more watchful of the fashionable dressmakers on Fifth avenue. Three-quarters of the smuggling practiced in New York is perpetrated by them.

Their game is to hire some decadent woman of fashion, somebody whose manners combine the repose of Vere de Vere with the shrewdness of her country women. She is instructed to bring home the creations of Felix and Worth as her baggage. If she is caught she disappears. Nobody can connect the Fifth avenue dressmaker with the transaction. The dresses are sold at auction or sent back to Paris, for nobody in her senses would pay the duty on them.

Do you not often wonder how Mrs. Flighty, the dashing widow, manages to live so sumptuously and visit Europe so often? She is a dressmaker's decoy. She gets her clothes for nothing; her fare is paid; she has a neat little salary; she takes an assumed name on the passenger list; and if the custom house inspector insists on opening her trunks, ecce, she vanishes from the sight of men.—New York Truth.

War Against Hats.

The French hairdressers are circulating a petition which they will submit to the minister of fine arts when it has 500,000 signatures. The purport of the document is that women be prohibited from appearing in their hats in the theaters subsidized by the government, and that the coiffure of the ladies at such entertainments be according to the fashion devised by the Hairdressers' association. The cause of this strange request is that the trade in false hair has greatly decreased for the last few years, and the present fashion of dressing the hair in Grecian style threatens a still greater falling off in that trade.

ANOTHER BIBLE COMPLETED.

Rev. Bingham's Translation In the Language of the Gilbert Islanders.

The first Bible in the language of the Gilbert islanders was printed recently in the pressrooms of the American Bible society in the Bible House in New York city. The publication marks the end of 34 years of labor on the part of the Rev. Hiram Bingham, who has been a missionary on the islands.

Several friends of the missionary gathered in the composing room and listened to Mr. Bingham as he told of the work of his lifetime. His father, Hiram Bingham, was a missionary before him, Mr. Bingham himself having been born in Honolulu 62 years ago. He was graduated from Yale college in 1853, and in 1856 began his labors on the Gilbert island group, which is 2,500 miles to the southwest of the Sandwich Islands, being on the line of the equator. Three years afterward he undertook to reduce to writing the hitherto unwritten language of the natives and began the work of translating the New Testament. Ill health forced him to suspend his labor, and it was not until April 11, 1873, that he finished the New Testament.

On April 11, 1890, three years ago, he found himself at the last verse of the Old Testament. He then came to America and on May 12, 1892, put the manuscript into the hands of Dr. Gilman, the secretary of the Bible society, to be printed. On June 11 he received the first proof, and in in this city, with his wife, he began the proofreading 10 months ago. To read the proof of the last verse of the last chapter of Revelation and thus to end his task was the purpose of the ceremony.

Mr. Bingham stood in the center of his circle of friends among the fonts of type in the most notable composing room in the world, where the Scriptures are set in 242 different languages. The concluding verse was put in type, a proof was taken, a slight correction made, and Mr. Bingham read the verse aloud in the Gilbert island tongue. Superintendent Thompson then led the way to the pressroom, and another foreign Bible was added to the list printed by the American Bible society. In the afternoon several volumes were bound and presented as souvenirs of the occasion. The book contains 937 pages.

Two Negatives of One Woman.

A photographer says: "One lady ordered a large picture of herself 12 years ago. She was then a blooming maiden with a round cherub face and very good looking. For some reason she never called for her picture, and I hung it up in my collection. Last week this same lady came in to sit for her picture. She didn't know me, although I recognized her directly, for a photographer rarely forgets faces. She had grown quite old looking, and after her toddled a couple of young ones. I showed her a negative, but she scorned the insinuation of the faithful camera that she looked so old and careworn.

"I remembered her picture on the wall and persuaded her to let me finish one of the impressions. Reluctantly she consented and went away with a palpable frown of disgust on her countenance. When she called again, I showed her the picture of 12 years ago. She was delighted, and it did me good to see the smile of satisfaction on her face. I made her a dozen copies, and now she thinks me the finest photographer in the world. Not many women like to admit the inroads of age and care."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

The Month For Muffins.

"March is the muffin month," said Andrew Short of Michigan. "Perhaps you don't know that the muffin is an oriental device for the entertainment of the appetite. Well, it is. The muffin's origin is Moorish. At Rabat in Morocco to this very day you may hear the muffin bell sound at 4 o'clock, when the muffin man comes round. The muffin is as popular there as it is in London, and the griddle on which the Moors bake it is exactly the same as that used by us, and it is fixed in a like manner over the fire. The Moor's name for the muffin is 'maphula.' Originally it was 'maphul,' but the Greeks added the 'a.' Take away the final vowel and change 'l' for its cognate 'n,' 'maphula' becomes 'mufeen,' and there you are!"—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Trick of the Eye.

