

"Durability is Better Than Show."

The wealth of the multi-millionaires is not equal to good health. Riches without health are a curse, and yet the rich, the middle classes and the poor alike have, in Hood's Sarsaparilla, a valuable assistant in getting and maintaining perfect health. It never disappoints.

Scurfula.—Three years ago our son, now eleven, had a serious case of scurfula and scaly skin with dreadful sores, discharging and itching constantly. He could not walk. Several physicians did not help for sixteen months. Three months' treatment with Hood's Sarsaparilla cured him perfectly well. We are glad to tell others of it. —Mrs. W. L. Laid, Ottawa, Kas.

Nausea.—"Vomiting spells, dizziness and prostration troubled me for years. Head neuralgia, grew weak and could not sleep. My age was against me, but Hood's Sarsaparilla cured me thoroughly. My weight increased from 125 to 145 pounds. I am the mother of nine children. Never felt so well and strong since I was married as I do now." —Mrs. M. O. Waters, 3320 P. street, Washington, D. C.

Eczema.—"We had to tie the hands of our two-year-old son on account of eczema on face and limbs. No medicine even helped until we used Hood's Sarsaparilla, which soon cured." —Mrs. A. V. W. W. 125 Montgomery St., Paterson, N. J.

DROPS Cured of Rheumatism.
CANNOT FIND WORDS ENOUGH TO PRAISE YOUR WONDERFUL REMEDY "5 DROPS."

[TRADE MARK.]

Swanson Rheumatic Cure Co., Chicago, Gentlemen:—I thought that I would write you a statement and tell you how I have got along since I used your "5 DROPS." I must say that I am entirely well now, thanks to your wonderful remedy. It has accomplished more good from the simple bottle and the dollar bottle than the thirty dollar bottle of medicine I have used of other manufacturers. I tried all kinds of medicine for Rheumatism but could not get any relief from the 50 cent bottle of yours. I got a sample bottle of yours "5 DROPS" and after taking the same for four days I began to have less of those severe pains reaching through my body. After I got the sample bottle used up I could begin to rest some every night. After I had used about half the dollar bottle then all my pains left me. I don't want a moment of it when I could sleep again at night without any more suffering. I am so thankful to you and your "5 DROPS" that I cannot find words enough to praise your wonderful remedy for the cure of Rheumatism, and I can safely recommend it to all suffering humanity and say that they cannot purchase any better medicine than "5 DROPS" for all their ills. Thanking you, gentlemen, for all your kindness, I remain, forever, your friend.

Suffered the Tortures of the Damned.

President Swanson Rheumatic Cure Co., Chicago, My Dear Sir:—After suffering the tortures of the damned for a long time from an attack of Rheumatism, I wish to say that your Rheumatic Cure "5 DROPS" has cured me of all my troubles, which were all caused by one common cause, Rheumatism. I had Heart Trouble, Film, Bladder Trouble and Constipation. I would not take 500 and do without the remedy even if it only cured the Catarrh for me, which it has done. Therefore, willingly take the money for the sale of your medicine, for they are a boon to mankind.

"5 DROPS" cures Rheumatism, Sciatica, Neuralgia, Dyspepsia, Backache, Asthma, Hay Fever, Catarrh, Sleeplessness, Nervousness, Nervous and Neuritic Headaches, Migraine, Catarrh, Heart Weakness, Group, Swelling, La Grippe, Malaria, Cramping Stomach.

For THIRTY DAYS LONGER to enable sufferers to give "5 DROPS" at least a trial, we will send you one bottle free of all my troubles, which were all caused by one common cause, Rheumatism. I had Heart Trouble, Film, Bladder Trouble and Constipation. I would not take 500 and do without the remedy even if it only cured the Catarrh for me, which it has done. Therefore, willingly take the money for the sale of your medicine, for they are a boon to mankind.

Unqualified Success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. ELIZABETH WHELOCK, Magnolia, Iowa, in the following letter describes her recovery from a very critical condition:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM—I have been taking your Vegetable Compound, and am now ready to sound its praises. It has done wonders for me in relieving me of a tumor.

"My health has been poor for three years. Change of life was working upon me. I was very much bloated and was a burden to myself. Was troubled with mothering spells, also palpitation of the heart and that bearing-down feeling, and could not be on my feet much.

"I was growing worse all the time, until I took your medicine.

"After taking three boxes of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Lozenges, the tumor passed from me.

"My health has been better ever since, can now walk quite a distance and am troubled no more with palpitation of the heart or bloating. I recommend your medicine to all sufferers from female troubles.

MY BABY'S KISS.

My baby's kiss is the sweetest thing that the God of Love as a gift can bring. It comes from the lips like the crystal dew.

