The Oregon Mist

United States and County Official Paper.

FRIDAY, JUNE 29, 1894.

In case the next legislature finds trouble in agreeing upon Dolph's successor, we suggest the name of Judge F. A. Moore for senatorial honors.

THE next legislature should not spend so much time in making laws as in trimming up those already in existence. The pruning knife could be successfully used on many laws now on the statute books.

THE republicans of California in state covention last week nominated M. M. Estee for governor upon a free silver and woman suffrage platform. It must take the news a long time to travel from Oregon to California.

WITH the nervous temperament of the French people it is hard to predict what the outcome of President Carnot's death will be. There is already bad blood existing between France and Italy, and this may result in difficulty between the two powers.

IT has been suggested that the only way Governor Pennoyer will ever reach the United States senate is to organize a company of wealers and march upon Washington. Why not organize the band of cut-throats he turned out of the penitentiary a few days ago to act as an escort.

THAT times are hard and money scarce cannot be disputed. But if, instead of persistently complaining, the people who most feel the depression would save their spare cash instead of spending it going about from place to place agitating, and encouraging idleness, their wants might be, at least, partially supplied.

OREGON has outlived its present constitution and should have a new one. There are many things embodied in our constitution which were appropriate for the state when that document was framed that are not practicable at the present time. There is but one way to remedy the evil and that is by a constitutional convention, which we believe should be authorized at an early date.

THE assassination of President Carnot, at Lyons, France, on Sunday evening, tends to somewhat refresh in the minds of Americans that this country has suffered the same disgrace twice within the past thirty years. It also stimilates precaution against the more vicious classes of people bordering upon anarchy, abroad in our land. As has already been said there is but one way to handle red-handed assassins, and instead of calling a physician to pass upon their sanity, he should be called only for the purpose of holding a post mortem examination upon their worthless carcasses. The insanity dodge has been worn threadbare long ago. The law against carrying concealed weapons is very strict in France, yet, notwithstanding the law, there, as well as in the United States, cold-blooded murders are committed frequently, and upon persons well guarded, and the courts are asked to allow the culprits to go unpunished upon a plea of insanity.

THERE is one occasion to take place in a few days, the commemoration of American Independence, which will not be partisan. On that occasion no politics is known except Americanism. The loyal people of this great country can mingle together rejoicing in the triumph achieved by our forefathers and propagated by their descendants. The mention of the Fourth of July kindles anew in the hearts of Americans loyal patriotism and develops qualities for American citizenship. The framers of the Declaration of Independence little thought one hundred and eighteen years ago that this year its existence would be celebrated by sixty-five millions of people. How true it is that then they "builded wiser than they knew." No fond imagination could have fostered the slightest hopes of what was to be the result of the foundation which they were at that time laying. But the result was seen by all nations, tongues and kindred of the world, and today as a result of bravery and patriotism of those wise heads America rejoices in the grandest nation in the world. Next Wednesday should be the proudest day in the life of every American citizen.

THE experience of the country in the re-election of presidents has not been very satisfactory. It has generally, if not invariably, turned out that the man thus honored has failed to do as well during his second term as he did during his first. The case of Cleveland is one directly and suggestively in point. His first term gave him a hold upon his party and the country, that he was able to retain after a defeat in the next election; and he was nominated a third time in accordance with the prevailing opinion that he was the strongest man for a candidate and the one who would make the best president. The feeling with regard to him today on the part of those who nominated and elected him is one of disappointment and antagonism. His second administration has been a misfortune to his party. He has repudiated its platform and conspired with its enemies to defeat its purposes. In all important respects, he has been a law unto himself, regardless of the consequences to the political element which he is supposed to represent. His course, in short, has been that of a man realizing that another term is out of the question, and therefore taking no pains to please his party and increase his popularity. So long as the hope of re-election inspired him, he was devoted to his duties, and endeavored to win public favor; but now that such an incentive is absent, he appears to have adopted a different policy. There can be no doubt as to the wholesome influence of the hope of a second term upon a president of any party; and it is equally true that when the second term is obtained its effect is apt to be of a contrary nature.

