Splendid Tribute

THE SAN FRANCISCO BOARD OF HEALTH URGES THE USE OF THE Royal Baking Powder.

The magnificent tribute of the San Francisco Board of Health to the great purity and wholesomeness of the Royal Baking Powder greatly disturbs the manufacturers of the lower grade powders. Their envious publications, however, cannot break the force of this unsolicited and unbiassed high medical endorsement. Attached is a certified copy of their original report, with the signatures of the members of the Board in fac-simile:

We, the members of The Board of Health of the City and County of San Francisco, cordially approve and recommend the Royal Baking Powder. It is absolutely pure and healthful, composed of the best ingredients of the highest strength and character.

In our judgment it is impossible to make a purer or stronger Baking Powder than the "Royal."

WELL-KNOWN PEOPLE

PROMINENT PERSONAGES FROM FAR AND NEAR.

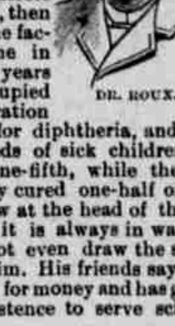
People Who Have Gained Distinction in Their Particular Sphere in Life, Both in This Country and Abroad—William L. Strong.

The issue of the municipal campaign in New York attracted universal attention this year. Colonel William L. Strong was the nominee for Mayor of the non-partitan, anti-Tammany citizens. He is a wealthy business man, and has a high reputation for integrity and ability. He is a Republican, but was the only member of that party on the ticket except the candidate for Coroner, the others being Democrats. Colonel Strong was born in Richland county, O., in 1837, and was a resident of Ohio until 1853. Then he removed to New York, and re-entered the dry-goods business, in which he has been very successful. He is also President of the Central National Bank, a director in the Erie Railroad Company, in the New York Life Insurance Company, in the Mercantile Trust Company, in the Hanover Insurance Company and other corporations. He is a man of decided views and great force of character.

WM. L. STRONG.

Dr. Roux.

The eyes of the world are upon Dr. Roux, whose new method for curing diphtheria has met with such great success in Paris, the city of his labors. Dr. Roux is not yet 40 years of age, but he has long been known for his valuable work in the Pasteur Institute. He has been the assistant of Pasteur for fifteen years, and was but an unknown student when chosen for the responsible place by Vulpian, then at the head of the faculty of medicine in Paris. For two years he has been occupied with the preparation of his new cure for diphtheria, and out of many hundreds of sick children he has lost only one-fifth, while the old methods scarcely cured one-half of the cases. He is now at the head of the institute; but, as it is always in want of funds, he does not even draw the small salary allotted him. His friends say that he cares nothing for money and has given up his whole existence to serve science and humanity.



DR. ROUX.

Hugh J. Grant.

Much interest centers around Hugh J. Grant, who for the fourth time was candidate of Tammany Hall for Mayor of New York. He was beaten for the office in 1884, elected in 1888, re-elected in 1892, and had been persuaded to accept the nomination again. Hugh J. Grant was born in New York 42 years ago. His father was a wealthy liquor dealer, who died when the subject of this sketch was a child. Hugh J. Grant was educated in New York, and studied law in the Columbia Law School. Soon after being admitted to practice he entered politics, was an Alderman from 1881 to 1884, and was elected Sheriff in 1885. Of late he has devoted most of his time to the real estate business. He is fond of horses, and he is a familiar figure at the race tracks. He has never married.

HUGH J. GRANT.

Raymond MacDonald.

It is believed that Raymond MacDonald, the seventeen-year-old boy who recently defeated Sanger, Tyler and Bliss at Williamsport, Pa., is the coming cycle champion. He is a really great cyclist and one of the foremost among the cotorie of very fast and promising youths who have come to the front this season. He is a boyish-appearing fellow in the face, but is wonderfully developed physically for a youth of 17. He started out this season as a pure amateur or Class A man, and soon had swept the board in that department of cycle-racing. Then he went into Class B division. His first race in this class was a ten-mile just at New York, in which he beat Titus. His forte is in the shorter distances under one mile.

