ST. HELENS, OREGON, OCT. 29.

THE earthly career of Theodore Durrant is drawing to a close, at least all indications point in that direction. His case will be taken up by the United States supreme court in a few days, when it is expected the lower court will be sustained and execution issued, and thus will be brought to an end the hardest fought legal battle to save a human life ever recorded in history. Durrant's attorneys probably never have expected to clear him, but they have, at least, prolonged his life, if guilty, far beyond what he had a right to expect.

From every quarter of the United States come reports of factories starting up with increased crowds and an advance in wages over the corresponding period of last year. What does this indicate; that times are better or worse? Calamity howlers would have people believe that high prices indicate hard times, but it is indeed hard to convince a man who is receiving $2 per day that he is worse off than when he was out of employment. There are, of course, some blind enough to believe such rot, but they are few in number and not of the class of people who are looking for work or have anything for sale, even to their labor.

WHEN Justice Field's successor is appointed the republicans will have six members of the supreme court and the democrats three. The republican party, however, will neither be helped nor the democracy harmed by the republican preponderance. Partisanship has very little influence in dictating the attitude of justices of the supreme court toward the great questions which come before them. The part which republican justices took in nullifying the civil rights act and in interpreting the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments adversely to the republican contention prove that, in most cases, the partisan affiliations of men count for very little after they go to the supreme bench. This independence of party and social prejudices and predilections on the part of the members of that tribunal constitutes one of its strongest claims to the public respect.

THE same men who joined the populists in holding up the last legislature have formed another combination to hold up the appointments recommended by the Oregon delegation in congress. This is a reciprocation of the favor done by the populists last winter, as it is well known that most of the federal offices in this state are at present held by democrats of populist persuasion. The anti-delegation machine would rather see the present federal officials hold over than to have new appointments made by the recommendation of the congressional delegation. The efforts of the hold up crowd will not succeed, however, for it is a well known fact that the administration's policy is to make appointments whenever the delegation agree upon an applicant for a position. The rule already established will hardly be reversed just to gratify a few promoters of party discord and populist satelites.

PARTY harmony is essential to republican success next year in Oregon, without which defeat may follow. The state is republican by a safe majority, but with internal dissensions within the party victory is sometimes turned into defeat. The primaries in the various precincts of the state should be conducted on a plan free from jobbery and without the assistance of either populists or democrats. The men elected to the conventions should be of sterling integrity and without strings on them, so that they would be free to represent their constituents according to their own judgment, looking always to the selection of the best men for the various responsible positions, and at the same time remembering that the party owes no office to any man, but that the public good requires efficient servants in every official capacity, and proceed to place such men upon the ticket seeking the suffrages of the people. A ticket made up of such men and nominated under such circumstances could not fail to win. Will it be done?

WE are indebted to the sun for light by night as well as by day; for warmth within doors as well as without. Strolling through a town lit up by innumerable lamps, or whirled along at the heels of a locomotive, it is a pleasant thought that the emanations of suns which rose and set millions of years ago—which rose and set in seeming idleness, and to all appearance, in wasted splendor—are now reproduced to enable us to cope with darkness or to conquer space without moving a muscle. There is something captivating in the thought that the great rector mundi was working for us when as yet there was no sign of man—indeed, no promise of his coming—and with quiet patient labor laying up from day to day those treasures of light and heat which are infinitely more valuable to us than all else we possess. No one who has studied geological processes can repress a feeling of surprise, perhaps of impatience, at the slow, deliberate step with which nature ever marches up to her goal. But when we think of the sun toiling in lonely splendor to store our planet with fuel—we had almost said with his own embodied beams—it seems to reconcile us in some degree to the august and awful chronology of the universe.—Rural Press.

ENGLAND has served notice on the monetary commission that the British government does not want international agreement; that they regard it as impracticable, and therefore have no time to further consider the silver proposition. While the commission has failed to accomplish the desired object, its work has been tireless from the start, and all the members of the commission being pronounced silver men, no one can doubt that an earnest effort has been made. But if all the silver men in the United States had gone to Europe at this time the result would not have been different. The world is rapidly drifting toward international agreement on the gold standard, and at the present rate of change in the money of the nations it will be but a few years until every nation of the earth will have adopted gold as their standard of value. One thing may be said in this connection, however, the administration at Washington has made an honest, earnest effort to bring about international agreement as declared in the platform of last year. Men in sympathy with the silver movement, who have made a study of the question, were selected to go abroad to negotiate with the other countries, but their efforts proved futile and they have returned home. The thing has presented an impracticable phase and will probably remain so.

INDUSTRIAL EDUCATION.

