St. Helens, September 20, 1893.

It is not at all pleasant to anticipate the stern necessity for retrenchment but facts are always stern things to contemplate and we had as well look them squarely in the face. This idea is suggested by the necessity which presents itself at this particular time for devising practical means by which to counteract the effect of the money depression from which the country is just now suffering, and we know of no better place to begin than in the administration of public matters where a vast amount of mismanagement, if not downright extravagance is noted. While it may, perhaps, be unjust to attack any particular branch of the municipal government, it is always just and proper to particularize whenever it is necessary to correct excesses which border on extravagance. Following this conclusion we would like to call attention to the unnecessary expense heaped upon the taxpayers by the indiscriminate manner in which people rush into law the moment they fail to agree with a neighbor upon some silly and unimportant matter, and the point we wish to make is this: In a large number of such cases people go to the nearest justice and enter complaint for some real or imaginary wrong and are permitted to proceed with an expensive lawsuit without being required to make provision for settling the costs which accrue, and the net result is that in a large number of these petty cases the county is burdened with the expense of a useless suit without any recourse but to pay it, and without receiving any moral or other benefit. The time is at hand when these things should stop. Even if we were enjoying the palmiest hours of favorable monetary conditions it would not be doing the people justice to permit these things, and when the country is writhing in the throes of such a money crisis as now prevails, the most rigid economy should be observed in the administration of all matters, both public and private. People should not be encouraged in the habit they have acquired of settling personal differences at the expense of the county, and we protest against justices taking cognizance of any more such cases unless the complaint is accompanied by cash or collateral to cover costs. If a case is meritorious and legitimate the complainant will not hesitate to secure the county for its expense in the matter, while on the other hand, if there is a possibility of having some costs to pay, a disgruntled complainant will think twice before he rushes into a useless lawsuit.

The administration is dealing with the Geary anti-Chinese law in a usual wibbly-wabby style. It started out with a great flourish of trumpets a few days ago by announcing that the law was to be enforced. When the new Chinese minister called at the department of state to file the formal protest of his government against enforcing the law and to put in a few words himself in the same line, he was informed by Secretary Gresham that the operation should be suspended until congress took some action relating thereto. Two bills have been introduced in the house, both modifying the law, and one of them is said by some people to have the appropriation of the administration, although others say that Representative McCreary, of Kentucky, chairman of the house committee on foreign affairs, is at work on a new Chinese bill which is to be backed by the administration. Very naturally those things are a little confusing. Representative Geary, of California, who, acting with the other senators and representatives from the Pacific coast, is credited with having secured the positive promise, a few days ago, that the law bearing his name should be enforced. Mr. Geary is very much disgusted, and when asked what was to be done, said: "I don't know, and no body else seems to; when I go to one department I am told one thing, and when I reach the next one the story is radically different." The general tenor of things is conducive of the opinion that the administration will be forced to take a firm stand with the exclusionists and see that the deportation clause of the Geary law is enforced. All the remaining money appropriated for that purpose has been paid over by the treasury department, and Senator Dolph has introduced a bill appropriating $5,000,000 to make up the balance needed for the purpose, and has made a forcible speech in support of his bill and in favor of enforcing exclusion. The recent anti-Chinese demonstrations on this coast are beginning to bear fruit and congress is slowly coming to a realization of the fact that the internal peace of this country depends much upon a radical change in immigration laws, and the legislation of the near future will govern itself accordingly.

It is calculated to make a man rub his eyes and ask himself whether this is 1853 or 1893 when he hears the democratic arguments advanced in favor of the bill which has been reported to the House, providing for the removal of every vestige of federal control over congressional and presidential elections. By the way, the title of the bill should read "A bill to perpetuate democratic control of the southern states, and of the states of New York, Massachusetts and Illinois, through the hoodlum element of the cities of New York, Chicago and Boston," for that is the real object. The arguments advanced in favor of the bill are the same as those advanced in the fifties in favor of secession. The author of the bill has the audacity to say that the federal government has no right to "supervise the election of the states' representatives in congress." Since when did the states have any representative in congress? If representatives are state officials, what did the framers of the constitution mean by this: "The times, places, and manner of holding elections for senators and representatives shall be prescribed in each state by the legislature thereof; but the congress may at any time, by law make or alter such regulations," and by this: "Each house (of congress) shall be the judge of the elections, returns, and qualifications of its members?" The senate has within a short time exercised its authority under the last quoted clause by refusing to seat senators appointed by the governors of three states, and it was done, too, by the votes of the democratic senators, under the direct order of the president; but when was the democratic party ever consistent in anything? The claim that federal supervision of elections is unconstitutional is a false one and no one knows it any better than the demagogue who has the effrontery to make it, in the hope of blinding the ignorant.