RAY MACDONALD

Edward M. Shepard.

Edward M. Shepard of Brooklyn, who was mainly responsible for the naming of a third ticket in New York, is of general interest. He was born in New York city in 1850, and it will surprise many to know that his father, Lorenzo B. Shepard, was once a Grand Sachem of Tammany Hall. Lorenzo B. Shepard died when his son was but 6 years old. Young Shepard then attended the public schools in New York, was sent for a year to Oberlin College in Ohio, and in 1861 graduated from the College of the City of New York. He then began the study of law, was admitted to the bar and has since practiced his profession. His active work for the purification of Brooklyn has made him well known, but it is in his capacity as an organizer that he becomes most interesting at the present time. He is a bachelor, and lives alone in a Brooklyn mansion.

THE BURDEN BEARER.

There is a big insulated wire in telegraphy which transmits the bulk of daily intelligence; there is a big insulated nerve in the human system which can bear the burden of more pain than all the rest of the nerves combined, and is known as the sciatic nerve. Sometimes the wire is cut to cut off its current; sometimes the surgeon's knife is used to cut the nerve to relieve excruciating pain. But there is one thing which avoids this radical treatment; one cure which penetrates to the pain-spot, and sciatica has been cured almost without fail by the use of St. Jacobs Oil. It reaches misery's seat and dethrones it. Thus attacked and routed in its hidden ambuscade, pain seldom returns to annoy. The great remedy does its work well.

The Wit of the "Baste."

An American landed from the steamer at Queenstown in company with an English politician belonging to the Conservative party.

As they drove up from the custom house the American commented on the sad faces of the people on the sidewalks, differing greatly from Lever's typical jolly Irishman.

"Yes," said the Englishman roughly, "Pat has lost all of his intelligence, if indeed he ever had any."

"Shure, sor," said the driver of the jaunting car quickly, "I'm thinkin the wit has gone to the brute bastes, thin. Look at me mare, Maggie, here. Yisterday a jontleman, lean an long legged, ran out of the hottel.

"'Bring up your car,' says he. 'I must reach the station in three minutes!'

"But Maggie planted her legs apart, an not an inch wud she move. Whippin's an cusses was alike to her. She stud like iron. He hed to run for it. None of Maggie's help did he get.

"Thin a leddy steps out swate an soft spoken. 'I must ketch the train in a few minutes,' says she. 'Kin I hev your car?' 'The car is yours, mem,' says I, 'but Maggie's gone mad. Not a fut will she budge.'

"Wid that all at once Maggie prances ready to start, noddin an smilin at us. I druv her like mad to the station, an while I wuz mintionin afterward to a fri'nd her quare conduct says he:

"'Do yez know who the lean man wuz?'

"'I do not,' says I.

"''Twas Mr. Balfour himself,' says he. 'Maggie knowed him!'

"So, ye see, sor," continued the driver, with a knowing leer at the Englishman behind him, "the ontilligince is gone out of Paddy, as ye said, into the bastes. The man's willin to be druv by the Tories, but the brutes is not."

The English Tory laughed and tipped Pat liberally. "The brutes have not all the wit," he said.—Youth's Companion.

Dancing In Germany.

The German manner of dancing interests the American. In the first place, it is much faster and is done with more hopping and less gliding than ours. The dances are practically the same in step, but in the waltz the Germans never reverse, nor do they take a forward, back or even a side step. The couples simply whirl round and round. When the music strikes up, the couples start and go around the room whirling, one behind the other, in line. There is none of the graceful intermingling of couples one sees in an American dance. Since there is no reversing, the couples soon get dizzy, and one often sees a gentleman and lady dancing both with eyes tight shut to prevent the dizziness becoming too much for their equilibrium. A gentleman usually stops after a few rounds, but does not let go of his partner until he is sure that she is not so dizzy that she will fall.—Berlin Cor. New York Post.

