The Senator has waged unceasing warfare on the Republican party since that day, all to no purpose, however. He comes back humble and penitent, and places his name on the Republican cancus list in the Senate.

We have received volume I, number of the Rainier Gazette, edited and published by Mr. C. W. Herman, a veteran newspaper man, who formerly conducted the Rainier Review. The first number of the paper was iesued last week and presents a very creditable appearance typographically, and the unmistakable evidence of a healthy patronage by the people of the town. The first number of the Oregonian, issued December 4th, fifty years ago, was a credit, considering opportunities, and today it classes with the foremost journals of the Nation, all the time striving for the development of the country and growing to prominence and power with it.

An Eastern statistician says that "Oregon alone, if as thickly populated of the proposition is lucidly given in the plaint of the prospective timber purchaser, who was forced to abandon his plans for an extensive enterprise to get an outlet for his product. Now isn't that a very plenant condition of affairs, and one calculated to add to the confidence of the papile in the ability of the party in power to administer public matters, greatly in contrast to conditions which we experienced a few years ago. In addition to this, during the month of November the public debt was reduced over $3,000.-000. The gold standard iss whas proven to be very wise legislation, which, together with a little tariff on imports, is keeping the public reasury in a very healthy condition. ment of proper damages. "When the owner of timber land in Washington desires a right of way through his neighbor's woods," he said, "all that is noccessary is to apply to the County Court to have the damages assessed, and a read is declared open forthwith. As the highway is usually of more benefit than damage, the roads are often put through without any cost to the applicant.

"In Oregon, however, there appears to be no way of opening up a road by law, owing to a constitutional provision, or something, and so the man who desires to cut his timber for the markethas to pay his next asighbor from I to 50 cents per thousand for the privilege of crossing an 80 acre patch which lies between his stumps and the stream where the raft is being put together. This is one reason why timber land speculators are willing to pay more for Washington timber lands, though the location may be no better nor the timber heavier than in this State. I was on the point of purchasing 640 acres in one tract, in Columbia Caunty, last week, but I could make no bargain with the owner of the narrow strip between it and the Columbia in regard to hauling the timber across bis land, and so the project fell through.

"Not being a lawyer, I don't know what remedy should be applied, but as the Legislature meets soon, I would like to see some steps taken toward changing a law that works much hardship on the owners of timber lands. In Wisconsin, where I came from, no such difficulty is ever enceuntered in crossing another man's land, and Oregon is the first State I have struck where such conditions exist."—Friday's Oregonian.

The State scalp bounty law is being ignored in all but a few of Oregon's Counties and the sum of $90,000 is due the slayers of coyotes in consequence. The law passed by the last Legislature imposed a tax of 1 cent a head on sheep and 1/3 of a mill on all other property, the sum so realized to be paid out for coyote scalps. The State has been issuing warrants in lieu of cash for these proverbial man, or frosty girlles from thirty to sixty, who delight in acting kitenish and eaying "we girls", or coyote scalps, and these warrants are only worth 70 cents on the dollar, which shows that speculators have no great confidence in their ever being called in.
