

LUMBER FROM OREGON.—A visitor on the sound who is interested in the lumber trade with Delagoa bay, Africa, says that during the next 12 months between 60,000,000 and 70,000,000 feet of lumber will be required to supply the visible demands of the country tributary to Delagoa bay alone, and the whole will have to be supplied with Oregon and Washington mills. This amount of lumber would load about 30 large ships.

GOOD RECOMMENDATION.—The last grand jury in Union county recommended that the county court see that the justices of the peace of the several districts furnish transcripts in all criminal and bind-over cases to the court and grand jury, to scrutinize the actions of the justice courts, that final cases be acted upon as such, and in not conforming to the law in such matters that the county court refuse to pay their bills.

MONOGRAMS BEATEN.—The baseball team known as the Monograms, of Portland, went to San Francisco some time ago to play a California team for the championship of the Pacific coast, and also for the Examiner prize. The game was called for one week ago last Sunday and resulted in a tie of 12 to 12 at the close of the 12th inning, the game being stopped on account of darkness. Last Sunday a second game was played, which resulted in the defeat of the Monograms, the score being 15 to 16. It will be remembered that the Monograms played the St. Helens team about two months ago, and won only by small odds.

GOT BIG DAMAGES.—The Dalles Times-Mountaineer: Judge Bennett has returned from Dayton, Wash., where he has been conducting a suit for damages against E. McNeil, as receiver of the O. R. & N. Co. The case was brought by the widow and children of Robert Walker, an engineer in the employ of the road who was killed in a wreck between Boles Junction and Starbuck in Columbia county, Wash., and was for damages caused by his death. The verdict of the jury was that of $40,000 damages be awarded, the largest damages ever awarded in the United States in a similar case. The case will be appealed to the Washington supreme court.

STEAMER SUNK.—Last Sunday night as the steamer Toledo was returning to Dayton from this place where she had been doing some towing she ran into a snag in Pikepole bend and tore the whole side of her hull out for a distance of 30 feet back from the bow, says the Oregon City Enterprise. Capt. Geer immediately beached his boat and the next day got the Grey Eagle and a barge and expects to have her raised this week and the necessary repairs made to the hull. The night was quite dark at the time of the accident, and as the Yamhill river has many snags along its banks the sinking of the boat was one of those mishaps that the most careful management cannot always prevent.

THE OREGON CORN CROP.—The Oregon corn crop is unusually good this season, the warm, open fall enabling it to ripen in good condition. The area planted to corn is increasing each year and in some parts of the Willamette valley it is getting to be an important crop with the farmers. In the vicinity of Silverton there are several fine fields, that of Chas. Booth, so the appeal states, yielding 50 bushels to the acre, which would be a fair yield in Illinois or Iowa. With the development of seed that is acclimated and more careful methods of cultivation, together with the intelligent use of fertilizer, it is possible for the Willamette valley to produce all the corn required for home consumption.

MULE AND GIANT POWDER.—S. C. Sparks, who resides at Blue River, has the contract for delivering supplies and material at the Lucky Boy mine. The supplies are delivered at Blue River and from there are carried six miles over the Lucky Boy trail to the mine on mules. A few days ago a part of a load carried by one of the mules comprised a box of giant powder. When well up the trail the mule became tired of his load and began to buck to rid himself of it. Everybody got out of the way, expecting each minute to see the mule and the side of the mountain blown into atoms. But his muleship, wholly unconscious of the death dealing character of the load on his back, kept on bucking until he loosened the pack and it rolled off down the side of the mountain. The box was broken on the rocks, and sticks of giant powder scattered in every direction, but not one of them exploded from the concussion. That mule doesn't know what he escaped, for giant powder usually explodes at the least jar.

JOINT DEBATE.—Some time ago Mr. H. B. Nicholas, a prominent lawyer of Portland, was billed for a speech in the interest of Bryan at Deer Island. He arrived on time but the audience did not materialize. Mr. Nicholas, in order, as he thought, to get a hearing, asked Mr. Harrison Allen to arrange for a joint discussion, thinking evidently that by this means he would have an audience before whom he could portray his silver ideas. The debate was arranged for last Sunday at 2 o'clock at which time Mr. J. W. Ivey, of Portland, appeared for the republicans and Mr. Nicholas for the populists. The hour arrived and Mr. Allen stated that Nicholas would have one hour in the opening and Mr. Ivey one hour to reply and that each in turn would be allowed fifteen minutes to sum up. The debate proceeded and the first speaker consumed a few minutes more than an hour before time was called. Mr. Ivey then took the floor and had not spoken twenty words until the audience began to cheer—something that had not before been heard—and inside of ten minutes it was clearly evident that he was too much for his populist opponent. The debate continued and as cheer after cheer went up it seemed that the meeting was unanimous for McKinley. There were, however, a few democrats in the house, but they were not much enthused. Darkness shut off the discussion, the combatants shook hands and the curtain dropped.