Dropped from the flowers on the mountain side, And it means a love that is pure and true, And that peace and joy in the heart abide.

I would rather have that tiny kiss Than any other earthly bliss; And to feel those hands on my bearded cheek Brings me face to face with an angel's soul, That unfolds a glimpse of the path I seek Through the pillars of pearl to the heavenly goal.

GABRIELLE OF THE FENS.

THE shades of evening were just falling on the little hamlet of Blarvarre. The trees just touched by the parting rays of the setting sun dipped their branches a little lower in the breeze as if to catch what glory was left of the former radiance of the heavens above and rustled their leaves in defiance of the coming black cloud of night.

Underneath one of them stood a man whose face seemed to have borrowed some of the heaviness from the evening clouds. He was leaning despondently against the bark with his eye glued upon the door of a tiny cottage, which stood out clearly from the others by reason of its newly whitewashed walls.

Every now and then he turned away with a long-drawn sigh and re-echoed a step or two, only to return once more and center his gaze upon the little mean dwelling house.

Suddenly his eye brightened up as if by magic, his breath came in short, quick gasps, and he took a step hastily forward as the door of the cottage slowly opened and the form of a young and beautiful girl appeared in the entrance.

"Gabrielle," he whispered eagerly. "The girl started back with a startled cry.

"You, again!" she exclaimed as the light from the cottage fell upon his eager upturned face. "Will you still continue to pester me with your presence, monsieur?"

"This—and to me," stammered the man in pained surprise. "Have you forgotten so soon the promise you made to me, Gabrielle, that day when you said you loved me?"

"I always forget things that are best forgotten," said the girl carelessly. "Twas but a moment's foolishness, why remember it?"

"Ay, but you shall remember it," said the man, stung to sudden fierceness. "Do you think, girl, you can play with a heart like mine, and with the river so near at hand, too?"

The girl tossed her head contemptuously, and laughed with much derision. "And do you think to frighten me?" she said lightly. "I have heard such threats before. Only last week Jean of the Brachen yonder swore to blow out his brains for my sake, and in truth I fear he has not found them yet, for to my knowledge he is still whole-headed. But there, I will cease to tell you of my foolish tales, for I mean to settle down and live quietly as becomes a maid betrothed."

"Betrothed," echoed the man in sudden alarm. "It is not true, tell me at once, Gabrielle!"

"It is true," said the girl doggedly. "Then may heaven help you both," said the man, and drawing his cloak round him, he strode away into the night muttering to himself so fiercely that the girl shuddered in spite of her professions of indifference to his threats, and altering her mind about her evening ramble, turned once more into the house and carefully bolted and barred the door.

It was a strange thing that a girl so young and charming as Gabrielle should live so entirely alone. Relations she had none, and friends of her own sex were few and not over sincere. Lovers she had plenty, but they proved but a source of annoyance to her and quarreled constantly among themselves when they should have sympathized, for she treated them all with like coquetry and indifference.

Gabrielle of the Fens she was called, for nothing else better than to spend her time barefooted among the swampy banks of the river-side, seeking for new treasures that were to be found and reveling in all the joys of nature.

On this particular night nature had little charms for her, she peeped from the blinds of her little window and turned away with a foreboding in her heart of something she knew not what. Time dragged heavily that night, and at last wearied out in both mind and body she threw herself upon her bed dressed as she was, and slept heavily.

She was awakened the next morning with a sense of acute coldness, and sitting up in bed, shivering, she discovered that the floor was covered with water. Half asleep she wondered vaguely what had happened. Then her full senses came back to her. A wild fear rose to her mind, and was confirmed by the sight that met her view when she sprang to the window.

A wonderful sight, indeed, one great expanse of water for miles around, from out of which the tree tops and the roofs of the houses appeared at intervals to break the torrent of its rush. Branches of trees and other obstacles came floating by, but not a human being was in sight. Gabrielle's first thought was that every soul had been drowned, and the next that everybody had managed to get away and had deserted her. A sob of self-pity rose to her throat and she wrung her hands in agonizing despair.

"Louis! Louis!" she cried happily, calling upon the despoiled lover of the night before in her hour of terror. "Who calls Louis?" came a voice from the water, "surely not Mistress Gabrielle," and looking round the girl saw the very person whose name she had called upon, sitting comfortably in his canoe and staying the motion of the boat with a hand upon the adjacent window-sill.

"Louis!" said the girl again delightedly, but with an anxious gaze still upon the cruel water.

"Ah, 'tis Louis now," said the man. "Last night 'twas monsieur. How the aspect of things can change in a few hours, can it not, madamelle?"