Going to See the Circus.

When the main line of the Northern Pacific was finished to Garrison junction in western Montana, a reporter of a Helena paper noticed a dilapidated prairie schooner, covered with burs and alkali dust, and loaded with a cargo of towheaded youngsters.

"Going back east?" inquired the reporter.

"No. We heard there is going to be a circus in Helena this week," said the proprietor of the strange vehicle. "I own a mine on Stony creek, 80 miles south of here."

"Eighty miles! Why, you must have had a rough trip!"

"Pretty tough, but the children cried and teased till I had to do it," said the pater familias. "As soon as ever I can make a stake I'm going to move where a person can see a monkey without having to kill his horse about it."—Philadelphia Times.

A Bit of Classic Pulpit Wit.

Congressman McKenney, who ran as the nominee for governor of New Hampshire, rarely gets the worst of it in repartee. Mr. McKenney was a parson before he became a congressman and can deliver a sermon or make a speech with equal ease. With him originated one of the classic stories of pulpit wit. During a canvass Mr. McKenney was interrupted in the midst of a public prayer by a man who persisted in shouting "Louder!" Mr. McKenney could not ignore the call, so he merely looked at the interrupter and coolly said: "I wasn't addressing you, sir. I was addressing the Almighty."—San Francisco Argonaut.

The official reports show that no baking powder received an award over the Royal at the Chicago World's Fair.

The judge of awards on baking powder, Dr. H. W. Wiley, writes that the claim of another company to having received the highest award is false; that no such award was given to it.

The Royal Baking Powder is the purest and strongest baking powder made, and has received the highest award at every fair, wherever exhibited in competition with others.

Candy Making and Candy Eating.

"I am told," said a cynical gentleman, "that confectionery is made, put up and handled entirely by girls and women, but I do not believe it. From what I know of women, I infer that, if the preparation of confectionery were completely in their hands, none of it would ever reach the public. It would all be eaten up." This cynical person, like most cynics in their judgments, ignored an important characteristic of human nature. It is this, that liberty is often one of the best means of regulation.

In most establishments where confectionery is manufactured, the female employees, when they begin their services, are told to eat as much candy as they like. Their employers even show a solicitous interest that they shall consume as much as possible.

"You are doing very well," said a superintendent in a candy making shop to a girl who had been in his employ for a day or two, "except in one respect—you don't eat enough candy. Unless you can eat more we shall have no confidence in you."

Thus encouraged, the girl ate a great quantity of various sorts of confectionery the next day, and never wished to eat any more as long as she lived.

This is the secret of the free permission. A new employee, set down in the midst of so much sweetness and free to help herself, consumes too much for her palate and digestion. Disgust follows satiety, and from that time forthwith the candy maker is content to let her confections pass through her hands without tasting them.—Youth's Companion.

His Genuine Last Words.

"Fred Howard tells a good story of an incident in Georgia," said the lawyer. "He was in one of the Confederate cemeteries near Atlanta and saw a fine monument that had been erected over the grave of a lieutenant who had been killed in battle. After giving the name and usual dates the inscription closed with the sentiment, 'His last words were, "It is sweet to die for one's country."' As Howard was looking at the monument a tall, bronzed southerner came up, and Fred remarked that it was a very touching sentiment and wondered if the man had really said that as he died. The reply was: 'Well, not exactly. You see, I was at his side, and he just said, "This is tough, to go all through the war and be plugged by a Tar Heel at last."'"—Kansas City Journal.

of all cases of consumption can, if taken in the earlier stages of the disease, be cured. This may seem like a bold assertion to those familiar only with the means generally in use for its treatment; as, nasty cod-liver oil and its filthy emulsions, extract of malt, whiskey, different preparations of hypophosphites and such like palliatives.

