Nearly Knocked Out.—In San Francisco last Wednesday night a four-round sparring contest took place between J. J. Corbett, alleged champion of the world, and Tom Sharkey, champion of the navy. Sharkey had the best of the fight from the beginning, and in the fourth round it is claimed he would have knocked Corbett out if the police had not stopped the fight.

Maximum Reached.—The water, according to reports from points along the Snake and Columbia, and also from the weather bureau, will not come any higher, but in a day or so it is expected to begin to recede, according to all present indications. The news of the extent of the high water being reached will be hailed with delight by stockmen along the low lands.

Play Ball.—An interesting game of baseball was played at the grounds back of town last Sunday. The opposing sides were the town boys against the fishermen at this place, and resulted in a victory for the former. While the score was much greater than in professional games, it was a marked improvement on the game of one week before, showing that the boys are improving. It will be some time, however, before a challenge will be sent to the Chicagos for a match game, although the players here think they are not to be sneezed at in this county.

The Wood Flume.—The new wood flume being constructed into this city from Milton creek by Mr. Piggott and others is now almost completed and in a few days will be ready for operation. This flume differs from the ordinary wood flume, inasmuch as it is composed of three planks instead of two; it is ten inches wide on the bottom and about sixteen inches at the top, sufficiently large to float any ordinary stick of cordwood. For a long time The Mist has urged the proposition of a wood flume from Milton creek to this place, and of course, is very much pleased to see the enterprise, which will distribute thousands of dollars annually in this neighborhood, so nearly completed.

New Incorporation.—The St. Helens Water Company has been transformed into a corporation known as the St. Helens Light and Water Company, with H. Orchard, D. J. Switzer and A. King as incorporators, and a capital stock of $9100, divided into 182 shares of the par value of $50 each. The water works have formerly been operated by Orchard and Jones, under the firm name of Orchard & Jones, and later Orchard & Switzer. The new articles place the plant in the hands of a stock company with an additional object in view, that of establishing an electric light plant. It is not stated just when the electric light plant will be put in, but that is one of the things which may become a realization at any time, and the capital stock is sufficient for all purpose contemplated.

Militia Ordered Home.—The last of the militia, numbering about 100, passed up on the Thompson from Astoria last Wednesday afternoon. They were met here by Colonel Hiram E. Mitchell of the quartermaster department, who accompanied them to Portland. The cost of the militia going to Astoria will probably reach $12,000, which is very insignificant when we remember that every day the strike was prolonged at this late day it cost the people along the river more than twice that amount. It is said the militia did not do anything when they went to Astoria, which is very true, for their very presence there had the effect of accomplishing the exact object for which they were needed—that of furnishing protection to those who, from actual want, desired to follow their honorable calling unmolested. The strike would have been on yet and to the end of the season, with perhaps the loss of many more lives, had not the militia appeared upon the scene.

Yankton Will Celebrate.—There will be a grand celebration at Yankton on the Fourth. Every effort is being made to make the day's celebration a success. The grounds are being cleared, so that a large crowd may be accommodated. An excellent programme is being prepared, and those who enjoy good music and recitations can do no better than to spend their Fourth there. There will be a number of races, among them a young ladies' race, and all the young ladies in Columbia county are invited to enter. An attractive flag drill will also be given, and a baby show, for which a prize will be given to the handsomest baby. One of the best and most energetic young men will have a refreshment stand on the grounds where candy, fruit, lemonade and ice cream can be bought. Those who have not planned to go some other place can do no better than to take their hammock, a basket dinner and themselves to the beautiful picnic grounds at Yankton and spend the Nation's day.

Southern Oregon Crops.—Mr. I. Bumgardner, of Deer Island, who, with his family, has been spending several months at Ashland and other points in Southern Oregon, has returned to his home in this county. Mr. Bumgardner was a caller at this office Monday, and imparted a little information concerning the section of the state where he has been. He says times are much worse there than here, and that the peach crop, the product upon which the agriculturists depend, is a total failure this year, and that other fruit and grass crops will be far short of the average. On the 17th of May snow fell in the city of Ashland to the depth of two inches, and on the 3d of June a hail storm lasting fifteen minutes, covered the ground an inch deep. Mining, Mr. Bumgardner says, is the only thing upon which the people of Southern Oregon depend this year. He stated, however, that crops in the Umpqua valley were fairly good, but the general outlook for that part of the state was discouraging.