"Don't reproach me, now," exclaimed the girl hurriedly. "You have come to save his life, have you not, dear Louis? The terrible floods! See, the water is nearly up to my window, and I am so frightened!"

"Where is that fine fellow to whom you are betrothed? It is his privilege to save you. I will not deprive him of it," returned the man, surlily. "The girl's face flushed angrily.

"He has forgotten me and has gone to save himself, like a coward," she said. "If ever I escape from this terror alive I will confront him with it."

"And if I save you," said the man in the canoe, with a little more eagerness in his voice, "what do I get for my pains?"

The girl was silent and suddenly averted her face.

"A bargain's a bargain," he went on, pressing his advantage. "If it shall be death, say so, or perhaps you may choose life. Whatever it is, we will share it together, Gabrielle. Come, we are both young; it would be terrible to die like rats in a hole. Say the word, sweetheart, and you shall be in my boat before many seconds have flown."

Gabrielle was not a heroine; death was full of terrors to her. The rapidly rising waters filled her with a sense of intense horror. Life in any condition looked bright to her just then. She turned her eyes toward the man in the boat, and scanned his strong, determined features. Even while her proud spirit revolted against the tyranny of the man, she yielded to it. Such are the ways of women.

"I think," she said deliberately, "I prefer even life with you to death, and throwing a shawl around her head, suffered herself to be lowered into the boat, which the man quickly drew up to her window.

For some time neither spoke a word, the man using all his energy to keep the boat steady, so strong was the current of the tide, the girl looking round her in wonder as they steered their way through the floating objects, which were being carried away from the deserted village. Once they passed a child's empty cradle, which was floating swiftly along with the tide.

The girl shuddered and the tears welled up into her eyes.

"Do you think," she said, "that any one could have perished? Is it possible that I should have been the only soul left among them all?"

"Quite possible," said the man, "for I warned them all and saw them all go long before."

"You thought of me?" interrupted the girl, anxiously.

"Well, I was unwilling to disturb your slumber," replied the man, "and kept watch throughout the night, until my boat nearly rose on a level with your window."

"You wanted to frighten me into—"

"Exactly," said the man. "You had it all your own way before, and I thought it was about time to get the upper hand."

"And where are we going now?" said the girl, in a low voice.

"To St. Lawrence, where you will meet all your friends, and that gallant lover of yours, whom we will not call by the name of friend. Gabrielle, tell me my night's work has not been in vain."

The girl laughed softly, and leaning forward, placed her hand in that of the man's.

"I am content with the bargain we made, if you are," she said. "One knows one's friends when danger threatens, and if you will but brave life by my side you are a pluckier man than I thought you. As to that other man, never speak his name to me again."

"The Rambler."

Tried to Comply.

The manufacturer of a certain brand of cigar advertised it far and wide as "The Unparalleled—Everybody Smokes It." One day he received a letter from a man with whom he was only slightly acquainted, running thus:

"Dear Smithy—I want one of those cigars everybody is smoking. Send it to me by mail, securely done up in a small pasteboard box. Yours truly, Brownson."

Not even a stamp was enclosed for postage, but Smithy took some pains to comply with the request, and after a lapse of two or three days Brownson received by mail, duly packed in a small box, a stump of a cigar three-quarters of an inch long, accompanied by the following note:

"Dear Brownson—Impossible to send one that everybody is smoking, but here is one that fifteen separate newsboys have smoked on. Yours truly, Smithy."

The Natural Cure for Indigestion.

Do you have pain in the stomach after eating? Do you have a yellow tongue? Wind on the stomach? Constipation? These things arise from indigestion and Dyspepsia.

Digestion depends on digestive fluids or ferments secreted by certain glands. When the secretion becomes insufficient, indigestion results. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People cause these glands to resume their normal action and good digestion follows.

Artificial ferments (of which most so-called Dyspepsia cures are composed) may give temporary relief, but Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People afford a permanent cure.

Four digestion often causes irregularity of the heart's action. This frequently may be mistaken for real organic heart disease. A case in point: Mrs. Ellen Gibson, Newport, Ind., had suffered for four years with stomach trouble. The gases generated by the indigestion pressed on the heart, and caused an irregularity of its action. She had much pain in her stomach which was most severe at night. Doctors were tried in vain; the patient became weaker, despondent, and feared in passing death. She noticed that in intervals in which her stomach did not ache her heart's action became normal. Reasoning correctly that her digestion was at fault she procured the proper medicine to treat that trouble and with immediate good results. Her appetite came back, the choking spells became less frequent and finally ceased. Her weight, which had been greatly reduced, was restored and she now weighs more than for years.

That others may know the means of cure we give the name of the medicine used—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. These pills contain all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. —New York, Greenwood, Ind.
