WHO CAN BEAT IT?—Two squashes were on exhibition in town this week from the farm of F. M. Webber, of Bachelor Flat, one of them measuring in circumference, 62 1/2 feet, and the other one four feet each way. These, with three others nearly as large, grow on the same vine. The largest one weighed about 150 pounds.

He expects to be absent about four months.—Kalamazoo Bulletin.

STORE AND SAWMILL DESTROYED—The tremendous rise in Lewis river last Sunday resulted in washing away the store building to James Forbes at Etina, with all its contents. The store was located on the North Fork of Lewis river, some distance above Woodland. A sawmill located at the same place was also destroyed by the freshet. A considerable amount of other property belonging to farmers along the river has been destroyed.

SUSPENDED AND RESUMED—Two weeks ago the Raiser Review announced that it would suspend publication with that issue, and people supposed it was dead. But not so. A week later the Review came out somewhat reduced in size under the management of F. G. Brown. Mr. W. M. Perry has labored for several months to make the paper a success, but his efforts were in vain. Mr. Brown will probably exhaust his energies with the same result, yet we hope he will meet with success.

HOW ONE BET WAS PAID—A carpenter and a banker of this city, says the Eugene Guard, bet a $5.00 hat on the result of the election. The banker won and the carpenter told him to go to a certain store and buy the hat. The banker went, but concluded that a $5.00 hat was more expensive than he needed, so bought one marked $2.50 and purchased an umbrella with the other $2.50, the bill being charged to the carpenter. When the bill was presented to the carpenter he refused to pay for the umbrella, saying it was not included in the bet. The other man now has to pay for the umbrella and has received only a $2.50 hat when he could just as well have had a $5.00 one.

DESTRUCTIVE FRESHET—Perhaps the greatest rainfall recorded in the history of Oregon for the same length of time was that which occurred last Friday, Saturday and Sunday. The Columbia is said to have risen three feet at this point Saturday night, and for several days the river was full of drift, among it being houses and thousands of feet of sawlogs. The current was so swift that the steamer Fannie was forced to tie up a raft of logs below here because she could not make headway in an attempt to pass the mouth of Lewis river. History does not record a rise of such rapidity in the Columbia at this place as that of Saturday night. The damage to loggers who had the product of their labor in the small streams has been enormous.

LOSS IN THE COWLITZ—The great flood of last Sunday proved disastrous to the loggers and shingle men on the Cowlitz river. The Danway Lumber Company had about 6000 cords of shingle bolts in the mouth of Tontle river, and when the great rise came the boom gave way and the whole lot came down the Cowlitz. When this great mass of timber arrived at the mouth of Ostrander creek where Mr. Root had a large boom filled with saw logs, that boom also gave way and the whole mass of logs and shingle bolts came down the Cowlitz to its mouth, where the large boom is located, and supposed to have had sufficient strength for all emergencies. But the tremendous weight of timber swept everything before it and proceeded on toward the sea. It took out about three quarters of a mile of the big boom as if it were nothing. Some of the shingle bolts, however, lodged in the lower end or pocket of the Cowlitz boom, but they are the property of several persons and cannot be identified as there are no marks or brands on them. It is said that Tom Nordby, purser on the Shaver, also lost about 800 cords of shingle bolts at the same time. The loss to those who owned the logs and bolts will be great, and it will cost thousands of dollars to repair the boom at the mouth of the Cowlitz alone.

The wife of Mr. Leonard Wells, of East Brimfield, Mass., had been suffering from neuralgia for two days, not being able to sleep or hardly keep still, when Mr. Holden, the merchant there sent her a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and asked that she give it a thorough trial. On meeting Mr. Wells the next day she was told that she was all right, the pain had left her in two hours, and that the bottle of Pain Balm was worth $5.00 if it could not be had for less. For sale at 50 cents per bottle by Dr. Edwin Ross.

ST. HELENS SCHOOL NOTES.

Miss Mabel Way visited school Monday afternoon.

John Wellington, a former pupil, was a visitor at school Monday afternoon.

Why not have a night school this winter? What do you think of it, boys and young men, who can not attend during the day.

Next week's issue will contain the questions given in monthly examination in mental and written arithmetic of Seventh and Eighth grades.

