ST. HELENS, OREGON, JULY 1.

America for Americans. "Long May It wave O'er the Home of the Free and the Land of the Brave."

WHAT IS NECESSARY.

It becomes more noticeable every day that it is necessary for the people of St. Helens to see to it that our town has the inlets to our market. We are situated in the most accessable place along the river, and we must furnish good highways for the people to reach this point. Do not adhere to the improbable theory that this cannot be done. Furnish roads for people to come here over, then give them something to come here for. One is as necessary as the other. To expend large sums of money for roads to enable people to come here and purchase dry goods, boots and shoes and hardware, is not sufficient. These necessary articles they can purchase elsewhere as well as here, and we are beginning to find that out.

St. Helens should be made a market place for the people who come here. People will go to a town where they can receive the largest share of the benefits; where they can, at all times, dispose of their products. Purchasing and selling inducements always go hand in hand in building up a town.

An effort should be made to secure for this place one or more manufacturing plants. The location is unsurpassed on the Columbia river, and imported materials, if necessary, can be as cheaply transported to St. Helens as elsewhere on the river. In case a factory or two were in operation at this place inducements would then offer to our farmers to bring their produce here for disposal, and to say that the money received would be turned into other channels would be repeating the first thought conveyed.

Transportation facilities to and from are not excelled at any other point on the river, and we believe the time is propitious in the extreme for such a move to be made by the citizens of our town. The water front of our little city is perfection itself in the matter of sites for factories and the depth of water here makes it possible for the largest vessels to find safety in lying at the wharves which might be built, or lying at anchor in the stream.

Just now the time is vastly more opportune than has ever obtained for us to make a move in the direction of securing the location of a manufacturing plant of some kind—any kind—it makes no difference what it might be, its good results would be at once noticed, and with the establishment of such enterprises would naturally come the improvement of our neighboring highways. A creamery, a sash and door factory, a sawmill equipped with modern machinery, a fruit cannery or a salmon cannery, or all of them, could be profitably operated at this point, and if we hope to keep pace with the rapid strides of progress witnessed at other places we must awake to a sense of our duties and put forth our best efforts.

We have pursued the even tenor of our way, depending upon circumstances to build and develop us, and if we are not careful we will find ourselves at the rear of the hindmost part of the procession which is now marching forward in a solid column, reaching for business, offering inducements, and as a result is reaping its reward in an increase of business and enterprises.

The next few years will offer inducements for commercial advancement here in Columbia county which rarely present themselves, and we must be on the alert to take advantage of every opportunity to forge ahead.

ROAD-MAKING.

Here is a little item about road-making, says the Corvallis Union. Mr. Harding, the road master of district number —, has been experimenting. One or two taxpayers in his district did not care to work out their time, so the supervisor hired men to do the work. The first day the teams hired at $3 hauled five loads, the teams working out their time hauling four loads. The supervisor, taking exceptions to this, finally induced the work-it-outs to haul the same number of loads. Later the teams hired offered to haul the gravel for fifty cents per load, thus making six loads for a day's labor, while the work-it-out plan would give only four as usually managed, or at best only five. And Mr. Harding is satisfied that if he could let the whole work of his district to the lowest bidder the gravel could be placed for forty cents per load, a saving of at least fifty per cent, which is equivolent to making twice the amount of roadbed for the same tax. This supervisor proposes that all taxes be paid in money, and the taxpayer be given the option of working out his time at the rate the lowest bidder offers to do the work, or paying in cash. Here is a point for our legislators-elect. Something must be done to improve our road laws. This go-as-you-please method is a way behind the needs of the hour. Give us something better.

It will not be many weeks now before preparation for the fall term of school will commence. While our school has been successfully conducted, there has always been a drawback in regard to securing pupils from the outside country, which could be obviated if there were only some place provided where those coming from a distance could find more reasonable living. Here is another opportunity for our town to make a ten-strike. If our school facilities were of a higher character, with other inducements suggested, people from other sections would more readily and eagerly seek us out.

