OCTOBER 4, 1901.

THE agitation for a special session of the legislature to appropriate funds with which to start the Lewis and Clark 1905 exposition, is not wholly without merit. Members of the legislature throughout the state have received many letters asking their opinions in regard to the matter, and the replies in almost every instance favor such an idea. The power to call a special session rests entirely with the governor, but Mr. Geer will not act, neither will the members insist until they have ascertained the views of the people in regard to the matter. We are willing to say that if there is to be such an exposition it is high time the thing is assuming some definite shape. Not very much can be done toward planning for the exposition until it is known what the state will do in a financial way to aid it. If this important action is deferred until the regular session of 1903 the time will be very limited in which to make plans and develop the thing in time for the opening in the early summer of 1905. The location ought to be selected and preparations begun early next spring. If there is any advantage to be gained by having such an exposition, which there certainly is, let's get at it at once.

NOTWITHSTANDING the great expansion of the dairying business in this state of late, the supply of butter is not equal to the demand, and Eastern butter is finding its way to this market again. Last year there was no Eastern butter brought here, but the long spell of dry weather the last summer had the effect of lessening the output, and the population has been increasing rapidly, consequently Eastern butter will have to be imported. Last spring, when the supply of butter began to exceed the demand, a large quantity—some 150,000 pounds—was bought up and put in cold storage. This has been nearly all disposed of already, and as the present output of the dairies is not enough to supply the demand the shortage will have to be made by Eastern butter. Eggs of late have been scarce, and several carloads have been sent from the East. With eggs at 25 cents a dozen in Portland and 16 cents a dozen in Chicago, there is a margin for importers. After harvest, the output of eggs always increases, and it is said that there will be more chickens engaged in laying eggs in this state this fall than ever before. It is highly desirable that Oregon should produce enough eggs and butter for home consumption, at least.—Oregonian.

THE awards received by the exhibitors of cattle from this county this year at the state fair is a matter for congratulation, and is one of the most valuable methods of advertising our county yet put to employment. Our home people are particularly entitled to no small amount of commendation because of their success attained through their own unaided efforts. Their success is the result of hard work and determination, originally without a bank account to give them a boost. It is not our desire to speak disparagingly of the success of others engaged in introducing high-grade stock into our county. We welcome such conditions and glory in the success attained through honest efforts to win laurels at the state exhibition, but in these cases the financial aid necessary was not hammered out by the owners of the stock by the hardest kind of licks around the dairy farm. Messrs. Frakes, West and Collins, of Scappoose, have the hearty best wishes of all good citizens of the county for continued success in their laudable endeavors, and their satisfaction at results and pride in their herds should be shared like and alike by us all. Let us congratulate the gentlemen and give them encouragement to strive for even greater results.

WHILE practically all of the leading monarchies and twenty-one out the twenty-two republics of the world have laws for the desecration of their flags, the United States, which has the best flag on earth and is looked to by the nations of the world as the model of free representative government, has no national law to protect its emblem from insult and degradation, says the Tillamook Headlight. Consequently the United States flag, which has led our army and navy in battle, has been consecrated by the blood of our soldiers and sailors, and should be held sacred as the emblem of the country and all that it represents, may be and actually is used as a part of advertisements, trademarks and wrappers of all classes of merchandise, from dry goods, edibles and tobacco to whisky, toilet paper and door mats, as a background for political portraits and mottoes, as costumes of masqueraders, clowns and prize fighters, and, still worse, has been insulted, rotten-egged, torn down, dragged through the dust, trampled under foot and burned, and all without any recourse in law. Through the efforts of the Flag association and other patriotic citizens about half of the states have passed flag laws and the enactment of a national law is confidently expected in the near future.

TIE LOOSE THE TREASURY.

