the regular session. And it must not be forgotten that the next assembly will be for the republicans on joint ballot, and the people of the state are expecting something to be accomplished in the way of valuable legislation.

It is easy for the fellows who put in their time chewing Battle Axe and whittling dry goods boxes around the shanty corners to plan and execute the maneuvers necessary to win battles on land or sea, but for seasoned veterans whose lives have been devoted to the study of war in all its hideousness at the front it is quite another thing.

America for Americans. "Long May it Wave Over the Home of the Free and the Land of the Brave."

COLUMBIA COUNTY'S TIMBER LANDS.

It is not an infrequent occurrence, by any means, to happen upon estimates of the world's supply of available timber, especially of the United States. To people of the Pacific coast, a statement that a timber famine is imminent seems extremely absurd, but when one bases himself in gleaming data in regard to the matter, facts become at once appreciated and their existence more fully realized. Many authorities obtainable demonstrate that the slaughter of valuable timber goes steadily onward with little heed to results, and the facts are alarming.

Northwestern Oregon and the entire western part of Washington containing the greater part of the valuable timber of this coast. Of course many thousands of acres of very valuable timber is yet to be found in Central and Southern Oregon and in parts of Central Washington, but when the thought presents itself of the rapidly growing demand for that commodity it strikes the casual observer that the supply will soon be vastly inadequate.

A new era of civilization is finding its way into countries which heretofore have had little use for a commodity such as the timber of this coast, hence the demand becomes greater, and improved business conditions in our own country are creating a growing steady demand for the product. In Japan and China, where an impetus in railroad-building and other improvements of a similar nature have only recently been inaugurated, we find a demand for good quality lumber, and that demand can be supplied only from this coast.

When we take into consideration the comparatively small scope of country to supply that and other demands, does not the situation take on an altogether different phase from that first impressed upon you when you have viewed with awe the imaginary boundless quantity of timber to be seen on every hand? For example, Columbia county contains, perhaps, as nearly as it can be estimated, 300,000 acres of timber land, and while many acres would supply a much greater quantity, yet a fair estimate would place the amount per acre at 50,000 feet. This estimate of 15,000,000,000 feet is about as fair as can be placed upon the timber of Columbia county, and while Tillamook county may possess one-fourth more and Clatsop county about an equal amount, the entire amount for Northwestern Oregon would not far overreach 50,000,000,000 feet.

This information is obtained from a very reliable source that the destruction of valuable timber on this coast is greater now than in former years when its real worth was less appreciated. Competition and demand for better grade of logs is closer than formerly, consequently one or sometimes two logs are cut from a tree and the remainder is left to rot upon the ground. In nine cases out of every ten there yet remains several thousand feet of valuable lumber in the top of the tree, but contracts demand absolutely clear logs, thus occasioning the wanton waste.

It is not misjudging to state that the price of timber lands in Columbia county will never again reach the low-water mark to which the ebb in business affairs has carried it within the last few years. A growing demand at better prices for timber lands is already noticed, and while this product is the chief stock in trade of this county, any increase in price will be gladly received. Logs now command a better price than has obtained since 1895, and it is confidently expected that a gradual increase in price will be realized.

The fisheries committee of the Astoria Progressive Commercial Association is now arranging for a fisheries congress to be held there. The matter will be taken up immediately after regatta week and it is thought that arrangements can be made so that the congress can be held in November. Prof. David Starr Jordan and many other national authorities will be present. The best means of advancing the great fishing industry of Oregon will be discussed, and it is expected that many new ideas will be brought out. The artificial propagation of salmon will be the most interesting subject to come before the congress. This matter will receive much attention and practical experiments will be made with salmon eggs from the hatcheries.

We fail to see the merit in a special session of the legislature at this late day. Of course the newly-elected members of that body would compose it whenever it is convened, and if the fifty-day period is insufficient to transact all the business, let Governor Geer reconvene the body immediately after

THE AMERICANS WIN

Spaniards Attack Americans and are Repulsed.