If you wish to invest in the new war issue of government bonds apply to Mr. W. H. Dolman, at the St. Helens postoffice, for application blanks and general information. These bonds are the safest investment in the world, and you can secure them in any denomination from $20 upwards. Here is one way to show your patriotism. It is a very substantial way, too, for wars cannot be carried on without money.

TONGUE ON THE WEST.

Recently, Hon. Thomas H. Tongue, in a speech in congress in favor of the annexation of Hawaii, said, among other things, concerning the West:

"I have said that the development of this nation has scarcely begun, that her enterprises are but in their infancy. The possibilities for enormous expansion lie in the West, and provision should be made for expanding industries and increasing productions sure to come. The people of the East know little of the possibilities, the resources or the people of the West. The fertility of our soil, the wealth of our forests, the extent of our domain, the enterprise and intelligence of our people are not known in the East. Our boundless prairies, our magnificent forests, our vast mineral wealth, the healthfulness and salubrity of our climate escape your notice. Our people are but little better understood. The pioneer men and women who settled the West were strong and rugged in health as in character, full of energy, courageous in enterprise, thoughtful and ambitious. The people of the West are bound but little by ancient prejudices. They look little to the past—rather to the present and the future. They prefer yourself to your ancestry. They care little for what you have been or what you possess, but much for what you are and what you can do. In the West honest work has never ceased to be honorable. With har rugged people the sweat of labor is a kingly crown. Wealth and position earned by honest toil and laudable endeavor is esteemed more than those acquired by the toil and effort of others. As in the coming century the great development of the Old World will be on the eastern shores of Asia, so the greater growth and development of the New World will be on the shores of the Pacific. It will be in a country of magnificent scenery, where the tourist and the scientist find perpetual delight, where the husbandman never cultivates the soil or herds his flocks in vain, where snowcapped mountains surpass the eagle in its flight, where the wealth of forests is inexhaustible, and the valleys exceed in richness the golden sands of Africa; where neither the strength or energy of man, or beauty of woman, is destroyed by winter's chilly blasts, or the fierce heat of summer suns; where cyclones and sunstrokes alike are unknown; where no lingering fevers wear out the life; where men are brave and strong, and maidens fair, and all instinct with life and health and happiness; where every breeze colors the cheek, nerves the arm and clears the brain. It is there, where in future years will be the center of wealth and commerce and power of this government.

"As the Old World energies are developing and expanding in Asia, as new avenues of trade and commerce are opened up there, and in our own land 'Westward the star of empire takes its way,' the Pacific ocean will rival the Atlantic in the number of ships that plow its waters. The white wings of commerce to the West of us will equal those of the East. Great ports where our immense productive interests find an outlet—great ports of export—will be not only on the Atlantic but on the Pacific. They will be at San Francisco and at Portland, and Tacoma and Seattle. We must have room to expand and develop our energies and a market for our productions. The Hawaiian islands must not be in the possession of commercial rivals or powerful enemies. Our opportunities have come now. This is the 'tide in the affairs' of our nation, which, 'taken at its flood, leads on to fortune, and fame and wealth, and commercial power.' We must not let the opportunity slip by us. We must size it and improve it before it is too late. In every harbor of the Philiipine islands, in every port of Hawaii, upon the battlements of Porto Rico, and upon vast fleets of commercial ships that traverse the waters of the Pacific, and through a Nicaragua canal to be constructed by this government, must, and I believe will, float in triumph the flag for which Dewey conquered, for which Hobson faced a Spanish dungeon, and for which Bagley sleeps in a hero's grave."

PARSONS ON POPULISTS.