THE question as to what property should and what should not be taxed is causing no end of discussion at the present time. We fail to see why any evidence of wealth, unless appropriated entirely to the public, should not bear its just proportion of the burdens of taxation. Churches, sectarian schools and universities, which are in existence as a business investment for those particular denominations should be taxed as well as a corporation organized for transportation. Both are in a sense conducive of the public welfare, yet both are wealth producing enterprises, enjoyed only by those who can afford to patronize them. The privilege of exemption placed upon church property (the church edifice itself being excepted) has been abused by the churches purchasing and owning outside real estate for rent as an investment and claiming exemption from taxation on it as belonging to the church. In the state of Oregon and in every state there are millions of dollars worth of property not paying tax under the guise of this kind of exemption. We believe the system is wrong. It may be right to exempt the edifice itself but nothing further.

A VOICE OF THE STORM.

Listen, my children, and you shall hear
Of an evening ride of two girls dear;
On the second of June, eighteen ninety-four,
They scolded the mare and their hair they tore
'Til they breathlessly reached the big barn door.

They said to their friends, "If the storm-cloud reach
From East, or from South, this town tonight,
Don't burn a lamp in that shackley house
At the risk of your lives, but a candle light,
And we, on the rocky prairie will be
Riding, singing, jogging along,
For the country folk, who own the barn."

Meanwhile, their friend, through alley and street
Listens and watches with eager ears,
'Til in the silence 'round the corner he hears
The sound of their voices, the tramp of feet,
And the measured click that's hard to beat.
Trotting down where the road leaves the shore,
Then he went back with a heart so light,
Up the wooden stairs with stealthy tread,
To his cosy chamber overhead.

Previously impatient to take the ride,
Wrapt and hooded with haughty pride,
Along the street rode the girls so dear.
Watching the street on either side
Somewhat impetuous in fear of rain,
They gaze on the landscape far and near
And reach and tighten the driving-rein.

But mostly they watch with eager search
The brassy cloud beyond the church,
As it rose above the town, on the hill
Lonely, and spectral, and sombre, and still.
And lo! as they look on the belfry height
A glimmer, and then a chain of light!
They hang to the buggy, the rein they turn,
Nor linger to gaze, but full on their sight,
A second glimmer and chain of light!

A hurry of hoofs through the timber, now reached,
A shape for a moment, a bulk as they dart,
And beneath from the pebbles, in passing, a spark
Struck out by the mare that flies fearless and fleet.
That was all! and yet as the bridge they now sight
The fate of poor Nellie was riding that night,
And the spark struck out by the mare in her flight
Kindled the land into flame with its heat.

It was four by the village clock
When they crossed the bridge out of town;
It was quarter past by the kinsfolk' clock
When they reached the door of the now grief-stricken barn.
They saw the gilded weathercock
Swim in the twilight as they passed,
And the schoolhouse windows blank, and bare,
Gaze at them with a spectral glare,
As if they already stood aghast
At the bloody work they would look upon.

And so rode the dear girls just ahead of the storm,
And so to each other went the cry of alarm
'Til they reached the door of the aforesaid barn.
With a cry of hurry and one of fear.
They detached the mare with fastenings queer,
Which they led to the farther end of the barn
Away from the buggy to prevent any harm.

You'll know the rest when this you hear read,
How the two dear girls both broke and fled;
How the kinsfolk gave them call after call
From over the fence and farmyard wall,
Each with her purchase from village store bought,
Consisting of sugar and granite-iron pot;
With skirts to their knees across the lane they both sped,
Not knowing their troubles were just ahead.

They reached the voice which was all afright
For the gloom had made the hour as night.
The rain fell in torrents, the hurricane blew,
So out of the tall, aged farmhouse they flew;
Then crossing the porch to emerge again
Under the trees at the turn of the road
They reached in safety a low apple shed,
When the thunder broke with a crash o'erhead.

As all was as dark as a dungeon within,
They ventured to peep at the barn of their kin;
When, what to their wondering eyes should appear
But that the barn of their kin had taken a shear,
They forgot all their fright—of themselves had no care—
Their thoughts were of naught but that fine borrowed mare.
They started, then halted, then started, again—
Oh! for some men! for some men! for some men!

The cry was soon answered,
"Some men" heard the call,
And with ax and saw they ran to the stall
Fearing the poor beast was crushed by the fall.
Quite fortunate (?) Nellie was wedged in between
What the men were chopping from each side—a beam—
While the dear girls with 'kerchiefs made a pitiful scene.