SPITING THEMSELVES ONLY

Finnish Fishermen in a Feverish Heat.

They Despise the Fish in the River and the Union on Shore, While Large Catches are Made.

Astoria, Or., June 22.—Probably more salmon were caught last night and this morning than in any one day for many years past, and all the canneries were compelled to limit their boats. They will, however, pack night and day as long as the supply holds out. One of George & Barker's men brought in 4200 pounds, while another employed by the Astoria Packing Company, made more money in the single night than he made in the corresponding time last season. The river is full of fish, but there are no indications that they are coming in, and the probabilities are strong that by the end of the week small catches will be the rule. The fish are uniformly large, and some exceptionally so. One of the men captured two beautiful specimens that tipped the beam at 133 pounds.

Since the departure of the main body of the militia last night, there has been no unusual disturbance, and the city still remains comparatively quiet. Major Gantenbein, with his picked command of 100 men, is still maintaining a vigilant patrol of the river day and night. It is estimated that at least 2000 boats have gone out since Saturday night, and many of them are manned by non-union men. While it is thought that the run of fish this year has, perhaps, been fully up to those of last season, it is, of course, now impossible for the packers to make up the lost time, and the total pack this year will fall far behind that of any year for five or six years past.

A number of Finnish fishermen have not yet gone out, nearly all of them being dissatisfied with the action of the union in accepting the compromise. Today several hundred are reported to have sent in their resignations to Secretary Jensen, with intimations that they would have nothing more to do with the union. This decision, if adhered to, will be the means of breaking up the organization and rendering futile all further organized efforts to fix the price of salmon.

Deputy Prosecuting Attorney Eakin is preparing to proceed against any and all non-citizens engaged in fishing on the Columbia, and has been informing himself as to the provisions of the law in the case. He states that the law will be vigorously enforced, and that the burden of proof will fall upon the fishermen, to show that they are citizens of Oregon, that they have declared their intentions to become such, and that they have resided in the state for a period of six months. Senator John H. Smith, who is attorney for the Fishermen's Union, in speaking today of the law, said that it was undoubtedly unconstitutional, and would be so declared if carried to the supreme court.

Fish are Large and Fat.

Astoria, Or., June 23.—The receipts of salmon at all the canneries today were not so large as yesterday, although all packed to their full capacity. The fish continue large and average heavier than for many years past. It is thought that the fish now being caught are some of those hatched at the Clackamas hatchery, and the increase in size is due to the fact that, before being turned into the river the young fish were well cared for until they had become able to look out for themselves, but whatever the cause, it is safe to say that never since the inception of the salmon-packing industry here, have the fish averaged higher in weight or in quality.

The Youngest Members.—A Salem correspondent writes to the Oregonian to inquire "the age and name of the youngest member of the house and senate during the past four sessions." Unfortunately, there are no records from which to establish a certain reply. Representative Wilkinson, from Lane county, was supposed to be the youngest member of the session of 1893. Senator Johnson, of Linn county, who was born in 1867, was, undoubtedly, the youngest member of the 1895 session, and will likely have the same distinction in 1897. Representative Jeffrey, the populist "boy orator," was supposed to be the youngest member of the house of 1895, having been born in 1869, but the "blue book" informs us that Representative George Rinearson was only 24 years old in 1895, so he was the youngest. Representative John Gratke is said to be the youngest member-elect of the house. He hails from Clatsop county, and his age is 23 years.

Strike Declared Off.—The fishermens' strike is over, and once more operations at the canneries along the Columbia river are resumed in a business-like way. The strike was declared off by the fishermens' union last Saturday, just four days after the arrival of the state militia at Astoria. The bad effects of the strike, however, will be felt along the river, and particularly in Astoria, for a long time, because under present conditions the whole whole lower river district, both in Oregon and Washington, is dependent upon the fishing industry, and more especially has the strike been hurtful this year for the reason that for the past several weeks salmon have been running in large numbers, and hundreds of men who might have been making good wages have not been permitted to do so, at the same time having gone further in debt for the necessaries of life. Had the militia been sent to the lower river when asked for a month ago, lives to the number of ten or fifteen and property valued at thousands of dollars, would have been saved. It must be remembered that the state troops on their arrival at Astoria did not attempt to intimidate the strikers, but their presence there was a warning to the lawless element that they could no longer murder honest citizens and destroy their property at will. When this was prevented the strikers no longer had any hopes of success, and very soon began to call at the canneries for their fishing gear. The price being paid for salmon is 4½ cents per pound, which the union at first refused, but two days later agreed to accept. It is to be hoped no further trouble will occur. Most of the state troops passed up on the Harvest Queen about 6 o'clock Monday morning on their return to Portland.

