A BRIGHTER FUTURE.

Columbia county's financial condition is improving slowly but steadily. One great and perhaps the principal cause of the present indebtedness of the county is the fact that a great deal of money has been expended during the last few years in building bridges, and perhaps quite as much on roads. To do this naturally incurrs indebtedness very rapidly in a county whose taxable property is no more than it is here. It is not probable, however, that there will be urgent need of new bridges of any considerable dimensions for some time to come, and the county has already laid out a great many county roads which, with some short lines will suffice for many years. This has been a heavy drain on the treasury. Meantime improvements have gone steadily forward; homesteads that have heretofore not been taxable have been patented and are now subject to assessment, which is annually increasing the valuation upon which revenues are raised. Heretofore money has been expended opening roads to the different settlements composed chiefly of homesteads not subject to taxation, thus expending large sums in opening up the country from which, for the time being, there was no income. Conditions are changing as the years roll by. Every homestead, of which there are many, upon which patent is issued, at once yields a revenue to the county. The same may be said of older property which has long since been deeded. Increased improvements upon all holdings increases the valuation and consequently increases the amount of revenue derived therefrom. Hence with due caution in the management of county affairs there seems no good reason why the amount of outstanding warrants should not be decreased annually until the entire indebtedness of the county is wiped out. True this may not be accomplished in one, two or perhaps three years, but it can or ought to be done in a few years at most.

THE NICARAGUA CANAL.

While in San Francisco a few days ago Senator Mitchell was interviewed by the Chronicle. Among other things he expressed the opinion that the next congress would pass a bill providing for the construction of the Nicaragua canal, under the control of the United States, and cited the fact that the completion of the canal would bring the wheat and other products of the Pacific coast ten thousand miles nearer the Liverpool market, which is our recognized wheat market. It will be remembered that largely through Senator Mitchell's efforts the bill for the construction of the Nicaragua canal was passed by the senate during the latter part of the last congress, but was not again heard of after it reached the house. However, the more the canal proposition is studied the stronger becomes the sentiment in favor of government appropriations for its construction, and the more thoroughly people who have, heretofore given the matter little thought, become convinced of its great importance. Though it would take several years to complete the work if begun at once, the fact of its assured construction would greatly stimulate business in all channels at present. Aside from the restoration of a substantial specific duty on the products of this country, the Nicaragua canal bill is probably the most important measure that will be taken up by the next congress, and Senator Mitchell will undoubtedly be one of the most conspicuous figures on the floor of the senate advocating its passage.

EASTERN AND WESTERN FARMING.

The census figures show that Lancaster county, Pa., is the leading county in the United States in the value of its agricultural products, the total being $7,657,790. Next comes St. Lawrence county, N. Y., with $6,054,160; then Chester county, Pa., with $5,863,800; then Worcester county, Mass., with $5,489,430, and then Buck's county, Pa., $5,411,370. It will surprise the general reader to learn that the five counties ranking highest in this respect are not in the great agricultural empire of the West, but in the manufacturing region of the East, three of them in one state. This certainly does not indicate that the protection tariff under which the manufacturing industries of the country have been established has proved detrimental to the farmers. The fact is that such industries have provided an enlarged market for farm products, and thus made agriculture more profitable, and increased the value of lands used for that purpose. There are many drawbacks to farming in the East, but the advantages of being close to a good market are sufficient to overcome them and to insure success where it would otherwise be practically impossible.

It is not to this fact alone, however, that the prosperity of the Eastern farmers is attributable. They manage their affairs in a different way from that which is followed in the West. Their farms are comparatively small, as a rule, and they cultivate them thoroughly, thereby obtaining the best results. Then they are also economical and careful to utilize everything that they produce, whereas the Western farmers, generally speaking, waste almost as much as they save, because of their larger farms, and the loose methods that come from trying to accomplish too much. A good deal of this waste is unavoidable, of course, since the great staples must be extensively raised in order to yield a satisfactory return; but it might be materially reduced by the adoptinn of a better system of farming. The average Western farmer is at a disadvantage, further more, by reason of his obstinate reliance upon a single crop. He is wedded to corn or wheat, as the Southern farmer is to cotton, and will not see how much better it would be for him to diversify his products, and increase his income by adding to the sources from which it is derived. In time, he will certainly learn this important lesson, and whenever he begins to conduct his business according to the frugal and prudent Eastern planter, he will find it more profitable.

PRESIDENTIAL candidates in both parties are looming up in all directions. On the republican side the most conspicuous ones are Reed of Maine, Allison of Iowa, McKinley of Ohio, Morton of New York and Harrison of Indiana, with a number of lesser lights appearing in the back ground. Between the five mentioned sentiment seems pretty well divided at this time. While all of these gentlemen favor a high protective tariff, by the more enthusiastic protectionists McKinley is regarded as the more preferable, because, perhaps, of the fact that his position on that important question is more familiar to all classes of people. The question as to whether or not the tariff is the policy from which the country looks for future prosperity, would be definitely settled by the nomination of McKinley. Should he be the standard bearer put forward by the next national convention, and be successful in the election, it would be proof positive that the protective system is paramount to all other issues, and is desired by the American people.

CONTRACTS for the construction of the Astoria railroad were signed last week, the contractors being Corey Bros., of Salt Lake, and according to reports sent out immediately after the signing of the contracts, actual grading was to have commenced at Tongue Point Monday last. We have not been informed since whether work did really commence as stated, but presume it did. It is hard to convince some people that the Astoria road will be built, but as the links in the chain of evidence are welded together persons who heretofore scouted the idea of a railroad to Astoria, now frankly admit that the project looks favorable, and some are even sanguine of the ultimate success of the undertaking. Notwithstanding lack of confidence expressed by many, all are agreed that the building of the road means a great deal to the strip of country through which it passes.

CROPS AND WEATHER.

Following is the report of the State Weather Bureau for the week ending on Monday, August 26.

WESTERN OREGON.

Weather—Light sprinkles of rain occurred on the 20th and 21st, in most places not being more than a few drops; it was not sufficient to do any damage, nor to even lay the dust. The wind blew from the south for several days, which, together with the rain falling over the forest fires of Western Washington, decreasing there the supply of smoke, the smoky condition of the atmosphere has been much relieved during the week, but the last few days it has been increasing again, especially in the southern counties, and within a few days dense smoke will again prevail over the entire portion of Western Oregon, except along the immediate coast. The season for high temperature for any length of time is now about over for this year, and for several weeks longer temperatures may be looked for. The general movements of the atmosphere, i. e. the general movements of the storm area, indicate the near approach of the commencement of the rainy season. As a general thing rains do not become heavy and general until the latter part of October, but it is probable that September will have more than the average rainfall.

Crops—Harvest of cereals is over and threshing is now being completed. There will be little threshing to be done after the close of the present week. Though the season has been much dryer than usual, yet there is a fair degree of satisfaction expressed by the correspondents over the general results of the year's labor.

Peaches and pears are ripening rapidly. The weather is moderately favorable to them, yet a greater amount of sunshine would be beneficial. Prunes are ripening, and within the next ten days prunedrying will be in active operation.

Owing to the long period of dry weather the grass has dried up, more so than usual, and as a result the dairy interests are affected quite materially. Several correspondents report a decreased milk supply.