Last Friday forenoon the school was favored with a call from County Superintendent Watts. He addressed the school in a few well timed remarks, which were greatly appreciated by the pupils and the teacher.

Great interest is being taken by the pupils in their studies this winter, and most of them are doing extra studying at home of evenings, which tells in recitations and examinations. Parents, encourage home study in your children, as thereby are the foundations of a successful life and an attainment of an education.

If the people of this town would erect a school house of three or four rooms and provide for a high school in it they would take a step toward advancement of incalculable value. With a modern school house and a graded school the town would grow very rapidly and soon become a place where people of the best class would purchase and build homes, so that their children could have the benefits of a good school. Columbia county, with her vast resources and several thousand school children, needs very badly a high school, and it is only a matter of time until one will be founded somewhere in the county. Now, as St. Helens is the county seat, and situated almost centrally, she is entitled to it, and with it she would be the banner town of the county, and her school would be an object of pride to her citizens. Being situated as she is on the river and in close communication with the metropolis of the state, many residents of Portland and other cities adjacent, would take advantage of her schools and facilities for communication with Portland and purchase homes here instead of in the suburbs of Portland. They could live cheaper here and be removed from the noise and din of a great city. At the present prices of building material and labor, a fine building of modern design could be erected at a cost of $2500 or $3000 at the least, and with a prospect of better times in the near future, the bonds which would need to be floated for such purpose could be easily met when they became due, and the cost to the taxpayers would be nominal.

Montgomery's Judgment.

In the case of J. B. Montgomery vs. the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, Judge Bellinger, of Portland, denied the motion for a new trial, and ordered judgment on the verdict. Joseph Simon, counsel for the railroad company, has prepared a bill of exceptions, which has not yet been filed.

The suit was brought to recover the value of about 3000 acres of land, which Mr. Montgomery purchased from the company in 1875 and to which the United States supreme court decided in 1894 that the railroad company had no title at the time of sale. Suit was brought in the United States court in Portland to recover the amount paid for the land with interest, and on May 28 last the jury found a verdict for plaintiff and assessed his damages at $16,405.24, of this $16,789.58 being principal, and $27,615.96 for interest. The ground on which the company refused to pay the amount demanded was that payment for the land had been made in Northern Pacific bonds, which were worth much less than their face.

MARRIED.

McGILVERY-POPHAM—At Clatskanie, Monday, November 16, 1896, Mr. Angus McGilvery and Miss Nellie Popham, both of Clatskanie.

This was the matrimonial event of the season. The marriage, however, was not a surprise, inasmuch as the groom expected had rented a house and furnished it in advance, and the bride expected would occasionally drop in to give some suggestions or offer some assistance that might be needed, but there was general satisfaction expressed when it was learned that the wedding was to take place in the church, and an invitation extended to any who might wish to be present.

Mrs. J. A. English and Miss Campbell undertook the task of decorating the church, and with some assistance succeeded in making a bower of beauty, arranging chrysanthemums, geraniums and other flowers, with ivy, myrtle and such evergreens as produced most harmonious and pleasing effects. Pretty tables were brought in on which pretty lamps were lighted to add brilliancy, and the general expression borne upon entering the house was "is it pretty?" At 7:30 doors were opened and the room was soon filled with a brilliant audience.

At 8 p. m. the signal was given Miss Cora Blackford, who was at the organ, to commence the wedding march. Immediately the double doors were thrown open and two young maidens, Annie English and Leota Merrill, entered, followed by Messrs. George Tichenor and Oscar Elliott, and these followed by the lady and gentleman to be married, the bride wearing white cashmere trimmed with lace, and carrying a bouquet of white chrysanthemums tied with white ribbon, the groom wearing a suit of black. Marching up the middle aisle toward the chancel, the ladies and gentlemen preceded, leaving room for the bridal couple in the center. The minister proceeded to perform the ceremony according to the ritual of the church, and after pronouncing the couple man and wife, introduced Mr. and Mrs. McGilvery to the audience. General congratulations followed before the party left the church for their newly furnished home, where they are now ready to receive their friends. Mrs. McGilvery as Nellie Popham, is well known in this community, where her kindness and helpfulness have won her many friends. The groom is also well known, both as an enterprising logger and a patron of athletic sports, where he does well. The best wishes of the community go with them.
