Good Beginning

If the blood is in good condition at the beginning of the warm season, you are prepared to resist disease and are not apt to be troubled with boils, pimples, blackheads and blotches, or the itching and burning skin eruptions that make one's life a veritable torment and misery.

Now is the time to begin the work of cleansing and building up the blackheads and blotches, or the itching and burning skin cruptions claim to the melody and on their re-blood and strengthening the weak places in your constitution. During the cold winter months we are compelled to live indoors and breathe the impure air of badly ventilated rooms and offices. We over-work and over-eat, and get too little out-door exercise, and our systems become clogged with impuri-ties and the blood a hot bed of germs and humors of every kind, and warm weather is sure to bring a reaction, and the poisonous matter in the blood and system will break out in boils and pustules or scaly eruptions and red, disfiguring bumps and pimples. Make a good beginning this season by taking a course of S. S. In his reminiscences of George Washington, Dr. Edward Everett Hale tells of the general's anger at Monmouth, when he met General Lee. Washington asked Lee why such a column was retiring, and Lee said that the American troops would not stand the British bayonets. Washington replied: "You d-n poltroon, you have never tried them?"

The appointment of Vice Admiral Lord Charles Beresford to the command of the English Channel squadron has brought to light a new anec dote. It appears that he consulted Sir Frederick Treves, whom King Edward considers the best doctor in the world "Tell me the symptoms," said Treves. As the admiral enumerated them the doctor became more and more interested. "Excellent, charming, splendid," cried Sir Frederick, as the symp toms were unfolded to him, and when the list was completed, said: "My dear fellow, let me congratulate you You have the rarest case of the century. Similarly, English visitors to this country have got up and bowed as to a compliment when an American band has blared the same tune. It has taken time in each case to convince the hearer that "God Save the King" and "America" have the same air. Us course, the Briton has become indignant over the theft of a national air, forgetting that the colonies, with their allegiance to a British king, had a volt could fairly set their own new words to It.

INSTINCT TEACHES THEM.

Young Birds and Animals flave Habita Born in Them.

There is a school of the woods, just as much as there is a church of the woods, or a parliament of the woods, or a Society of United Charities of the woods, and no more; there is nothing in the dealings of animals with their young that in the remotest way suggests human instruction and discipline The young of all the bird creatures do instinctively what their parents do and did. They do not have to he taught; they are taught from the jump. The bird sings at the proper age, and builds its nest, and takes its appropriate food without any hint at all from its parents. The young ducks take to the water when hatched by a hen as readily as when hatched by a duck, and dive and stalk insects, and wash themselves just as their mothers

Young chickens and young turkeye understand the various calls and signals of their mother the first time they hear or see them. At her alarm note come, on the first day as on the tenth. The fox is afraid of a trap before he has had any experience with it, and the bare thumps upon the ground at the sight of anything strange and unusual, whether its mates be within hearing or not. It is true that the crows and the lays might be called the spies and informers of the woods, and that other creatures seem to understand the meaning of their cries, but who shall presume to say that they have been instructed in this vocation?

Mr. Long would have us believe that the crows teach their young to fly, writes John Burroughs in the Atlantic He might as well say that the roosier person's teeth. their wings are strong enough.

BEETLE DIGS GRAVES.

How and Why It Iuries Dead Birds and Insects.

The gravedigger beetle was the subsect of an inferesting experiment that a young Philadelphian, a student of the biological department of the University of Pennsylvania, recently conducted, says the Philadelphia Record. He secured four healthy gravedlager beetles and put them in a wooden box filled with earth, along with a very small dead sparrow. The beetles no sooner perceived the bird than they began to dig alongside of it. For four bours they dug, and at the end of that time they had a hole made that was six or seven inches deep and three Wise Brothers at hand inches square.

Now they went around to the other ing. side of the sparrow and gave, all to gether, a good, strong push. The bird dropped into the grave nicely and the beetles covered it over with loose soil.

The young experimenter kept the beetles for a month. During the month they buried five birds, three grasshoppers, two butterflies and a young mouse. Their box came to resemble a could cat no lean."

"Why are these beetles gravedlygers? What is their motive?" To this question, which was put to him by many visitors, the student would reply: "Gravedigging is their way of propagating their species. They get hold of some little dead thing, dig a hole beside it, lay their eggs in its flesh and bury it. The eggs, after a time, batch into larvae. These larvae must de velop under ground, and during their development they must eat. Well, thanks to their thoughtful parents, they are born in the midst of foodthey have on all sides of them the earrion in which, as eggs, they were laid and buried-and thus they feed bountifully, and grow big and strong, so that on their emergence from the soil they are beetles to be proud of. And as soon as they emerge they become grave diggers in their turn.

Broke Them of It.

Mr. Bilby's children, the youngest nine and the eldest fourteen years of age, besought his permission to raise bautam chickens, pleading that there was plenty of room in the barn for that purpose.

"You have bothered me a long time about that," he said. "Now I'll agree to let you do it on condition that you quit calling your parents papa and mamma You are old enough now to begin calling us father and mother, as you should. If you will do that, you may go shead and turn the barn into chicken house."

They gave the promise readily enough: but it was harder to keep than they had foreseen. The next day, while a neighbor was calling on Mr. Bilby, the children came rushing from the barn into the house. "Papa," they exclaimed, "come out andion, Sour Stomach, Diarrhoea Worms, Convulsions, Feverish-