ELECTION DAY.—Election day was marked by quietness and order in St. Helens. Considerable good natured joking took place between members of the contending parties, but all was jovial. Some betting was indulged in but the wagers were generally small and of a local nature. The vote was the largest ever polled in this precinct, the number reaching 414. Many from other precincts, particularly from Auburn, Sherman and Deer Island, voted here. A very large percentage of the foreign vote polled in this precinct were populists, and a desperate attempt was made by them to carry the precinct. In the evening a crowd of anxious waiters were on the street and about the hotels to receive special returns by wire. The men were mostly republicans. However, there were a few populists in the crowd who did not seem to realize how badly they had been snowed under until the returns began to come in. "Scappoose precinct, 50 majority for McKinley," ticked the telegraph, and populist countenances changed. In a moment Deer Island reported 35 for McKinley, and their faces presented a purple hue; but hardly had the bulletins been posted, than "Sherman 23 and Clatskanie 80," rang out from the telegraph office. Lips that had been open all day for Bryan were mum as an oyster, but hope was not yet given up; Marshall; yes Marshall precinct was looked to to perform populist miracles. "Marshall 9 majority for McKinley," came over the wire. Lips dropped. But the hopeful never despair, and Nehalem was to come, but when it did come to the tune of 32 republican majority all hope vanished and the "reformers" were blue beyond description. The populists, however, took things good natured and tried to excuse their defeat in many ways. Each succeeding report increased the republican majorities, and as often the increased shouts of those watching the bulletins was heard. When New York reported three hundred thousand for McKinley hilarity ran high but was no comparison to the demonstration which followed the reports from Tennessee and Kentucky. About 12 o'clock most of the crowd were satisfied with the result and retired for the night, leaving only a few who remained all night.

THE CASE OF ALEXIS ST. MARTIN.

How Medical Science Was Enriched by a Singular Injury.

Alexis St. Martin was a young man in the service of the American Fur company at what is now Mackinaw, Mich. In the year 1823, when 19 years of age, he was accidentally shot, receiving the whole charge of a musket in his left side, which fractured two ribs, lacerated the lungs and entered the stomach. Dr. William Beaumont, the surgeon in charge, restored him in a year to good health, with all his former strength and spirit. But the opening in his body was never closed. From 1825 to 1833 Dr. Beaumont began a series of experiments on the stomach of St. Martin, studying its operations, secretions, etc., his patient during all these years presenting the remarkable spectacle of a man in good health, good appetite and good spirits, with an aperture opening into his stomach through which the whole action of the organ might be observed. The doctor thus discovered the presence of the gastric juice in the human subject and demonstrated beyond a doubt its chemical properties and digestive powers.

He made other interesting discoveries. For instance, that the color of the membrane of the stomach is pale pink; that its appearance is velvetlike, and that the stimulus of food causes the gastric follicles to enter into activity and to pour out the acid gastric juice. The doctor would poke food into the stomach and draw it out and examine it at different stages of digestion. One day he would watch the action of stimulants, another day the action of sedatives. He tried opium and alcohol. He experimented with raw meat, boiled meat, broiled meat, baked meat, roast meat and fried meat.

He found that salted pork, when raw or broiled, was digested in from 3 to 4 hours. The same article fried took 4 hours, while fresh pork, fat and lean, roasted, required 2 1/2 hours. On the other hand, boiled fresh beef, with a little salt, was digested in 2 1/2 hours, while old salted beef required 4 hours when dressed in the same manner. Fish digested quicker than meat; boiled milk quicker than unboiled milk.

In spite of his wound, in spite of the indignities to which his stomach had been subjected, St. Martin survived his doctor and lived to a good old age.—New York World.

A Register For Nerve Disturbance.
A large proportion of the ailments by which this generation are afflicted arise from nervous disturbance of one kind or another. Many of these complaints are of such a subtle nature that the physician is often puzzled in making the diagnosis, and the "troumometer," or new register for the indication of the various degrees of trembling exhibited in different diseases, promises to be of great service to science. This instrument consists of a metal plate pierced with a number of holes of different sizes in a graduated scale, and a needle which the patient endeavors to put into the holes.