Under the startling heading, "An Overflowing Treasury," the Oregon City Courier-Herald remarks:

"The public debt statement issued shows the government has interest bearing indebtedness of $970,000,000. The cash piled up in the treasury amounts to the enormous sum of $1,160,089,789. This immense sum is kept locked up on the fiction that $770,000,000 of it is pledged to the payment of treasury notes issued for silver bullion purchases that were coined into dollars which are piled up in the treasury vaults. No treasury note has ever been presented for redemption in silver nor will it be. The money piled up in the treasury could be put in circulation without impairing the security of holders of treasury notes in the least.

"Much of this billion locked up in the treasury, has been taken from the people by indirect taxation. The withdrawal of it from the arteries of trade and commerce has contributed to no small extent to depress prices of labor and agricultural products.

"The census of 1900 gave the United States a population of 76,000,000. The total coinage to June 30, 1900, was $2,996,000,000, a per capita coinage of $39. Of this $15 per capita is locked up in the treasury, and that, too, when it could be put in circulation if the republican party leaders were so minded."

Yes, indeed; tie loose the purse strings. Shovel the filthy stuff out indiscriminately to the "division" croakers. The experience of such action had such a salutary effect upon the country about nine years ago, when a democratic president and senate and house were elected. The battle-cry during that campaign was "too much money in the treasury"—about $600,000,000. But it didn't last long, if our memory serves us correctly, and in less than three years after Mr. Cleveland's inauguration the public debt was augmented by the issuance of—let's see—$262,000,000 of interest-bearing bonds, the money to be used to defray the ordinary running expenses of the government in a time of profound peace, and that sum was almost exhausted when a change of governmental policy was installed.

We plead guilty to the Courier-Herald's charge that "the republican leaders could put the surplus in circulation," but a treasury glutted strikes us being better than a treasury emptied. It's unfortunate, to be sure, that such conditions exist without any means of "remedying the evil."

YELLOW journalism is criticised, and the Herald joins in the chorus. The Herald feels that while many of our larger daily papers criticise yellow journalism, they are not consistent so long as they at the same time publish in full all the poisoned stuff that anarchists give out in their interviews. The so-called anarchist papers are stopped by law from scattering the doctrine of anarchy, but when a large daily paper publishes some of the poisoned germs, the public drinks it down, and says nothing about the medicine. Through these mediums and at excited times, this mischievous doctrine gets more publicity and is scattered far more than the anarchists could scatter it in their way for years, (and it is not news.) Is this not a good time for the public to put their hands upon this throttle?—Pythian Herald.

MONDAY'S Oregonian was an extraordinary valuable edition. It contained many columns of useful information about the resources of this state, dealing with localities. As a disseminator not only of news but also of valuable information, that paper has attained the highest standard.

GOING THE ROUNDS.

On the whole, it is a confounded shame that Jerry Simpson, of Medicine Lodge, has turned something like one hundred thousand dollars into his private treasury. The next thing Jerry knows some socialist of his own instruction will insist upon a division, and then there will be a row, and no mistake.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

"The weather has been so hot in this country," wails a Southern Missouri paper, "that liverymen have to stand their horses in water an hour to keep their shoes from coming off, and wagons are going around with their tongues out. The catfish kick up such a dust in the bed of the Gasconde river that the river has to be sprinkled before you can go fishing. A spark from an engine set the big railroad pond on fire, and burned up a wagon load of bull frogs. The ground is so hard that the crawfish holes are being pulled up and shipped off and sold for gas pipes."

Some onery scoundrel broke into our office last Sunday night, stole our trotting horse cut, pied a column of type, upset our ink keg in the middle of the floor, ate up a tomato can full of new paste, broke the office towel in six pieces and smoked up all of our best tobacco. Next morning we tracked the villain three-quarters of a mile out on the Hawville road by the printer's ink carried away on his shoes. We suspicion a pie-faced slob in Hawville as the guilty party. We don't mention no names, but we've got the measure of his foot and it's a pretty dog-gone big one. Some day we'll meet up with that chap and we'll spread his nose all over his face. A man that would do a thing like that would steal a bone from a starving dog and then kick him for howling—Ex.

Dillard & Day would like to place $800 of client's money on interest, on mortgage of country property, for from three to five years.

