London, August 24 .- At a meeting of the Bar Iron Association in Birmingham yesterday Sir Benjamin Hinkley. the well-known colliery proprietor and ironmaster, who presided, attributed the high price of iron to the action of the owners. He ridiculed the idea that the Americans, "who are sending a lew tons of iron, in reality steel, to this country," were going to command the trade of the world. Ebenezer Parks, member of parliament for Centrai Birmingham, said English values would be brought down in consequence of the importation of American iron at present prices. The meeting adopted a resolution declaring that American competition was not serious enough to justify a reduction of current prices, and deciding that these must be maintained until raw material is chesper.