"Whom the gods would destroy they first make mad," is an ancient maxim, applicable to Mr. Cleveland just now. He is mad at the obstinate senators who, in spite of his commands and entreaties and the influence of the financial world, brought to bear by the petitions and the personal presence of representatives of the boards of trade in all the large cities, still refuse to vote for the Vorhees repeal bill. The birth of his baby and the good condition of mother and daughter having relieved his mind of family cares, he will now devote his attention to the senate. He started in by sending for Senator Vorhees and giving him a raking down because the bill had not been passed, this being the date that Vorhees had set as the outside limit for the passage of the bill. The bill has not passed, and what is more, there is no immediate prospect of its being passed. It is now stated that the great test of endurance between the friends and opponents of the bill is to begin this week. The silver men still express confidence of their ability to prevent a vote, and their opponents are not so confident of success as before.

REPRESENTATIVE GROSVENER of Ohio has introduced a bill providing for an appropriation of $10,000 for a national dedication of the Chickamauga and Chattanooga National Park, which embraces the ground upon which one of the most memorable battles of the war was fought. The dedicatory ceremonies are to be held on the 17th and 18th of October, 1894, and it is proposed to invite the survivors of both armies to join therein.

This country will hail with great rejoicing the day the United States senate decides to stop talking and do some of the business they were sent up to Washington to transact.

THE United States senate is the grandest aggregation, probably, of assinine mud-bags the world ever saw. Talk comes high but United States senators must have their little say.

DELENA.

We are informed of the marriage of Mr. Helmer Sederstrom, of this place, to Miss Nelson, of Astoria. We extend our best wishes to Mr. Sederstrom and his bride.

A company of young people including W. A. Wood and Robert Diblee, of Rainier, Miss Collins, Miss Corlies and others, spent a very pleasant day at the residence of Dr. Meserve last Sunday.

It is with heartfelt sympathy for the bereaved parents and family that we note the death of Oscar Wagner at a Portland hospital on Sunday, the 17th inst. The remains were brought to Rainier on the 18th, and laid to rest in the Woodbine cemetery, the following day, attended by a large number of friends who feel keenly the loss of one of our most promising young men and one so highly esteemed by all who knew him. His sickness began last Feb. in the form of a fever, which baffled medical skill for many weeks and stopped only to give place to that dreaded affliction, consumption, which finally carried him to that peaceful rest beyond this world of care and toil, to join the countless millions gone before.

John Parker has purchased the old mill building of Meserve Bros., and is moving it to his place where he will convert it into a shed for storing charcoal.

Meserve Bros. are moving their mill to the new building erected for it last spring, where they will operate hereafter with increased facilities for supplying their customers with the best of lumber.

W. King, of Rainier passed through this place last Sunday, on his way to Upper Clatskanie.

Miss Emma Wagner is attending school at this place.

A. R. Holmes has been hauling lumber for L. A. Malcolm, who intends building an addition to his residence.

What's the matter with getting up a debating society here this winter? Suppose we try! There are a great many topics to be discussed, and in so doing all will be benefited.

Old lady McDonald, who was so brutally beaten by a masked robber last week, is not expected to live but another day or two. Her face and head were beaten to a shapeless mass and she will hardly survive the effects.

Must be Sold.

Shingle mill complete, with dry-house 28x40 feet. Will cut 30 M per day. Said mill must be sold to satisfy chattel mortgage on the same. Inquire of J. H. Swager, at his store in St. Helens.

Following is a report of School District No. 16, for the month ending September 15: Number of days taught, 20; number enrolled, 24; average attendance, 16; number of visitors, 4; those neither absent or tardy during the month were: Sybil Furrow, Joseph Doan, Raymond Doan and Nellie Rice. M. E. HARMER, Teacher.