A LOOK AHEAD.

The last public utterance of President McKinley was the notable speech delivered at the Buffalo exposition on September 5. It is clear to any one who gives the address a close reading that it outlined the lamented president's views of desirable national policies in the near future. During the vacation days at Canton the president's mind had evidently been busy with coming executive duties in connection with the approaching session of a congress republican in both branches and in complete sympathy with the administration. It is fortunate that McKinley made this address, which fills a column and a half, and is sufficiently comprehensive to serve as a practical farewell message. President Roosevelt, as might have been expected from his record as well as his character, proposes, as far as human judgment and effort can compass the result, to "continue absolutely unbroken the policy of President McKinley for the peace, prosperity and the honor of our beloved country." There are often unforseen events and fresh emergencies in human affairs that call upon a person in high authority for his own initiative, because precedents do not always exist; but as far as a vice president succeeding to the presidency by tragedy may carry out the purposes of his predecessor President Roosevelt will assuredly do it to the utmost of his ability.

President McKinley's address at Buffalo dealt almost exclusively with the broadening duties of the United States as a world power, and the increasingly intimate relations of civilized nations in commerce. "The spirit of exclusiveness," he said, "is past." He dwelt upon the proximity of nations in these times as brought together by the telegraph, rapid communication and friendly rivalry in the various departments of human activity. "After all," he said, "how near one to the other is every part of the world." Intercommunication has made wonderful strides. "God and man," the president continued, "have linked the nations together. No nation can longer be indifferent to any other." In pursuance of this line of thought, after commending arbitration as the noblest forum for the settlement of international disputes, he added: "The expansion of our trade and commerce is the pressing problem. Commercial wars are unprofitable. A policy of good will and friendly trade relations will prevent reprisals. Reciprocity treaties are in harmony with the spirit of the times; measures of retaliation are not." "It is for all American citizens to remember," he said, "that our real eminence rests in the victories of peace, not those of war."

The enormous growth of American industrial enterprise impressed the president with the urgent need of more markets and he advised "sensible trade arrangements which will not interrupt our home production." Reciprocity, he declared to be the natural outgrowth of American industrial development "under the domestic policy now firmly established," for our surplus products need an enlarging foreign outlet. The speech favored a better steamship service to South America and Central America; direct commercial lines from fields of production to fields of consumption; the encouragement of the American merchant marine; the building of the isthmian canal and the construction of a Pacific cable. Among all nations President McKinley hoped for relations of mutual respect, confidence and friendship which will deepen and endure. The speech closed with these fitting words: "Our earnest prayer is that God will graciously vouchsafe prosperity, happiness and peace to all our neighbors and like blessings to all the peoples and powers of the earth."

Brain-Food Nonsense.

Another ridiculous food fad has been branded by the most competent authorities. They have dispelled the silly notion that one kind of food is needed for brain, another for muscles, and still another for bones. A correct diet will not only nourish a particular part of the body, but it will sustain every other part. Yet, however good your food may be, its nutriment is destroyed by indigestion or dyspepsia. You must prepare for their appearance or prevent their coming by taking regular doses of Green's August Flower, the favorite medicine of the healthy millions. A few doses aids digestion, stimulates the liver to healthy action, purifies the blood, and makes you feel buoyant and vigorous. You can get Dr. G. G. Green's reliable remedies at the St. Helens pharmacy. Get Green's special almanac.

It Happened in a Drug Store.

"One day last winter a lady came to my drug store and asked for a brand of cough medicine that I did not have in stock," says Mr. C. R. Grandin, the popular druggist of Ontario, N. Y. "She was disappointed and wanted to know what cough preparation I could recommend. I said to her that I could freely recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and that she could take a bottle of the remedy and after giving it a fair trial if she did not find it worth the money to bring back the bottle and I would refund the price paid. In the course of a day or two the lady came back in company with a friend in need of a cough medicine and advised her to buy a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I consider that a very good recommendation for the remedy." It is for sale at the St. Helens pharmacy.