American Loss, Nine Killed, Forty-Eight Wounded—Spanish Loss, Estimated at 500 Killed.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The war department today received the following cablegram from Hong Kong:
 "The American troops arrived July 31st. There is an epidemic of sickness. Five deaths. The landing at the camp was delayed on account of the high surf."
 "To gain an approach to the city General Green's outposts were advanced to continue the line from Canlon Real to the beach on Sunday night. The Spanish attacked sharply. The artillery outposts behaved well and held their position. It was necessary to call out the entire brigade. The Spanish loss is rumored to be heavy."
 "Our loss in killed follows:
 "Tenth Pennsylvania—John Brady and Walter Brown; infantry; William Brington, Jacob Hall, Jesse Ross, William Stillwagon.
 "First California—Maurice Just.
 "Third artillery—Eli Dawson.
 "First Colorado—Fred Springstead.
 "Forty-ninth wounded, ten seriously."
 (Signed) "Messrs."
 Secretary Alger regards the Manila fight as the beginning of a general attack on the Philippine capital.

HONG KONG, Aug. 9.—The German steamer Petrosch, which left Manila August 6, arrived here today, and brought the first news of the severe engagement between the Spaniards and Americans near Manila. The Americans were victorious, and lost only 11 men killed and 47 wounded. The Spanish losses are not known but are reported to be heavy. The insurgent forces remained neutral.

The attack was made on the American camp between Cavite and Manila, during the night of July 31. The Spaniards, who numbered 8000 men, made several desperate charges upon the American lines, but each time the fire of the Americans drove them back, and finally broke the Spanish camp, causing the enemy to retreat.

Later, however, the Spaniards made a second attack, but were again repulsed, and retreated into the bush, keeping up an incessant fire on the roads leading to Manila, over which they apparently expected the American troops to advance.

Some estimates place the Spanish losses at over 500 killed and wounded.

LUMBER ORDERS COME WEST.

Pacific Coast Supplies the Nation With Large Timber.

Tacoma Ledger.
 Platt B. Walker, editor of the Mississippi Valley Lumberman, one of the leading lumber journals of America, is in this city on a tour of the fir and redwood regions of the Pacific coast. Mr. Walker is one of the best informed lumbermen in the land. He is about 45 years of age, and in conversation delivers cold facts and formidable figures with the ease and rapidity of a rapid-fire gun. He says:
 "As long as the present transportation rates continue, Pacific coast mills find it more profitable to ship rough lumber to foreign ports, so the thing will adjust itself. Eastern trees are not large enough to make big timbers, and nearly all such orders go to Puget sound or Oregon, no matter what kind firm they are placed."
 "The red cedar shingle from Puget sound has entered the field to stay, and is used in every town in the United States. A rival was threatened a few years ago in the Southern cypress, but it proved so much inferior that it went completely out of use."
 "While you have no rival in the Northern Central states, the same cannot be said of the South."
 "From Galveston to Mobile and northward to Arkansas there is an enormous out of yellow pine, and as there is almost no home market it is nearly all shipped north. Much of it goes right into Minneapolis. Shipping facilities are poor in Texas, and but little is shipped to foreign ports."
 "Minneapolis, which may be taken as a lumber center, is 2300 miles from Puget sound and 1800 from the Texas lumber district, so you see the opportunities are about equal in that respect for both sections, but Washington fir is undoubtedly going to keep the lead."
 "This region has a great advantage in logging. The logs here are average 90 feet without limbs, while with us and in the South 40 feet is considered fair."
 "The pine logs now being cut go about 12 to the thousand, while your fir logs will cut 2000 feet to the log."
 "I have known one pine tract of five million feet to average 22 logs to the thousand, but that is an extreme case."
 "While economy is desired, the danger of exhaustion of the timber supply in Oregon and Washington is much exaggerated."
 "While the government experts are sincere and are painstaking, and are scientific in their researches, they are not infallible, and their results are not always borne out by fact."
 "Twenty years ago they announced that if the rate of cutting remained stationary the timber of Minnesota would be exhausted in 25 years. Now the rate of cutting has been trebled, and today the date for exhaustion is still put 25 years ahead."
 "The trouble is that their data is weak. They do not know how much there is to begin with; they don't know how much has been cut, and they do not know how much there is left."
 "Of course, fires do much damage, but they are not worse here than they are in Minnesota or Wisconsin, in fact not so bad, for they run there in the living trees."
 "The timber really never is all cut for the loggers go over the same ground several times. They are still logging land in Minnesota which was first cut 25 years ago. Small trees grow up, and logs considered worthless before become valuable."
 "The time will come when all the coast hemlock will be eagerly sought. It is a far better wood than it is ever given credit with being."
 "There is no question of competition between Washington fir and the white pine of the North Central states."
 "In the first place the demand is large enough for both, and also the freight rates limit the coast trade in the East to a class of lumber which does not grow to any large extent East."
 "Coast shipments to the East consist of either shingles, big timbers, or high-grade dressed lumber. The nature of the Eastern market makes it more profitable to supply the demand for rough an ordinary dressed lumber than to devote too much attention to the highest class, or perhaps to state it more clearly, we cannot get enough of it to supply the demand."