Parsons, of the Alliance Herald, the Pendleton populist organ, says, speaking editorially of the late election:

* * The peoples party of Umatilla county is a deal deader than a drowned rat. The pitiful handful of middle-of-the-roaders is all that remains of a strong organization, which two years ago came within two hundred votes of carrying the county. Two years hence it will not poll three hundred votes. Its day is over. * * * If the populists had all turned out and voted the ticket straight we would have elected the entire ticket, but populists don't believe in that sort of thing—they prefer to "exercise" what they fondly call their own "judgment." And most of them have no more judgment than a razor-back swine with the blind staggers. "Judgment," forsooth! There is not a lunatic in the asylum who has not as much judgment as the average populist. We've trained with that populist push for six years and know whereof we speak. * * * On some political questions the peoples party is eminently correct. The initiative and referendum, the government ownership of railroads and telegraphs, the abolition of the national banking system, and the graduated income tax, are good measures; but they will never become laws until advocated by some party of political intelligence, instead of a disorganized mob of bewhiskered Jeremiahs, who imagine that the free coinage of sliver is a part of the fifteenth amendment, and that steel rails are full legal tender for pie-bald pink postage stamps at a ratio of 16 to 1. We have a few—a very few—populists who are blessed with moderate intelligence, but the average—Ye Gods! It would seem that the lunatics inquirendo would have a continuous session if it once began on the populist party, for, certes, such a hungry sanhedrim of ticky-tailed, chowder-faced, rattle-pated, dimmocky lurdens never masqueraded under the name of a "party" before, nor, for that matter, ever will again. * * * The democrats have adopted the populist principles, and there is no longer an excuse for the existence of the peoples party, wherefor it dies. Peace to its ashes—it may make good fertilizer.

The Eagle does not give space to the above because of its harmony with elegant diction, but as a literary curio, and because it shows what will eminate from a brain that has been befogged, as the writer acknowledges, six years with free silver and other vagaries too numerous to mention. But Parsons is right about the death of the populist party of this county. It's as dead as Cæsar's ghost!—Milton (Umatilla county) Eagle.

And it may not be amiss to connect Columbia county with Umatilla and all other counties in the state.

QUINCY NEWS.

Miss Myrtle Jones, teacher of the Hazel Grove school, was a guest of Mrs. S. S. Way, teacher of the Quincy school, last Saturday and Sunday at the latter's home with Mrs. Nathan Tingle.

Mrs. Thad Trullinger, of Astoria, accompanied by her little son, Clyde, arrived in Quincy by Sunday evening's train to spend a week with her husband, who is employed as a fireman on an engine in the railroad gravel pit at this place.

Saldern's logging camp at this place is running on full time with a crew of sixteen men. The yarding-out is done with a donkey engine, while the logs are hauled to the Beaver by a six-horse team. The output runs from 25 to 30 logs per day, the highest day's haul being 34 logs. As the distance is two miles and a half to the rollway, this output indicates that the camp boys "get a move on them," and it is a special credit to the foreman, George Armstrong.

An offer has been made by the Astoria & Columbia River Railroad Company to grade and improve the present county road from the company's depot at this place to R. S. Payne's place, two and a half miles up the Beaver, in a first-class manner, no grade to exceed eight per cent, on condition that the settlers adjacent to the Beaver assign their riparian rights to the stream to the railroad company, so that the latter can dispense with their drawbridge across the Beaver near this place. As the Beaver is navigable for but half a mile above the railroad bridge, except when there is a high freshet in the Columbia, the dispensing with the drawbridge would be no serious disadvantage to the settlers of this vicinity. It is seldom that a steamboat ever comes up the Beaver, and then only for logs, the freight from this place being handled at the railroad depot, or at Clatskanie or Mayger. The stationary bridge the company would maintain across the Beaver would be high enough to allow tug boats and scows to pass under with ease, and as that is all the vessels that will ever navigate this stream the closing of the drawbridge by the railroad company would work no inconvenience or extra expense upon the settlers of this place. Should there be any detriment to their shipping facilities it would be more than overcome by the advantages of having a fine wagon road through the settlement capable of being used at all seasons of the year. So far, all of the property-owners but two have signed the relinquishment, and it is expected that those two will see their error and give their consent before the railroad withdraws what the other settlers consider a very equitable proposition.