Although by many believed to be incurable, there is the evidence of hundreds of living witnesses to the fact that, in all its earlier stages, consumption is a curable disease. Not every case, but a large percentage of cases, and we believe, fully 98 per cent. are cured by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, even after the disease has progressed so far as to induce repeated bleedings from the lungs, severe lingering cough with copious expectoration (including tubercular matter), great loss of flesh and extreme emaciation and weakness.

Do you doubt that hundreds of such cases reported to us as cured by "Golden Medical Discovery" were genuine cases of that dread and fatal disease? You need not take our word for it. They have, in nearly every instance, been so pronounced by the best and most experienced home physicians, who have no interest whatever in misrepresenting them, and who were often strongly prejudiced and advised against a trial of "Golden Medical Discovery," but who have been forced to confess that it surpasses, in curative power over this fatal malady, all other medicines with which they are acquainted. Nasty cod-liver oil and its filthy "emulsions" and mixtures, had been tried in nearly all these cases and had either utterly failed to benefit, or had only seemed to benefit a little for a short time. Extract of malt, whiskey, and various preparations of the hypophosphites had also been faithfully tried in vain.

The photographs of a large number of those cured of consumption, bronchitis, lingering coughs, asthma, chronic nasal catarrh and kindred maladies, have been skillfully reproduced in a book of 160 pages which will be mailed to you, on receipt of address and six cents in stamps. You can then write those cured and learn their experience.

THE MAJOR'S FISH STORY.

Nobody Could Tell What Sort of a Fish It Was, but It Was a Whopper.

Major H. P. Ritzius, the United States recruiting officer here, tells a great fish story. It happened in 1870. "To begin at the beginning," said the major this morning, "in 1869 I was stationed at Ship island, in the gulf of Mexico. Colonel Bliss was in command of the post, and I was adjutant. In the summer eight monster fish appeared in the harbor. They would come quite close to the wharf and jump half out of the water. Several of the soldiers shot at them, and from the trail of blood they left on the water we knew they had been hit. Nevertheless they appeared again the next day. When fall came, they went away, but returned in the summer of 1870. Colonel Bliss expressed a desire that one of the fish should be caught.

"Accordingly the quartermaster, a couple of soldiers and myself started out in a small sailboat one morning. We had provided ourselves with harpoons, with plenty of rope attached. Pretty soon we sighted one of the fish and buried a harpoon in him. He immediately dived down and remained under water for some time. He was moving off, however, as we could tell by the way our line was paying out. Pretty soon he reappeared, and we sunk another harpoon in him. He dived again. This performance was repeated until we had eight harpoons in the fish. By this time we had been towed out 10 miles and were rapidly nearing the sea, which we could not face with our small boat.

"We disliked to let go the fish, however, as we could tell by his struggles he was nearly winded. When he came up again, we could see he was nearly dead, as he made but feeble efforts to get away. It was not long before the revenue cutter Wilderness, which was cruising near by, hove in sight and took us aboard. Our prize, which we should not have been able to tow in, was secured by ropes to the cutter and taken to the wharf. We managed to get it on one of the hand cars used to carry provisions from the wharf to the post and conveyed it to the barracks. There it was placed on a scaffolding and measured.

"The fish was 18 feet long, 15 feet wide and 6 feet through. This may sound 'fishy,' but those are actual measurements. We could not weigh the monster entire, but cut him up into pieces. He weighed 1,800 pounds in all. His mouth was 4 feet across and 3 feet deep. He had no teeth, so we supposed he lived on matter gathered in the water as he swam along. His flesh was not good to eat, but was of the same consistency as unrefined cod liver oil. There were but few bones in the body, as we could see where our bullets had gone entirely through it. I don't know if the shoal of fish appeared afterward, as we were ordered away that fall. We were unable to find out what species of fish it was. We sent one of the photographs to the Smithsonian institute at Washington, but none of the people there had ever heard of such a fish. He was broadest across what might be called the shoulders, attached to which were fins—floats, they might be more properly called—with which he propelled himself. I have often wondered what species of fish he was, but I suppose I shall never find out."—Rochester Post-Express.