There is a widespread complaint, and in the main a just one, that the ideals in our public school system are almost wholly literary, and only to the very slightest extent industrial in their tendencies. In spite of the fact that fully nine-tenths of the children in our public schools are destined to be laborers with their hands, the public school course provides little, if any manual training, and lays but little stress upon the dignity and importance of manual labor. If the boy begins work with the spade or saw after having completed the public school course, there is a feeling of disappointment on the part of his friends, who seem to think that his education was designed wholly to fit him for other callings in life. It is expected that he shall be a doctor or lawyer, a storekeeper or civil engineer, or at least, a clerk in a store. If the course in the public school frankly recognize the fact that the great majority of the children will be obliged to labor in some way with their hands, and if the effort were made to develop in them a love of labor and respect for it in every honest form, public education would more nearly meet the actual requirements of our people and build a sure foundation for national prosperity. Industrial education in the public schools needs not be elaborately systematic, or attended by a very great expenditure of money for equipment. The spirit which grows out of training in manual work is of really greater value than any skill which may be incidentally acquired. It is of more importance that the boys and girls should look forward to doing work, and to respect honorable labor of all kinds, than that they should become specially skilled workmen. In our district schools simple provisions might be made for various kinds of common labor, under the supervision of the teacher, and a skillful teacher would soon learn how to make this work interesting as well as valuable. The care of the school grounds, beautifying the yard and the buildings, simple work with the ordinary tools found in every farmer's workshop, plain cutting and sawing and many other simple and useful kinds of work could easily be given in any country school. In the graded schools of the towns and villages, a more complete system of manual training could be introduced with little expense and with no great expenditure of time. The whole ideal of the school might become much more largely industrial. It is not claimed, of course, that the very best development of mind and heart is not the due of every boy and girl whether destined for manual labor or that of a literary nature; but a much greater emphasis laid on the industrial side of education need, by no means, interfere with the very best development on the intellectual side. Already a great many good schools have introduced manual training with marked success. The idea remains to be more fully developed so that the common school everywhere may train its children to the best kind of citizenship, which is self respecting and industrious in the humblest walks of life as well as in the highest.

NOTE AND COMMENT.

The following letter from Dr. Harry Lane appeared in the Oregonian of October 10th, which explains itself:

"I am told the statements made by me in the letters to the Oregonian concerning certain crooked work in filling contracts for supplies with the asylum, are, by some, being taken as a reflection upon Senator George W. McBride, he at that time having been a member of the board of trustees of that institution. In regard to this I wish to state that in my dealings with Mr. McBride, as one of the members of such board of trustees, I always found him to be squarely upon the side of right, and that too, without hesitation or quibbling. I have too much respect for the intelligent, high-toned and decent fairness which he ever evinced in the affairs of the asylum, so far as they came to my knowledge, to allow such an imputation to remain undisturbed by me."

VERNONIA GLEANINGS.

The river has raised considerable.
Mr. E. W. Keasey was in this city Monday.
Spencer B. Rose visited the metropolis last week.
More rain, more rest. More sunshine, more work.
Rev. Fisher was visiting up the river Wednesday.
Mr. and Mrs. Throop went to Forest Grove Friday.
Albert Baker arrived home from the Grove Monday.
Mr. Everett was the guest of Mr. Frank Baker Monday.
Mr. John Young has purchased a team from Mr. Gilson, of Houlton.
Al Bloodson passed through town with a load of household goods Monday.
Messrs. Wood and Denlow were county seat visitors the first of the week.
Omar Shannahan passed through this city Saturday to visit relatives up the river.
Mr. A. Shannahan was promulgating the streets of Portland a day or two last week.
Samuel Mow and a large force of our neighbors were repairing the Taylor bridge Monday.
It is reported that Mr. Adolph Bergerson and Miss Bertha Richard were married on the 25th at the metropolis.
It was said that a large congregation listened to Rev. Fisher's sermon at the Beaver school house last Sunday.
John Edholm arrived home Friday evening. Mr. Edholm has been employed on the Astoria railroad work for some time.
Newton and John Parker have arrived home from Eastern Oregon, where they have been cutting wood the past summer.
Mr. Fitzgerald returned home Tuesday from St. Helens, where he had been as a witness for a neighbor who was making final proof.
Richard Seseman arrived home Tuesday from Washington county, where he had been working on the residence of Mrs. J. H. Wilson for some time.
The Vernonia Canning and Packing Co. will soon resume operations again, as the late rains have caused the streams to rise and a large run of salmon is looked for.
Mr. Walker, of Beaverton, has purchased the team of clydes, wagon and harness formerly owned by Anderson Bros. for the small sum of $125, which was truly a good bargain on the part of Mr. Walker.