HELD TO THE GRAND JURY

Rice and Looney Required to Give Bonds.

The Alleged Mismanagement of a Trust Fund Has Got Them Into Serious Trouble.

(From the Portland Telegram, June 20.)

From the evidence adduced during the two days' preliminary examination of Lawyer W. J. Rice and Schoolmaster J. P. Looney, for the alleged larceny by bailee of $1200, from J. E. and Emeline Van Carnap, Justice Geisler felt warranted in holding them to the grand jury.

Three years ago the Van Carnaps, husband and wife, had a little domestic trouble, when Rice appeared upon the scene as Mrs. Van Carnap's legal advisor. This man, learning that the couple were possessed of some valuable joint interests in Washington county, evidently with a sinister motive temporarily aggravated the couple's estrangement by suggesting to Mrs. Van Carnap that she institute divorce proceedings. As a preliminary step, to avoid court entanglements, should the suit come to an issue, the Van Carnaps agreed to dispose of their Washington county realty holding, by sale, divide the proceeds among themselves, with the exception of $1200, to be set aside as a trust fund, from the revenue of which the expense of the tuition of the Van Carnap children was to be defrayed.

As already stated in these columns, Rice cleverly engineered this scheme, and had himself appointed trustee of the $1200, drawing up the contract in the loosest possible manner, which was shown in court, and, according to other testimony. In order to make this story complete, the fact must be republished that the day following the execution of this flimsy contract, Van Carnap and Rice were coming here from St. Helens on a steamboat, when the former was engaged in conversation with Schoolmaster Looney. This man so impressed unsophisticated Van Carnap with his high order of integrity by his professed prominence in school and church circles that before the boat reached this city Looney had become a co-trustee with Rice.

The story of the schoolmaster's perfidy by his own confession, was briefly narrated in last evening's Telegram. But Rice related the story of his share in the affair later yesterday afternoon.

Rice claimed that the $600 of the spoils he retained after giving the schoolmaster his part of the misappropriated $1200, he regarded as a personal obligation to the Van Carnaps. This man frigidly confessed that he had no interest in the Van Carnap children or any other. He claimed to have paid out $75 for his wards, but failed to make a showing of more than $25. The balance Rice "blew in" on his own account. He further testified that he had not spoken to his "co-trustee" for two years prior to their recent arrest. He made no explanation on that point, but the inference was that the "trust fund" might have had something to do with the disturbance of their friendly relations.

During this defendant's cross-examination, he essayed to construe the terms of the contract creating the trust in a manner to fit his own case, whereat Justice Geisler severely sat down upon Rice, stating that the court was sufficiently intelligent to understand the purport of that document without the defendant's interpretation of it.

Counsel for the defense tried to make it appear that the $1200 placed in the hands of the defendants was merely in the form of a simple loan, and that Rice and Looney could not, with that understanding, be subjected to criminal prosecution. The court, however, differed from counsel, holding that the literal and legal construction of the contract evidenced the $1200 advanced to the defendants by the Van Carnaps to have been a trust fund pure and simple, to be devoted to the education of the Van Carnap children only, unless or until a court in equity dissolved the trust. The court held Rice and Looney to the grand jury in bonds of $1000.

One interesting phase of this tale yet remaining to be told is that, after all, the Van Carnap divorce suit never had a day in court, and the subject, perhaps, never would have suggested itself to them, but for outside interference.

How to Treat a Wife.
(From Pacific Health Journal.)

First, get a wife; second, be patient. You may have great trials and perplexities in your business, but do not, therefore, carry to your home a cloudy or contracted brow. Your wife may have trials, which though of less magnitude, may be hard for her to bear. A kind word, a tender look will do wonders in chasing from her brow all clouds of gloom.—To this we would add, always keep a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house. It is the best, and is sure to be needed sooner or later. Your wife will then know that you really care for her and wish to protect her health. For sale by Dr. Edwin Ross.
