ST. HELENS, OREGON, NOV. 30.

OUT of twenty one governors elected at the late election only one democrat was successful.

We believe there is not two newspapers in the state but what are opposed to the change in school books.

The democratic candidate for governor in Texas was elected though his majority was 100,000 less than at the last election.

Even though times are very hard and depression on every hand, yet there are many things for which we should be thankful. If one will stop and reflect a moment they can pick them out with little difficulty.

The United States paid Germany in 1893 the sum of $9,475,000 for sugar, and the amount in 1894 will exceed $11,000,000. This is but a small fraction of the cash we send abroad for articles that, with a little encouragement, could soon be produced at home, every pound of it.

"OREGON understands her needs. She needs now more than ever before, the election of a senator with a clear head, undoubted courage, incorruptible integrity, and intimate knowledge of men and affairs."—Tribune. We have Mr. Fulton, Mr. Tongue, Mr. Hermann, Mr. Lowell; any of whom would fill the bill.

WHEN the new state officers assume their duties next January they should appoint new men as their assistants, clerks, etc., just as soon as possible. At the convention last spring none of the old hangers on stood any chance of securing a nomination, and now the people want a clean sweep all along the line.—Roseburg Plaindealer.

"THE Herald is a republican paper, and believes in the principles of the republican party. It believes in the republican principles of protection. It believes in free and unlimited coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1. It believes in nominating honest, patriotic citizens for legislative positions, and will never support any man who is a traitor to his country, or who shot at our flag."—Astoria Herald. The editor of the Herald is a member of the next legislature, and is one of that class of republicans whom the Oregonian says is not a republican. He is a man who has opinions of his own, however, and is not afraid to express them at all times.

THE great daily argues that since the friends of silver are represented in congress by Mitchell, Hermann and Ellis it would be but fair to send a senator this time who is opposed to silver. This is a fair sample of the arguments presented by that paper lately. Why court this division of strength among our national delegation. This line of reasoning would be admissible in selecting servants to perform certain well defined labor, and in which the spoils of office were the principal object. But in the selection of United States senator it isn't a case of simply revenue to the incumbent, neither has the labor to be performed been precisely designated by the people; consequently to send a divided delegation to congress would not terminate in successful or satisfactory legislation to either side. Such an argument condemns itself at a glance. If Oregon is to send a delegation divided against itself they may as well be kept at home.

THE GREATEST TIDAL WAVE.

The greatest of all the congressional landslides of the past are far exceeded by the mighty avalanche which has just taken place. When the democrats in 1874 changed a republican majority of 105 elected in 1872, in Grant's second canvass, to a lead of sixty for their side, they achieved a revolution which still stands as one of the marvels of our politics. A little less extensive, but still a notable overturn, was that which the democrats effected in 1882, when they displaced a republican majority of eleven, chosen with Garfield in 1880, by one of eighty-four of their own. More sweeping than that of 1882, but less so than that of 1874, was that by which the democrats changed a majority of seven, elected with Harrison in 1888, to a plurality of 148 for themselves in 1890.

But the impetus and altitude of the tidal wave of 1894 immensely exceed those of any revolution in a congressional election in the past. The plurality to be overcome was in the present instance many times greater than it was in 1882 or 1890, and almost as great as it was in 1874. It was ninety-two now in comparison with 105 then. The preponderance placed on the other side of the scale, however, is very much more than twice as great as it was at that time. While the democratic lead gained in 1874 was sixty, the republican lead over the democracy secured now will be between 165 and 170. This is the indication at the present writing, and the republican majority increases with each successive report from the doubtful districts.

If the wishes of republicans in general were consulted, the majority would not go beyond its present dimensions. It is an embarrassment of political wealth that the party is being burdened with. In this case it is the victors who are crying out, "Hold enough!" Not often is a good thing overdone, but there is danger that it may be in this case. The equilibrium between the parties is almost too seriously disturbed for the comfort even of the republicans. No such swing of the partisan pendulum ever occurred before. The shifting of the center of political gravity is more extreme and violent than ever was known before in the whole history of the country. It is a mighty and memorable transformation in the country's partisan elements and forces, and it is undoubtedly destined to stand for many years to come as the highwater mark of political tidal waves.

VERY BROAD ASSERTION.

The Pendleton Tribune says: "There is not a reputable republican paper in Oregon that is opposed to the re-election of Senator Dolph." From this line of reasoning (or bulldozing) every republican, democrat, or populist who may have other preferences for United States senator than Mr. Dolph, is disparaged (a very broad assertion, indeed) in the estimation of the Dolph organ at Pendleton.

The same paper also says: "Loyalty to the senator was made the test in the election in this state last June." The Tribune is mistaken on this point. It is a fact well remembered that in no part of the state did any candidate for the legislature or any other office dare declare himself in favor of Mr. Dolph. On the contrary in some instances the opposition to the senator was so great that legislative candidates found it necessary to declare themselves adversely to the senator, and in all parts of the state it was looked upon as dangerous to handle the senatorial question at all. While it is true the republicans received a very large majority, it is none the less true that majority would have been much larger had Mr. Dolph not been a candidate for re-election. But let it be remembered that there are other very able and worthy men in the state of Oregon of which fact the voters were assured from every rostrum in the state last spring. They have a right to expect those pledges will be made good, and if not, the party will not march to the tune of fifteen thousand majority two years hence.

THE COMMISSION'S WORK.

While in Pendleton a few days ago, Colonel J. B. Eddy, state railroad commissioner, was interviewed in regard to the effect of the commission and as to whether it was a financial benefit to the state. Mr. Eddy said: "During 1893, the amount of wheat hauled to Portland by the O. R. & N. from Umatilla county was 37,000 tons. We have estimates on the production for this year and find the cocones places it at 45,000 as the number of tons which the same railroad will haul to the seaboard. Last year we secured a reduction of 1/4 cent per hundred on wheat, and this year a further reduction of 1/4 cents per hundred, a total of 2 1/4 cents per hundred, or 45 cents per ton. On 45,000 tons this equals a total reduction of $20,250. Umatilla county pays one twentieth the taxes of Oregon, or $500 of the $10,000 annual expense in maintaining the commission, leaving $19,750 gained by this county through the commission. At least half as much more is carried to the Sound by the W. & C. R. and Northern Pacific, and to secure the carrying of this grain these roads are
