If some grocers urge another baking powder upon you in place of the "Royal," it is because of the greater profit upon it.

This of itself is evidence of the superiority of the "Royal." To give greater profit the other must be a lower cost powder, and to cost less it must be made with cheaper and inferior materials, and thus, though selling for the same, give less value to the consumer.

To insure the finest cake, the most wholesome food, be sure that no substitute for Royal Baking Powder is accepted

Nothing can be substituted for the Royal Baking Powder and give as good results.

Many eccentricities are pardoned in musical geniuses, especially by those who do not suffer from them. Unfortunately the object of a musician's wrath is quite apt to be unable to appreciate why he has offended.

I remember having twice re narked it to Ivan. On the second occasion the shadow came just as we ware replighting our troth and naming the day. I started, considerably frightened

It may be a fault, but it was born in me. Even when I was a child my old nurse used to tell me tales of strange gnomes and hobgoblins, saying that they swarm-ed about us, and the lesson seems to have followed me. So do not chide me!"

His answer was that which he always gave when I pleaded for grace.

As it was his custom to confide all of his little adventures to me, he found it quite in his turn of fancies one evening to relate a little incident that had that morning leaped into his life. It hapened fully a fortnight after my receipt of Olef's letter. Ivan had returned home long after his usual hour.

"What kept you so long, Ivan?" I asked as he came down to dinner.

"A most peculiar circumstance, my darling Cesca," he answered. "I was passing along Broadway, near Caral street, to my office when a young man met me. He carried a traveler's bag in his hand and had evidently just arrived from a journey. As our eyes clashed he stopped suddenly, shocked, it seemed, by a momentary pang in his head—vertigo it looked like to me—threw up his hand, quickly passed his fingers over his brow, clutched at his throat as if he would tear open his collar to relieve a strangling sensation, and losing consciousness he reeled and fell. As he came to the ground I supported him, and with the aid of a passerby we carried him to a little shop in Canal street. But as he did ot survive I had him conveyed to the "But that did not keep you all day.

"How could I? He had not come to his senses when I left him.' "But he must have carried papers?"
"If he did they were locked in his bag."

"How old was he! "Perhaps five-and-twenty."

"American?" "A foreigner, I fancy."

"A foreigner!" I cried. My head reeled. "What if it had been—but such nonsense! It could not have been Olef! You know Olef, of course! You were born next door to him, or he to you. rather.

Ivan Trolsky:

Six—As I have failed to get an answer to my letter to Mile. Cesca Melin, I have my fears that she might not have received it. I believe that she still remains in America. If you should see her kindly say that I made no effort to arrange her business affairs, and that her securities still remain with her solicitors. My bride and I start for a tour of Norway to morrow. Please give my best wishes to Mile. Melin, for whom I hope the richest of life's blessings. Most sincerely.

And so I dried my eyes and set another seal of hate upon my heart, to lock out forever the image of him who in my girl days I had learned to love!

CHAPTER V.

"Olef !" The sun upon the third Sunday in June had gold tinged nature's sweetest garb. I have never witnessed a more perfect dawn. And it was the beauty "that morning that caused Ivan to invite Irene and me to take a run over the Palisades. Ivan had been making a day of it every Sabbath for a month past, and his descriptions of the scenes had so awakened us to the anticipation of a jolly outing that Irene and I gladly consented to go.

Ten o'clock found us high upon the cliffs overlooking the grand old Hudson. It must have been an hour past midday when a cloud, a mere dot, appeared like a freckle upon the face of the sun. A nervous breeze sprang up, more ac-tive than the calm, fanning wind of the morning. The cloud cast a shadow upon the treetop, and for a moment its limbs formed the outlines of a double cross upon the white cloth beneath our little banquet. I started as one out of a dream and looked at Ivan. My face must have been as colorless as the spread,

"A strange trait, that, with the Swedish people," he added. "They swear by signs. Why, spon my word, Cesca, if you go on like this you will be telling us that you see some of those funny little men popping out of the rocks yonder, akin to those that your Swedish peasants declare dwell in the forest. And while I think about it, Rip Van Winkle's little

The imps of evil seemed to rise out of the very earth beneath our feet. Agents of fury and warning dangled from the sky. A brilliant flash of lightning crossed the scene, quickly followed by a crash of thunder. I clung to Irene, who was quaking with fright. The flash had told me that Ivan was deathly pale.
"Too late to move now!" was all that he could say.

But the woman only quickened her pace, which we discov-ered by the frequent flashes of light. Faster and faster she ran toward us. Irene, becoming inconsolable, rushed off to the nearest cafe. The woman was now upon us! For an instant a bright flash illuminated the spot. I looked; I saw a face. Great God! Vera!

"Ivan!" I cried. "Do you see! A spirit! Her spectre! Vera's ghost!"

The man strove to speak. His tongue was lashed to the roof of his mouth. He noved-confronted her, the phantom ike figure, as a daredevil might face a harbinger of death! "At last!" the woman cried

"As who agreed?" Ivan cried.

"You, Ivan Trolsky, my husband, and I, Vera, your wife!" she answered, as her hot temper fired her. "Yes, as we agreed! I have crossed your path a score of times. Under the park tree I heard you plight your troth. In the lover's seat I have heard your passionate words of love. I have watched and waited patiently, believing that you but schemed as we had promised. But now you have gone too far. Your words are no longer empty sounds. You love that girl! Ah, leny it not! Jeal-ousy drives me to confess it! You loved her! I am here to avenge the wrong! You would have wrought a tragedy-till your mind turned topsy-turvy, and then you would have wed the girl, deceiving her into the belief that I was dead! But now it is my turn! We will end it here! Aye, and with a tragedy indeed! Now pay for your sins!" And with the stout arms of a maniac Vera bound him in his tracks; then with giant force she pushed him to the cliff. My heart stood still! The ground whirled! At last Ivan found his speech.

Story of a Young Man and a Girl.

This is a story of a young man and a girl.

The girl was pretty. The young man thought she was the most beautiful being he had ever seen.

He met her in the house of a friend in the village in which she lived. He was dazed. He followed her around the entire evening. He tried to make an impression, and when he came away he thought he had impressed her, and he was in the seventh heaven of gelight.

He came back to Buffalo. He talked of He came back to Buffalo. He talked of the girl by day and dreamed of her by night. Business kept him from going again to the village which held the radiant being within its corporate limits. He did not know her well enough to write to her. He moped. His eyes grew dim. He was as sorely strick.

His eyes grew dim. He was as sorely stricken with love as a man could be and maintain anything like his mental poise.

Last week one day he heard that she was

MAN'S INHUMANITY TO HIMSELF.

MAN'S INHUMANITY TO HIMSELP.

The most inhuman outrages, outrages which would disgrace the savage, man perpetrates upon his own system by swallowing drastic pur gatives which convulse his stomach, agonize his intestines and weaken his system. Many people constantly do this under the impression that medicaments only which are violent is their action, and particularly eatherties, are of any avail. Irreparable in jury to beath is wrought under this mistaken idea. The laxarive which most nearly approaches the beneficent action of nature is Hostetter's stomach Bitters, which is painless, but thorough, and inciporates the intestinal runsi instead of weakening and irritating it. The liver and the stomach start in the beingu discipline instituted by this comprehensive medicine, whose healthful influence is felt throughout the system. Malarious, rhemmatic, kidney and nervous compaints succumb to it.
