AUGUST 31, 1900.

Tax butter industry in Oregon is in its infancy. Within the next few years it will be rapidly developed with results of great financial importance to the State. Especially is this true of Western Oregon, where conditions are well suited to dairying. During this development stage everything possible should be done to lead the farmer to adopt the best methods, so that the margin of profit will be sufficient to encourage others to embark in the business.

One man is saving money to build a house and another is trying to sell his for less than it cost to build. One man is spending all he can make taking his girl to theatres and sending her flowers, with the hopes of making her his wife, while his neighbor is using what money he has in trying to get a divorce. One man escapes the diseases flesh is heir to and gets killed on the railroad. Another escapes with only a scratch and dies with the whooping cough. One man stands off his creditors and goes traveling or to the hot springs, while the other stays home and pays his debts.

SENATOR JONES, of Arkansas, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, is one of the directors in the American Cotton Company, a corporation with 300 plants in the cotton States and controlling the round-bale process. Some interesting legal testimony on this point is given in a dispatch from Waco, Texas, printed a few days since. The American Cotton Company is shown to have an omnivorous appetite for smaller concerns and for monopolizing an important industry. Senator Jones is not disposed to let the Tammany ice trust put on airs over the Western branch of the Democratic party. His cotton bale is one of the fattest monopolies yet taken into the courts.

VALUE OF OUTINGS.

Those Who Don't Enjoy Them May Read of Their Pleasures.
The lawyer and the teacher, the doctor and the preacher, the butcher, the baker and the candlestick-maker, nearly everybody but the farmer and his wife, has been or is off on a vacation. Here and there a farmer has reluctantly turned his work over to the hired man for a few days and taken an outing, but as a class they plod along in the old ruts three hundred and sixty-five days in the year.

How is it with the farmer's wife? She cannot relegate her work to the hired girl for even a few days, for she rarely has one. She has staid at home so long, it is almost universally supposed that there she must stay. To go camping for a week or two would be an unheard-of innovation.
Some very wise people, ever ready with suggestions regarding the people's business, advise that she buy bakers' goods and canned meats, serve cold meals for a few days, and rest and recuperate in the hammock. A hammock is a very good place in which to spend a leisure hour, but the imperative need of the farmer's wife is not leisure but change. So long as she remains at home, she labors with the same thoughts, the thoughts will invariably run in the accustomed channels, and the lands and feet will soon follow. A day spent entirely away from home brings more in the way of rest and recuperation than several days of comparative leisure amid customary surroundings.

When we go for a few hours' ride, see other people's homes, catch a glimpse of new faces, if only the plowman and the reaper, the milkmaid or the housewife at their homely toil, life takes on new interest; we return to our daily tasks with an added zest. It is a positive luxury, trivial as it may appear, to the woman who goes in and week out has been cooking, canning, pickling, preserving, to go from home and see something that some one else has prepared; to lie cozily in bed of a morning, hearkening to the rattle of kettle and snore; to scent the aroma of coffee and breakfast colors which are wafted to the senses from the kitchen, and expectantly awaiting the summons to the morning meal some one else's hands have made ready. Neither mind nor body will long retain elasticity and vigor without an occasional change of environment.
"Iron sharpeneth iron, so a man sharpeneth the countenance of his friend." New faces, new scenes, contact with new people, give new impetus and interest.

With careful planning, the work of the house can be made comparatively light for a week or two. In nearly every neighborhood some one can be found to take for a few days at least, if not, buy a supply of bread, cookies, canned meat and vegetables, as recommended; feed the milk to the pigs and calves, instead of scurrying out to the old hampock, if by hook or crook an hour's leisure is secured, let us up and away, and leave dull care behind. Possibly pater familias will open wide his eyes in astonishment. But never mind, when we get back he can take his turn; the gain will more than compensate for temporary inconvenience and slight financial loss.

Perhaps the time has been when farmer's wives were largely represented in insane asylums, but that time is past. Increased opportunities of culture in town and hamlet have developed mind and body. Her horizon, even now too often bounded by her kitchen walls, does not, as of yore, limit her vision. She now has internal resources and a broader outlook, but the necessity of an occasional change is, if possible, more imperative. With growth have come larger possibilities.
Why should not agriculturists have as good a time as those in other industries? Why should not the women of the farm have a vacation as well as the women of the town or city? They should; and they can if they will.

There is much indisputable evidence that cheap coal will soon be laid down in Portland. Good coal, both bituminous and lignite, exists in paying quantities within easy reach of that city, and the only thing needed is a little capital and energy to place it upon the market. Those who ought to know assert that before 1901 Portland will be a central market for cheap fuel.
Some of the leading capitalists of the city, including the Corbetts, Ladds, President Mohler and prominent O. R. & N. officials are interested in coal prospects, and the people of Portland will be furnished a large coal supply for that market.
Only proper transportation is needed to get the coal to market. Plans are under way to furnish the transportation, so that it is safe to say one of Portland's greatest needs is in a fair way soon to be realized.
There are other irons in the fire which promise to become factors in contributing to the city's future greatness in the matter of coal supply. Right now there are people willing to take at cost bonds for building a railroad to the Nehalem coal prospects, if the people of Portland will equip and run the road.
It is known that coal exists in large bodies at the head of the Nehalem, around Pittsburg, and all that is needed is the proper means of transportation. A railroad could be built at an average expense, as by following the meanderings of streams comparatively easy grades could be maintained.
Parties previously mentioned in this connection are already working on a road, incorporated to run from a point near noble to the Nehalem River and on to the Coast, but the promoters say its purpose is simply to tap the intervening timber belt. By this route it would be an easy matter to tap the vast coal beds that are known to exist at the headwaters of the Nehalem.
Prof. J. S. Diller, of the United States Geological Survey, in a report about Nehalem coal, says the following:
"The Upper Nehalem coal field, while it has a length of over ten miles, is, as far as known, not over twenty miles in width, so that the whole area of the field is less than twenty square miles. Nevertheless, with two beds of coal, one six and the other nine feet in thickness, it ought to yield a quantity of coal of commercial importance, if upon practical tests the coal is proved to be good enough to create a demand for it, and if facilities are provided for cheap transportation. I present the best outcrops are not reached, by even a poor road."