PEACE AT HAND.

Negotiations Are Said to be Practically Closed.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—The answer of Spain to the terms of peace was not entirely satisfactory to this government, and further negotiations are in progress today. Details results in the way of a complete acceptance is looked for by tomorrow night, and possibly later today. One prominent official who participated in the conference said:
 "The answer is not enough, but we are hopeful for the result."
 "Further negotiations then are necessary?" was asked.
 "Yes, but we look for something definite tomorrow."
 Beyond this, no member of the cabinet is willing to go. The president and Secretary Day are exerting every effort to prevent news of the progress of negotiations transpiring until a definite result can be announced.

Today several members of the cabinet were in conference with the president regarding the situation. Shortly before 11:30 Secretary Day, who had been in conference with the French ambassador, called to consult the president regarding peace negotiations. The president evidently was not yet come to the administration, practically official, that the negotiations are still in progress, added to the fact that the utmost secrecy has been imposed by the president. Members of the cabinet believe that by Friday morning, at the latest, and probably before, a definite peace outcome will be assured beyond all doubt.

At the White House it was understood that Cambon would transmit to Spain today a cablegram stating that complete and immediate acceptance of the terms imposed without reservation would be essential to effecting peace under the present terms offered by the United States.

In this connection it has developed just before the Spanish answer was delivered yesterday, that President McKinley has announced that an extra session of the senate would be held doubtless in November.

With the peace situation at that stage where a complete agreement is regarded likely at any moment, the discussion has again started as to convening an extra session, but McKinley within the past 24 hours has said positively that he has no intention of calling the house together, though, of course, the senate will have to meet in extra session to ratify the treaty of peace. The president added that the preliminary details incident to the treaty of peace would take so much time that the senate would not have to meet until November.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—The preliminary negotiations looking toward the consummation of peace advanced a long step today when the secretary of state and the French ambassador agreed upon the terms upon which future negotiations for a treaty are to be conducted, and reduced these to the form of a protocol. This protocol, it is true, is yet to be signed, and is to be submitted to the Spanish government before the formal signatures are affixed, but the administration's view as to the progress made today was set out in Secretary Day's statement, which follows:
 "We have agreed upon a protocol, embodying the proposed terms for the negotiation of a treaty of peace, including the evacuation of Cuba and Porto Rico, and it is expected the protocol will be executed. It can be stated that the terms are precisely those laid down by the president in his original note about a week ago. It is believed that nothing but a few formalities remain to be disposed of to secure the signature to the protocol."
