THINGS PERTAINING TO THE FARM AND HOME.

By Reducing Bones to Ashes a Valuable Plant Food is Found—Best to Grow Early Corn—How to Have Success with Fertilizers.

Early Corn is Best.

Millions of dollars' worth of corn is lost every year from failure of corn late planted, or planted on too poor ground to mature its crop.

Bones and Ashes.

Bones, as they are, are not available as food for the farmer's crops; therefore, he takes no interest in them, and they are suffered to lie about the farm unnoticed.

Success with Fertilizers.

The impression that the mere application of a few pounds of fertilizer to a poor soil is all that is necessary to make it produce a large crop has now almost disappeared from the mind of the average farmer.

Farm Notes.

When trees are pruned of surplus branches and shoots while they are young it avoids the cutting off of large limbs in after years.

Cultivating After Pains.

Much the best time to cultivate is after a rainfall which has packed the surface soil, provided there is enough has elapsed for the surface to dry.

Rel Pepper for Poultry.

The habit of dosing fowls with various hot condiments in order to improve their condition is very like similar habits in human beings.

Cheaper Growing of Beets.

It is a mistake to plant field beets in narrow rows, so that all the work has to be done by hand.

Mrs. Patti's Dread of Burglars.

Burglars are the great terror of Mrs. Patti's life at Craig's Nose Castle, and she has had all the window shutters fitted with electric bells.

labor for cultivation the beet crop may be very easily and cheaply grown.

Storing Eggs.

Eggs should not be stored near any odorous commodity, as they have almost the proclivity of butter for absorbing odors.

Salt in Moderate Amounts.

Salt in moderate amounts is doubtless an aid to digestion. The craving for it is natural with all herbivorous animals, and is especially strong in those that chew the cud.

Some Government Experiments.

The United States Government has made some experiments with bisulphide of carbon in order to learn the effects of the substance on seeds that have been exposed to it in sealed vessels.