VERNONIA VARIETIES.

Frank Tracy and wife moved last week into the Brink house.
U. M. Beeghly went out to St. Helens and Portland this week on business.
H. K. Shirk, the new teacher, and family, will occupy the Maynard property.
Most all of the Nehalem birch wooders will attend the Teachers' Institute at Clatskanie next week.
Herbert McNutt, of Forest Grove visited the first part of the week with his uncle, C. S. McNutt and family.
Mr. A. M. Randolph, of Upper Pebble Creek, who works at Smith & Thomas' mill, spent the Sabbath with the home folks.
L. P. Spencer and Maggie went to Forest Grove last week. Mr. Spencer brought in a load of supplies for the winter.
Supt. I. H. Copeland was in the Nehalem last week visiting schools. While here he was the guest of Dr. and Mrs. Hatfield.
Uncle Joe Coulter has blackberry bushes with the second crop almost ripe and some in bloom for the third time this season.
The new cottage of F. A. Zillgitt has taken on a beautiful pea green coat of paint during the past two weeks, being the handiwork of Mr. Uhlman.
W. W. Allen went down the river below Jewell the latter part of last week and brought home an eight-horse-power engine with which to run his new chop mill.
Postmaster C. S. McNutt and family returned from the Tillamook Coast Friday afternoon. They report having had a fine time and all are improved in health.
L. W. VanDyke and Miss Alice Soule will be compelled to have vacation in their schools the next three or four weeks on account of nearly all their pupils having gone home.
F. M. Parker and E. G. Shannahan were hauling lumber from Smith & Thomas' mill last week, the former for L. W. VanDyke, who will build a root house, and the latter for his brother Omar's barn.
Ira E. Wheeler, of Reedville, and a Mr. Dutton were last week looking up the prospect of starting a camp of Modern Woodmen. They put in a camp at Delena Monday night and think of returning to work up this territory in the near future.
Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Lindstrom, son-in-law and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. Malinseth, who came here last spring from Minnesota, intending to make the Nehalem their home, started back to their former home the first of the week. They do not dislike Oregon, but Mr. Lindstrom can find work in Minn. more suitable to his liking and for this reason returns.
Omar C. Spencer went to Portland Monday and after visiting with friends there two or three days, went on to Palo Alto, California, and will enter the Freshman class in Stanford University, which opens the school year next week. We shall miss Omar, but rejoice that he has the opportunity to obtain a higher education. The course he will take is a select one bearing on law, but will give him the A. B. degree in four years, and the L. B. degree in three years more. May all his aspirations be fully realized, and an abundant success in his life work follow.
Mrs. Hatfield's school at the Wilson school house will close this week. It was her intention to have a picnic for the children, parents and friends on the last day, but finding that so many were going to the hopfields this week, the picnic was held last Friday. There was a large attendance, the whole neighborhood attending, with others from outside the district. The forenoon was devoted to the regular school work. At the noon hour a very bountiful dinner was served, which was thoroughly enjoyed by all. The afternoon was given over to recitations by the children and some timely speeches by the older people. It was altogether a day well spent. Mrs. Hatfield has given most excellent satisfaction to the patrons of the school and there has been a unanimous invitation by directors and parents that she teach again next year.

NEHALM COAL FIELDS.

Plans Being Perfected in Portland to Build Railroad.

It had not been so many conditions running for a large man in the city. Principal among this latter class is the members of the city council, who wanted $12,000 from the circus people for two day's performance.

A Mother Tells How She Saved Her Little Daughter's Life.

I am the mother of eight children and have had a great deal of experience with medicines. Last summer my little daughter had the dysentery in its worst form. I tried everything I could think of, but nothing seemed to do her any good. I saw by an advertisement in our paper that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy was highly recommended and sent and got a bottle at once. It proved to be one of the very best medicines we ever had in the house. It saved my little daughter's life. I am anxious for every mother to know what an excellent medicine it is. Had I known it at first it would have saved me a great deal of anxiety and my little daughter much suffering. Yours truly, Mrs. Geo. F. BORDICK, Liberty, R. I. For sale at the St. Helens Pharmacy.

Timber Land, Act June 3, 1896.
NOTICE FOR PUBLICATION.
UNITED STATES LAND OFFICE,
OREGON CITY, OR., June 27, 1900.
NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT IN compliance with the provisions of the act of Congress of June 3, 1896, entitled "An act for the sale of lands in the States of California, Oregon, Nevada and Washington territory," as extended to all the Public Land States by act of August 22, 1898, HARRY D. BROWN, of Clatskanie County, Clatskanie, State of Washington, has this day filed in this office his sworn statement No. 18, for the tract of land in the northwest 1/4 of section No. 18, township No. 6 north, range No. 2 west, and will offer to show that the said tract is more valuable for its timber or stone than for agricultural purposes, and to establish his claim to said land before the Register and Receiver of this office, at Oregon City, Oregon, on Friday, the 7th day of September, 1900. He names as witnesses: John Archibald, of Clatskanie, Oregon; and all persons claiming adversely the above-described lands are requested to file their claims in this office on or before said 7th day of September, 1900.