One of the most enjoyable social events ever held in this place was the entertainment given last Saturday evening in the schoolhouse. The first part of the evening was taken up with a literary programme given by the pupils of the school under the direction of their teacher, Mrs. S. S. Way. Songs and recitations were leading features of the exercises. The flag drill by the flag brigade, composed of Anna and Bertha Erickson, Alice Russell, Frankie Payne, Beecher Jones, Fred Lewison, Oscar Erickson, Wilbur Payne, and Leonard Russell, led by Daisy Cross and Albert Jones, greatly pleased the audience, the intricate evolutions being carried out in a most creditable manner. At the close of their drill the brigade sang "The Red, White and Blue" in a manner that brought forth hearty applause from the audience. Another feature worthy of special mention was a school rehearsal participated in by the younger pupils of the school, in which the incidents of "deestrik" school life were given in a most comical manner. The class was conducted by Alice Russell, who acted her part as a teacher perfectly. The mock school closed with a motion song, which was finely rendered, those taking part being Alice Russell, Bertha Erickson, Miriam Lumijarvi, Peter Hendrickson, Henry Lumijarvi, Zella and Leila Jones, Andrew Mustola, and Wilbur Payne. The recitation, "Have You Written a Letter to Mother," was very prettily rendered by little Pearl Owings, a visitor from the Barr school. As a compliment to her friend, Mrs. Way, Miss Myrtle Jones, of Portland, who at present is teaching the Hazel Grove school near Clatskanie, was present and sang several pieces. Her rendition of "The Star Spangled Banner" was exceptionally fine, and the encore that it brought forth was a most flattering compliment to the lady's musical accomplishments. Miss Jones, who is a pupil of Rose Bloch, one of the Pacific coast's most noted singers, has already won a reputation as a vocalist of much promise. Her part in making the entertainment the decided success it was is greatly appreciated by the school and the teacher. As befitting the time when our country is engaged in a foreign war, the exercises were largely of a patriotic nature and the room was handsomely decorated with flags and the national colors. Our common schools should be the nursery of American patriotism, wherein our boys and girls are taught to love and honor their country and to become law-abiding citizens. That patriotism should be taught in our schools is an imperative duty we owe to our country, when we remember that there are hundreds of thousands of children of foreign parents who are largely dependent upon the schools for their knowledge of our government, and for the development of that spirit of patriotism which will make them loyal citizens of the United States. Our school will close on Friday of this week, after one of the most successful terms in its history. Mrs. S. S. Way has had rare success in handling her pupils. The progress made in their studies has been extremely satisfactory. Both the board and patrons have only words of commendation for her. Their only regret is that they cannot secure her for the ensuing term, she being under previous contract to teach in St. Helens.

A Letter to Newly Elected Officers.

County Clerk Weed has prepared and sent out the following letter this week to the newly elected justices of the peace and constables in this county, and the same may properly be applied to all other officers of the county:

"St. HELENS, Or., June 27, 1898.

"Mr.——

"Dear sir: At a general election held on the 6th day of June, 1898, you were duly elected to the office of——. Section 2687 of Hill's code provides that before entering upon your duties as such officer you shall file with the county clerk your certificate of election, with your oath of office endorsed thereon; also an official undertaking in the sum of $—, to be approved by the county clerk (other officers by the court). I enclose herewith a blank bond for you to fill out. Your certificate of election is in this office, and will be delivered to you on receipt of $1, which the law requires the clerk to collect and turn over to the county treasurer.

"I write this for the benefit of those who may not understand just what is required of them, as two years ago some of the precinct officers failed to qualify in the required time from not understanding just what to do. Very respectfully yours,

"JUDSON WEED, County Clerk."