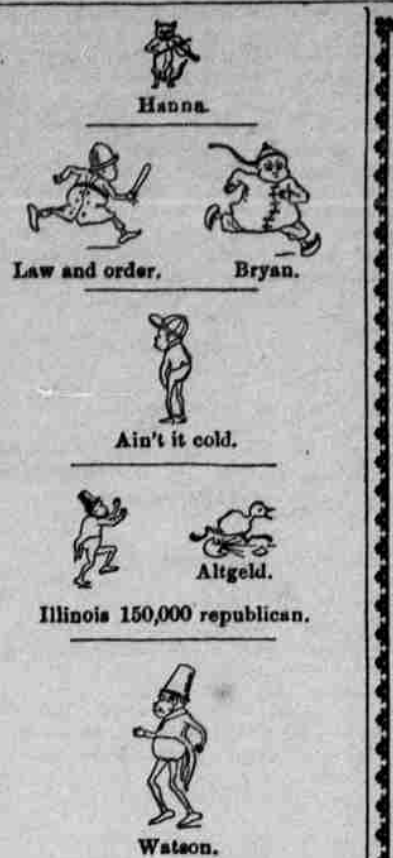

When he has succeeded in placing the needle in the hole, an electric contact is made and a bell rings. Although this method of testing unsteadiness of hand appears simple, it is found reliable. The immoderate use of coffee and stimulants produces tremblings which can be accurately denoted by the appliance. One of the directions in which this invention may prove useful is in ascertaining the degree of steadiness possessed by marksmen and others, in whom stability of nerve is an absolute necessity.—New York Telegram.

Native of the San Blas Coast.
The natives of the San Blas coast, part of the western coast of South America, have many peculiar customs. The Indian boy after his marriage becomes the slave of his father-in-law and must submit in all things to his will until emancipated by his own daughter's marriage, when he sets up his own home and becomes thenceforth master of his son-in-law. The men are very jealous of their women, and in case of war or other grave danger their first step is to kill their wives and children. They believe dreams and insanity to be the work of evil spirits, and the dreamer upon telling his dream is killed. They allow no foreigner to sleep in one of their villages. The total population of San Blas is supposed to be about 20,000.—Exchange.

Twenty-five Hundred Years in Building.
It is not often that the engineering world is called upon to witness the completion of a work nearly 2,500 years after it was first projected, but such is the case with the canal through the isthmus of Corinth. Projected 600 years before Christ, agitated again 300 years later, actually begun by the Emperor Nero, it is completed in 1893.—American Engineer and Railroad Journal.

He Wanted a Soft One.

Mr. Henpek—Great Cressar, do you think my skull is made of iron?—Texas Sittings.

Learn How to Rest.
A physician advises: "Learn how to rest. Don't wait to make a separate business of it. Let it become a part of the daily routine of occupation. Above all, begin relief, however slight, at the first moment its need is indicated. Stop work at your desk; lean back and close the eyes; relax the frame so far as possible for 15 minutes; lie down, if convenient, for the same length of time; in any way relieve the tension, however briefly, but promptly, and the result will be a large ratio of gain in endurance."

Senator Stewart and the Blind Beggar.

A tall, snowy bearded man, with wide brimmed soft hat and the general air of a westerner, was walking along Fourteenth street, near Union square. He noticed a blind beggar's appeal for aid. The appeal was prominently displayed on a card hanging on the beggar's breast. It stated that the appellant had lost his sight through a mine explosion in the west many years ago.

The white bearded man stopped and addressed a remark to the blind beggar, whose face brightened at the first words and broke into a smile when the gentleman shook hands with him. Dropping a coin in the tin cup that clanked like a sheep bell at the liberal donation, the venerable pedestrian pursued his path.

"That's Senator Stewart of Nevada," whispered one observer to another, "and the blind beggar once worked in the same mine with him. Two summers ago they met in the same way in this neighborhood. The senator gave generous alms, and the blind beggar was cheered by the kind words that accompanied the gift."—New York Herald.

A Toad's Cunning.
A scientific journal tells the story of a toad's cunning. A brood of chickens was fed with moistened meal in saucers, and when the dough soured a little it attracted large numbers of flies. An observant toad had evidently noticed this, and every day toward evening he would make his appearance in the yard, hop to a saucer, climb in and roll over until he was covered with meal, having done which he awaited developments. The flies, enticed by the smell, soon swarmed around the scheming batrachian, and whenever one passed within two inches or so of his nose his tongue darted out and the fly disappeared. The plan worked so well that the toad made a regular business of it.

The First Act of a Tragedy.
You are sitting alone. Suddenly you instinctively feel a sensation of horror of some evil influence that is present, but as yet unseen. You lift your eyes. You behold, gliding over the carpet toward you, without noise, apparently without the trouble of walking, a mouse. It stops. It fascinates you. You feel your blood freeze and your limbs slowly paralyze. Your heart stops beating. Your breath ceases. A cold chill creeps over you.—London Woman.

Can I put up at this house?
Clerk—I suppose so. Got any baggage?
Arrival—No.
Clerk—How much do you want to put up?—Exchange.