By cutting three strips of white paper of the same length exactly, with one of them half as wide as the others, one of the neatest tricks of optical illusion can be produced. If those of the same width are laid crosswise, the narrow strip placed in the center, it will invariably seem as if the broad strips were considerably shorter than the narrow one. The illusion is enhanced by laying the pieces of paper on a black surface. By placing the three strips in the form of an inverted "N" and using the narrow strip for the diagonal line the latter in turn will appear much shorter than the other two. To an unpracticed eye the illusion will seem very remarkable indeed when it is demonstrated that all the strips are of the same length.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Good and Bad Elements In Tea.

There are two elements in the dried tea leaf which distinguish it from other dried herbs, one of which is the source whence comes all the inspiration which attaches to the beverage, the other the source of nearly all the criticism which it receives. The first is theine, the active principle of the herb, the physiological effect of which is yet but very imperfectly understood; the second is the harmful tannin, which, it is universally admitted, cannot be taken into the human stomach in any appreciable quantity without ill results.—Good Housekeeping.

THE WHISKERS AND THE MAN.

How the Hair on His Face Dominates the Wearer's Character.

"Among the men I meet at intervals on the road is a very intelligent fellow from Boston," said a drummer. "He is about 35, and with a capacity for raising hair on his face beyond that of any person I ever met. He has fun with it, too, and he has his whiskers in different shape every time I meet him. Now and then I don't know him, but he always comes up smiling, and I catch on to the new man without much difficulty.

"'It's queer about whiskers,' said he the last time I saw him. 'Don't you know they change the character of the man?'

I didn't know it and said so.

"'They do, however,' he continued, 'whether you know it or not. Now, I have been hairy for 20 years nearly, and in that time I have been all sorts of men. For instance, when I wear large, flowing side whiskers with a mustache, I grow gradually as they do, and become quite dignified and self important. I can't help it, you know. Its "whiskers oblige," as we say in French, and when I catch a look at myself in a glass as I walk along I unconsciously swell out and strut. I'm bound to do it to match those whiskers. Then, when I cut off the mustache and run the side whiskers alone, I never see that mouth and chin back there but it makes me feel pious, and I begin to assume the demeanor of a minister of the gospel. Can't help it, either, to save my life. Sometimes I go smooth faced, and my character oscillates between priest and actor, according to the one of the crowd I'm in. I even get boyish sometimes and frisky when I see my smooth, round face.

"'Once, for the fun of it, I cut my mustache a la prizefighter, short and stubby, and, do you know, before a week I was a veritable tough, with my hat cocked over my eye and my general manner provoking a slugging match at every turn. I was anxious for a fight all the time and only saved myself by shaving. When I wear a full, neatly trimmed beard, I feel exactly like a banker or a successful professional man, and my manners after a little while fall into that rut. I look it, they tell me, and I can't help but be it. If I wear a mustache alone, long and silky, I feel like a gay Lothario, and want to smile at and ogle every woman I see, I want to be one of the boys, too, and whoop it up all along the line. When I add an imperial to the mustache, I throw my shoulders back, brace my muscles and assume a military air. In one or two of my towns I am known as colonel, for I have always worn my imperial while there.

"'If I run my beard down to a point in the French style, I feel quite diplomatic, and can be as slick as the politest of them. I feel my shoulders shrug on the slightest provocation, and to all intents and purposes I am a foreigner. If I part my whiskers in the middle and brush them out to either side, I am a German nobleman or a British land owner, according to my surroundings. It gives me a hale and hearty, middle aged feeling that shows at once in my manner. If the whiskers are let grow very long, I feel like a patriarchal farmer and become quite elderly and innocent in my deportment. And so it goes through all the phases.

"'I fancy that the style of a man's whiskers is in consonance with the man's character, and that as a man is so will his whiskers be. In my case I have reversed the operation, but I feel as I grow older and become more settled that I shall adopt one style of whiskers and keep to that. Even now I am getting around to it and have been wearing this close cut full beard for almost six months, and I don't feel like changing it.'"—Detroit Free Press.

His Courtroom Thunder Stolen.

A member of the Massachusetts bar used to get verdicts by touching appeals to tender feelings of jurymen, especially if his client was poor and the defendant was a rich corporation. He became famous for getting verdicts in such cases. One day he met his match. The counsel for a corporation which he had sued undertook to head him off. He had an opportunity to study his opponent's methods and gave special attention to his style in the delivery of pathetic passages.

Having the right to make the opening plea, he told the jury what to expect, described the attitude, tones and manner of his brother lawyer, and did it so thoroughly and faithfully that he not only discounted the effects of his plea, but so embarrassed him that he could not do justice to himself or his client, who lost his case.—Boston Globe.

The Rage for Boas.

The rage for feather boas continues unabated. Ostrich, black and green coque, marabout, turkey, and even peacock feathers are used, the two latter in conjunction with some other variety. To complete a carriage, reception or theater toilet, the long rich boas are very suitable and handsome. To string one around one's neck on every marketing or shopping expedition, and with any sort of gown, robs it of much of the elegance and greatly lessens the effect.—New York Letter.