Thos. Cooper is building an addition to the south side of his livery stable. It will be 22x50 feet.

Mrs. Jas. Galtens, of Deer Island, presented her husband with a fine girl baby yesterday morning.

Mr. Davenport, of Brockwayville, Pa., has been visiting his cousin, Mrs. James Muckle, of this place. He returns to his home next week.

The Iraids is again making her regular run between Oak Point and Portland.

Try It.

For a lame back or a pain in the side or chest, try saturating a piece of flannel with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and binding it on the affected parts. The treatment will cure any ordinary case in two or three days. Pain Balm also cures rheumatism. Fifty-cent bottles for sale by Edwin Ross.

I have for sale the celebrated Pride of Japan tea. Call and try a package. J. H. Swager.

FOR SALE.

A few full blood Shropshire sheep, rams and ewes. W. W. WEST, Scappoose.

A Good Thing to Keep at Hand.

Some years ago we were very much subject to severe spells of cholera morbus, and now when we feel any of the symptoms that usually precede that ailment, such as sickness at the stomach, diarrhea, etc., we become scared. We have found Chamberlain's Cholera, Colic and Diarrhea Remedy the very thing to straighten one out in such cases, and always keep it about. We are not writing this for a pay testimonial, but to let our readers know what is a good thing to keep handy in the house.—Troy, (Kan.) Chief. For sale by Edwin Ross.

CENTS THAT DROP FROM HEAVEN.

A Little Boy Told a Story Which Sounded Very Much Like an Untruth. Little Richard M. was a very handsome and very pleasant boy. The house he lived in, in a small city, had no door yard in front of it, but the sidewalk was wide and clean and nicely shaded by elm trees and was not so much crowded with passers. So it was a pleasant and safe place for little Richard to play.

The only objection to it was that people passing by were apt to be so much pleased with the bright faced little fellow that they would take notice of him in a way that might make him vain—so his wise mother thought—and quite often a gentleman passing would give him a cent.

Richard's mother thought that this was not good for him, and so she very plainly told him not to take any more cents if they were offered him. He was to thank any such gentleman for his kindness, but to tell him that his mother did not approve of his taking money from any one.

One day after she had given him his charge little Richard brought in a penny. When his mother saw it, she reproved him for disobeying her. But he answered, "Mamma, there did not any man give me this cent. God threw it down to me out of heaven."

This shocked his mother all the more, for she thought that it must be a lie. She did not see how her little boy could possibly think that he was telling the truth. So she reproved him very solemnly and tried hard to make him see how wicked he had been and to confess his sin. But the little fellow stuck to it, and said over and over again: "There was not any man there. God did throw the cent down to me from heaven."

His mother was greatly distressed and kept trying to get Richard to confess his sin and ask forgiveness. If she could not get him to do this, she thought she must punish him. But before she did so she talked with a young man who studied and slept in the front room on the second floor of her house. He was able and glad to explain the strange thing. He did not know that Richard had been forbidden to take such gifts, and one day sitting at his front window, when the little boy was playing below, he tossed a cent down to him without putting his own head in sight. The cent dropped and jingled on the pavement. Richard looked up and around and saw no person, and he honestly believed what he told his mother.

No doubt she was very thankful to be thus saved from doing cruel wrong to her dear, truthful boy. The mothers who read this will pray God to keep them from doing such a wrong to their children. But, children, dreadful as it would have been for little Richard to be punished for lying, when he had told the real honest truth, it would have been even more dreadful if he had told a lie and deceived his mother. Do you not think so!—Church at Home and Abroad.

A Sultan's Kind Reply.

The sultan of Morocco is so often rude and unamnerly to strangers that I take pleasure in recording here the kindly way in which he received the request of a German prince who some years ago came to Tangier for his health. He was suffering from rheumatism and brought with him his equipages. The first day he attempted to drive up and down the Malabar beach he was stopped by the soldiers and forbidden to drive any farther again in the city. He immediately appealed to the sultan, who wrote back the following answer and had it dispatched from Fez to Tangier by a particularly swift courier: Yes, he would be delighted to have this stranger prince drive about his city of Tangier, and he gave him permission so to do, but with one condition. Every time he drove abroad he would please take the wheels off his carriage, otherwise he might run over and seriously hurt some of the little children in the streets.—Stephen Bonsal in Century.