They soon led her out with bruised shoulder and knee,
And several scratches that were frightful to see;
A kind neighbor led her slowly off to his barn
Where he would care for her 'til after the storm.
They then went to the buggy,—the dash was
Bent down by a board that had fallen across,
Which gave the whole thing the expression
Of a boy, whom a good dog, had lost;
But soon some strong hand bent the board up,
When it lost the expression of boy and lost pup.

When the male-kin came home
And from tales of fright did refrain,
They were called idiots, lunatics, beastly insane,
But forthwith the kin, who owned the barn,
Got on his horse and rode to the town
To tell the owner of Nellie his barn had blown down;
And in a voice of excitement did shout
As he thought the chief news—
"The dear girls got out!"
Said the owner of Nellie, "Confound that wild pair!
But why don't you tell me what became of the mare?"

Next morning as soon as the light did appear,
They arose from their beds—
Doned their fine and drabbled gear—
They borrowed a cart, pony, umbrella, gum coat,
Instead of top-buggy, fine mare and plush robe,
And drove back to town.

As had been their custom, they did not alight
At the door of their home,
But drove straight to the barnyard
Where they met their dazed groom.
And so ends the tale of the dear girls so tall
But "A haughty spirit before a fall."

Georgia's "Razor-Back" Lawyers.

Atlanta is afflicted with a number of razor-back lawyers. The grand jury of Fulton county regard them as festiferous individuals, and would like to find some way of ridding the community of them. They don't wait for business to come to them, but hunt up excuses for bringing lawsuits, and succeed in annoying the business community. The razor-back lawyer is not only a great nuisance to a community but he is a positive injury to it. Out of little quarrels and business differences that would never get into court if it were not for him, he manages to make a living. His aim is not to help settle disputes that could be settled without litigation, but to stir up strife. He hunts up people who think they have been damaged, and gains permission to bring suits in their names. The greater part of what he recovers, if he recovers anything at all, goes into his pocket. He is a breeder of strife, and thrives on the litigation he encourages.—Savannah, (Ga) News.

PATRIOTISM A VIRTUE.

MIST, OR., June 22.—[EDITORS MIST.]—I am pleased to see the article on this subject from your correspondent at Clifton. It is something new to see a line in defense of the rights of the preservers of the life of our government. The treatment some of our patriotic people have endured at the hands of populists of the foreign element, would lead one to doubt their own personal safety. Have these aliens forgotten that allegience to the government of the United States is one of the conditions on which they obtained citizenship? If actions are to be taken as evidence, the only virtue they see is in combining to overthrow the constitution and the laws they are sworn to support. Have they forgotten that the quarter section of land they now live upon and call their own, cost the soldier the sacrifice of his health, and destined him to suffer until death brings relief? If we could believe this to be the result of a deficient memory even then a reminder would not be amiss, but the facts forbid any such conclusion. How many American citizens (native born) as well as soldiers, are deprived of the blessing of peace where they chance to be among a foreign element? How many natives would there be among the laboring class of our people who could not find employment at good wages if these foreigners were transported? The law for the naturalization of aliens requires them to prove a good moral character and that they are well disposed to the good order and happiness of our people. To all who possess these qualities of character we extend the hand of welcome to brotherhood and all the blessings of our land, but to those whose character and lives do not possess these qualities of character, we have no use for either in Coxey's army or on the public domain. Let us have a court of inquiry instituted to investigate the fraud that has been practiced by false testimony, and deal with all whose real character does not entitle them to citizenship the same as Chinese not registered. Let a thorough work of sweeping be done and we will hence forth be no longer compelled to resort to Judge Lynch for a Mafia in Louisiana or the scaffold of Chicago for anarchy. The maimed soldier will not be robbed of his pension or the treasury of the United States be opened to Coxeyites. The peace of home will be restored, prosperity will return, purity of American institutions will be maintained and loyalty to our government will be esteemed alike by the well disposed foreigner and native American. Heaven itself could not be at peace or its purity maintained if it had all its gates opened to the bad as well as the pure and holy. A bill to cover these principles as near as we could write it has been sent to our representatives at Washington, and we are assured that it shall go before the committee on foreign relations at its next meeting, and if the Coxey movement induces its passage (for this reason only) we will say, hurrah for Coxey's army!

Are You Insured?

If not, now is the time to provide yourself and family with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy as an insurance against any serious results from an attack of bowel complaint during the summer months. It is almost certain to be needed and should be procured at once. No other remedy can take its place or do its work. Twenty-five and fifty cent bottles for sale by Edwin Ross.
