A SURPRISED PHYSICIAN.

A Dying Patient Recovers Through the still? Interposition of a Humble German.

Chicago, Nov. 15. Some weeks ago Dr. G----, a very reputable and widely known physician living on C--- street, was called to atad a very complicated case of Rhen-Upon arriving at the house matism. he found a man about forty years of age, lying in a prostrated and serious condition, with his whole frame dangerously affected with the painful dis-ease. He prescribed for the patient, but the man continued to grow worse, and on Sunday evening he was found to be in a very alarming condition. The knees and elbows and larger joints were greatly inflamed, and could not be moved. It was only with extreme difficulty that the patient could be turned in bed, with the aid of three or four persons. The weight of the clothing was so painful that means had to be adopted to keep it from the patient's body.

The doctor saw that his assistance would be of no avail, and left the house, one." the members of the family following him to the door, weeping. Third-class railway fares in India have received 4 per cent. This means, first year each employe will receive about $30; at the end of the second year the share will be about $50, and in five years it will be $100. The men will receive the standard union wages. Manager Buntzen says that, in his opinion, the increased interest in the company's welfare on the part of the employes created by the new system will add so much to the company's success that the shareholders, as well as the men, will gain by the innovation. The employes' proportion of the profits will be divided equally among them, all being considered as units in making the company's business a success. In addition to this voluntary concession the company pays as high wages for every class of work as are paid by other local employers, and, generally speaking, higher wages. The company also makes certain conces slons in the way of uniforms, light and transportation, that employers in other lines of business are not in a position to grant. It is customary to look for ocks in the way of all such industrial experiments. Men do not work for low wages, nor under unfavorable con ditions, voluntarily, but because they are forced to do so by the conditions of the labor market. The model employer, the man who voluntarily does more than he is forced to do, because he sees that there is something wrong and that the men are entitled to more, is worthy of all honor. One of the difficulties of such a scheme is that employ ment with him acquires an economi value which the workmen may bi forced to pay to middlemen or internedlaries. But it is time enough to look for such trouble when it begins to develop. A good relationship and a feeling of mutual interest have a value that cannot be accurately estimated in dollars, and these have been secured already by the Vancouver Street Ralltinued Dr. Wise. not raise all the wheat they need. France's average crop is usually about one-third larger than that of India, whose wheat seems to attract more attention than France's harvest, for no other reason apparently than because in good crop years India is expected to help supply the dedciency of Europe. Except in famine years India has from 12,000,000 to 35,000,000 bushels of export wheat grown in our winter months, when the climate in the best wheat districts is usually as cool, at least, as a Minnesota summer. Though India is the fourth largest grower, the wheat crop is far inferior in importance either to the rice of the lowlands or the millet of the drier plateau of the Deccan, these two grains being the great staples of vegetable food. There is an export tax on rice because the country needs all it grows, but the ability to help supply Europe with wheat bread is a boon to the farmers of the Punjab, for which they have to thank the Suez canal. They could not send wheat to Europe as long as it was necessary to double the Cape of Good Hope passing through the tropics both in the Indian ocean and the Atlantic, but steamship transportation through the canal made a new source of breadstuffs, tributary to Europe, and Indian export wheat is one of the most conspicuous illustrations of the influence a great ship canal may exert upon the economic conditions of a country. Evolution. Being convinced of the impossibility