Danger From Burns.

One of the most common forms of emergency cases met with in the family is a burn, of which children are often the victims. The vapor of steam escaping from a teakettle on the hob has great attraction for a young child, as has anything which is sparkling or vivid. We have known an infant just beginning to creep, and who had been left alone in the nursery for a few minutes, to be found on the nurse's return contentedly sucking the spout of the kettle on the hearth. Fortunately in this case the water was only moderately hot, and no great damage was done. But the infant might just as readily have inhaled a mouthful of live steam, with very serious consequences to life.

The danger to life from burns, whether these be from boiling water, steam or contact with heated metal, is in direct ratio to the extent of the surface involved and in inverse ratio to the age of the child. A small burn, even not larger than its hand, may cause death in a very young infant. Such a burn in a child of 10 years would be inconvenient and painful, but probably not fatal. Burns on the mucous surfaces—as, for instance, in the mouth, in the cavity of the nose or in the eye—are very much more serious than one involving a larger surface of the skin.—Childhood.

The Limit of Sustained Attention.

The average limit of sustained attention in an audience is about 20 minutes, and it is very difficult for a speaker to interest his hearers 30 minutes. It was not so in the old days when we had great orators, and it is not so now when an eloquent speaker has a message to deliver, but for the average talker 20 minutes is long enough.—Chautauquan.

An Eight-hour Day In England.

The 8-hour day, which is the aspiration of organized labor in this country, is to be made the subject of a practical experiment in the great iron works of Salford, near Manchester. The effort is to be made to reconcile the economic objections which have been held to be irreconcilable. That is, the workmen, who have been laboring 53 hours a week, are to endeavor to turn out an equal product by the labor of 48 hours. If by punctuality, energy and increased activity they can show this to be possible, the experiment will be a success, their wages will remain as now, and the 8-hour day will be established.—Boston Commonwealth.

An Old Settler Begins to Travel.

It is hardly in the west one would look for white people unacquainted with railroads and telegraphs, but Parson Quinn, the oldest settler in Garfield county, Washington, who went there 33 years ago, saw a railroad and took a ride on a train two weeks ago for the first time in his life. He has not been out of the state since he entered it in a prairie schooner. Two or three similar cases have been noted in the northwest within the past few months.—Chicago Herald.

A Boston paper recently contained an announcement that certain gentlemen had "filed a remonstrance to the proposed widening of Chestnut Hill avenue with the Brookline selectmen!"

HAUNTED!

A haunted house in these practical and unromantic days is something of a rarity, but an individual haunted with the idea that his ailment is incurable is a personage frequently met with. Disbelief in the ability of medicine to cure is only a mild form of monomania, although in some cases repeated failures to obtain relief from many different sources would almost seem to justify the doubt. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has demonstrated its ability to overcome dyspepsia, constipation, liver and kidney trouble, malarial complaints and nervousness, and its recorded achievements in the curative line ought at least to warrant its trial by any one troubled with either of the above ailments, even although his previous efforts to obtain remedial aid have been fruitless. Used with persistence, the Bitters will conquer the most obstinate cases.

Politics are full of uncertainties. To-day a man is on a stump and next week he may be all up a tree.

"She was completely prostrated and made very ill by his perfidy." "Did she recover?" "Yes; $10 a week temporary and $5,000 in final decree."

PREVENTION BETTER THAN CURE.

It is no easy thing to cure lung trouble when it once fairly gets a hold upon the system. It can easily be prevented by the use of ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS. Just as soon as any intimation of soreness about the lungs or stiffness of the joints appears, put on one of these plasters, and you will be sure to gain great advantage.

So also with rheumatism. A cold is a comparatively slight thing. The application of an ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTER to any part affected by it will not only relieve, but overcome it. If, however, the cold gets a firm hold on the joints and muscles, rheumatic pains are not so quickly overcome. To cure is good, to prevent is better.

BRANDRETH'S PILLS will relieve rheumatism.