Mrs. Sophia Walker, long a resident of New York city, is to have a memorial in the form of an art gallery in Bowdoin college. The annex will be built and equipped by the Misses Walker, daughters of the deceased.

On the James river in North Dakota and south and west of Jamestown there are four or five buffalo, all that are left of the little herd which made its last stand near Fort Totten.

"Do not," said a Turkish wiseacre, "trust to the promises of the great, the duration of a calm sea, the clearness of the day, the vigor of thy horse or the speech of women."

COMMONPLACE.

You say that my love is plain,
But that I cannot allow
When I look at the love for others
That's written on her brow.
She hasn't a flashing eye,
She hasn't a well cut nose,
But a smile for others' pleasures
And a fear for others' woes.
And yet I will own she's plain—
Plain to be understood,
For who can doubt that her nature
Is loving and fair and good?

You say that you think her slow;
But how can that be with one
Who's the first to do a kindness
Whenever it can be done,
Quick to perceive a want,
Quicker to put it right,
Quickest in overlooking
Injury, wrong and spite?
And yet she is slow indeed,
Slow any praise to claim,
Slow to see wrong in others,
Slow to give careless blame.

"Nothing to say for herself,"
That is the fault you find.
List to her words to the children,
Gentle and bright and kind.
List to her words to the sick,
Look at her patient ways,
Every word she utters
Speaks in the speaker's praise.
"Nothing to say for herself!"
Yet right, most right, you are,
But plenty to say for others,
And that is better by far.

You say she is "commonplace,"
But there you make a mistake,
I would I could think she were so,
For other maidens' sake.
Purity, love and faith,
Are they such common things?
If hers were a common nature,
Women would all have wings.
Beauty she may not have,
Talent nor wit nor grace,
But until she's among the angels
She will not be "commonplace."

—Arthur M. Heathcote.

The Discovery of Purple.

A dog belonging to some Phœnician fishermen was in the habit of feeding upon a species of mollusk which the sea occasionally cast upon the beach. It was noticed that the animal's mouth after such meals was always died a rich purple, and by investigation that color, which it is said the moderns have never been able to imitate, was obtained.—Boston Herald.

Curing Horses' Fears of Thunder.

Dogs and horses can be entirely cured of their fear of thunder by being present at artillery practice. Believing they now know what produces the dreadful roar, they no longer fear it.—Popular Science Monthly.

PLASTERS.

If you are thinking about buying a plaster, remember that you will place it upon your body and cannot get a plaster that will be too good for you.

ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTER is the best plaster made. Your druggist may have some other plaster on his shelves which he is anxious to get rid of, or else some worthless imitation purchased at a low price for the purpose of substitution. Do not accept his "just as good" plea; insist upon having the genuine. ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTER has no equal.

BRANDRETH'S PILLS can always be relied upon.

"These trousers are awful short." "Well, you told my collector the other day that you were awful short yourself."

CHILDREN who are puny, pale, weak, or scrofulous, ought to take Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. That builds up both their flesh and their strength. For this, and for purifying the blood, there's nothing in all medicine that can equal the "Discovery."

In recovering from "Grippe," or in convalescence from pneumonia, fevers, or other wasting diseases, it speedily and surely invigorates and builds up the whole system. As an appetizing, restorative tonic, it sets at work all the processes of digestion and nutrition, rouses every organ into natural action, and brings back health and strength.

For all diseases caused by a torpid liver or impure blood, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Scrofulous, Skin, and Scalp Diseases—even Consumption (or Lung-scrofula) in its earlier stages—the "Discovery" is the only guaranteed remedy.

If it doesn't benefit or cure, in every case, you have your money back.

SWINGING AROUND THE CIRCLE

Of the diseases to which it is adapted with the best results, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a family medicine, comprehensive in its scope, has never been thrust upon public attention in the guise of a universal panacea for bodily ills. This claim, daily arrogated in the columns of the daily press by the proprietors of medicines far inferior to it as specifics, has in a thousand instances disgusted the public in advance by its absurdity, and the prospects of other remedies of superior qualities have been handicapped by the pretensions of their worthless predecessors. But the American people know, because they have verified the fact by the most trying tests, that the Bitters possesses the virtues of a real specific in cases of malarial and liver disorder, constipation, nervous, rheumatic, stomach and kidney trouble. What it does it does thoroughly, and mainly for this reason it is indorsed and recommended by hosts of respectable medical men.

It was a popular druggist who exclaimed yesterday: "Let me draw the soda water of a nation and I care not who makes its laws."

RHEUMATISM CURED BY THE USE OF

Moore's Revealed Remedy.

ASTORIA, OREGON, January 10.—I can state with pleasure that by the use of MOORE'S REVEALED REMEDY my husband was relieved from an old case of RHEUMATISM and my youngest boy cured entirely of INFLAMMATORY RHEUMATISM when the best doctor I could get did him no good. Yours in gratitude. MRS. H. V. STEELE.