Edwin Booth's Generosity.

The late Edwin Booth's unostentatious generosity was exemplified in a characteristic way when the birthday of his physician came around. This physician, in addition to having been unremitting in his attention to the tragedian's physical condition, was his friend. At a little supper given in honor of the occasion a magnificent punch bowl was brought in and set before the doctor. He read the inscription, which stated the name of the donor, and was about to thank Mr. Booth, when the latter quietly suggested that the cover be taken off. It was done, and a check for $1,500 was found inside.

"That's to make the punch with," said Mr. Booth, with a smile. The punch bowl had cost $1,200.—New York Herald.

One Fact About the Truth.

The great advantage of the truth is that you didn't make it, and so are not in any way responsible for it. It can take care of itself, or, if not, so much the worse for the facts. It is very strange that among the arguments in favor of truth telling enumerated in books for the young no one has ever thought to bring out this one of its superior labor saving qualities.—Kate Field's Washington.

Not Practicable Here.

At Copenhagen a young woman who seized a thief and held him until the police came was presented with a diamond brooch and a flattering letter of thanks from the director of police and received an offer of marriage from a well known journalist. Women thief catchers are so numerous in this country that it has been suggested that it would bankrupt the police department to attempt to reward them all, not to mention exhausting the supply of marriageable journalists.—New York Sun.

Cucumber Snakes.

Down in Miles River neck, Talbot county, there is a spot where the average Chinese would delight to dwell. It is a place where Chinese cucumbers grow to an enormous size. This vegetable, however, assumes sometimes a shape which frightens the natives of the neighborhood, in spite of the fact that Talbot is a local option county. The cucumber grows long and slim, and at times twists itself into coils resembling a snake. A man going from Easton the other day to Miles River ferry, in passing a little clearing in the woods, noticed a green looking object in a patch of vegetables, and he got over the fence to make a closer examination. He almost fainted.

Another citizen came along soon afterward. The first man had seen a Kanczy Hanks gait. When accosted, he said to his friend, "Been bit by a snake; woods full of 'em." Citizen No. 2 persuaded the frightened man to go back, and upon examination the snake proved to be a Chinese cucumber about 27 inches long, which in the course of growth had twisted itself up in the form of a snake.—Baltimore American.

Walter Besant in Ireland.

While Mr. Besant was at Queens-town on his way to America he left the Etruria long enough to take a ride on a jaunting car. He says: The drivers and the sellers of lace and of strawberries are more Irish than anything you ever saw in Ireland. Says a wayfarer—an artless son of the soil—to the driver, "Tis the top o' th' marnin' to ye, Pat." How beautifully Irish! How poetical! "Pat," asks the doubter, "if you passed that man with no visitors on your car would he say, 'The top o' th' marnin' to you,' or would he say 'Marnin, Pat'?" The driver laughs. "Marnin," he would say, or nothin' at all." Quite so. It is a poetical race.

In Childhood's Happy Days.

Among the incidents of childhood that stand out in bold relief as our memory reverts to the days when we were young, none are more prominent than severe sickness. The young mother vividly remembers that it was Chamberlain's Cough Remedy that cured her croup, and in turn administered it to her offspring all ways with the best results. For sale by Edwin Ross.

SUMMONS.

IN THE CIRCUIT COURT OF THE State of Oregon, for Columbia County.

LESLIE GRAHAM, Plaintiff,

WILLIAM GRAHAM Defendant.

To William Graham, the above-named defendant: In the name of the State of Oregon, you are hereby required to appear and answer to the complaint filed against you in the above entitled suit in the above named court, on or before the first day of the term of said court, next following, to-wit: the 23rd day of October, 1893, and if you fail to appear and answer said complaint, for want thereof plaintiff will take a decree against you dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between you and the plaintiff, and granting custody of the minor child, Mary Ella Graham, and permitting plaintiff to resume her maiden name, Leslie McDonald.

This Summons is published pursuant to an order of the Court, commencing at 10 o'clock of the day of January, 1893, and publication of six
