

Scrofula

Has come down to us through the ages, like the pyramids and the sphinxes. It makes its presence known by many signs—glandular tumors, bunched in the neck, cutaneous eruptions, inflamed eyelids, sore ears, rickets, catarrh, wasting and general debility. Sufferers should take

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"Yes," concluded the medical exponent, "she became insane through excessive dancing."
"One might say she was hopping mad, I suppose!" gurgled the cheerful idiot.

A Slander.
"See here!" said the city editor. "You speak of the bride as being led to the altar."
"Yes, sir. What of it?" replied the reporter.

"What of it? Why, it's nonsense. There was never a bride yet who couldn't find her way there, no matter what were the obstacles."—London Tid-Bits.

Lobsters.
To avoid buying lobsters which have been cooked and laid on ice until all their firmness and sweetness have been sacrificed, lay the creature on its back and straighten out the tail. If when the tail is released it springs back into its normal curled position, it may be considered fresh. But if it stays back and seems limp and flabby it is unfit for use.

Without Credit.
"Ah, me!" sighed the village editor as he grasped his trusty scissors and began to edit the funny column, "would that I might get my groceries as I do my jokes."

The Inaccuracy of Popular Judgments

An eminent American physician, whose practice is chiefly among women and children, said lately: "A doctor is often in receipt of queer letters, but the strangest which come to me are the frequent applications from good, pious women living on farms and country villages for places in wealthy city families, where they can rear and train the poor, neglected children of fashionable mothers. There seems to be a deep-seated conviction among these good folk that every rich, fashionable woman is a devotee to dancing, gambling, champagne, cigarettes and worse vices. To rescue and train their children, they argue, would be a missionary work—and profitable. "I might tell them truly," added the doctor, "that I have practiced among this class of women for thirty years, and in that time never have known but one who did not love and give her best effort to her children. But they would not believe me."

"Of course they would not. We all divide our fellow creatures into classes, each with its sharp attributes, and love and hate them comfortably. Nothing is more disquieting or annoying than to have these attributes mixed up. Yet nothing is more certain to happen. The one thing we may be sure of every day is that not a man whom we shall meet in it will belong to his type. The purse-proud plutocrat turns out to be a humble-minded young fellow anxiously envious of our knowledge of golf; the comic actor in private life is dull and shy, and redden to the tip of his ears when he speaks; the murderer taken out of the dock in a quiet hob and nob, proves to be a likable young chap who reminds you of your cousin Bob. He has precisely the same feeling for his Jenny and her boy as that you have for your Mary and the kid. He is worrying about the price of potatoes, just as you are worrying about coal.

You are confused, annoyed. It would be so much easier to deal with the man, knife in hand, killing and needing to be killed, than with this anxious buyer of potatoes for Jenny and her baby. After all, are not our mistakes in dealing with other people—at home, on the street, in church or the shop—due to our obstinacy in meeting them as members of classes instead of men and women like ourselves? Public opinion dubs this party fanatics; that, rogues; this race, traitors; this fashionable woman, vicious; that churchgoing woman, a saint.

But you will save time and many bitter mistakes if you take each by the hand and judge for yourself. The nature of the meanest man or woman is not like a manufactured music box, set to grind out forever the same tune—the dead march or jig at the turning of a screw. It is a live thing. And there is in it some wild harmony, provided you know how to find it.—Saturday Evening Post.

DO NOT INHALE THE SMOKE. All Tobacco Smokers Should Guard Against a Pernicious Habit. On the labels of some boxes of cigarettes at present being sold to the public is a statement to the effect that the cigarettes are made of the purest tobacco and paper obtainable, and that, therefore, the smoke from them may be inhaled safely and without irritating the respiratory passages. We do not hesitate to say that such a statement is highly mischievous and that the practice of inhaling smoke into the lungs is attended with considerable risk to the health of the smoker.

It is to be feared that the cigarette is responsible largely for the prevalence of this objectionable habit of inhaling tobacco smoke; the pipe or cigar smoker is, as a rule, not addicted to it because probably the smoke is too strong or too irritating. But the fact that the smoke of a cigarette may be unobnoxious does not minimize the evil effect of drawing the smoke into the lungs, for by this method the absorption of the poisonous constituents of tobacco smoke (and all tobacco smoke is more or less poisonous) is very rapid, these entering quickly into the circulatory system by way of the pulmonary capillaries. Even in the mouth and nasal passages, there is some amount of absorption, but this is trifling compared with that which takes place in the lungs. The practice of inhaling tobacco smoke is, therefore, strongly to be discouraged, and vendors of cigarettes should refrain from printing on the boxes mischievous statements such as that to which we have alluded.

There is no reason for believing that smoking tobacco in a rational way is productive of harm; on the contrary, it is common experience that when moderately indulged in it serves to allay restlessness and irritability, but the sequel to the habit of inhalation may indeed, be dire, the heart and nervous system being chiefly affected. Yet many cigarette smokers inhale the smoke into the lungs, as may be seen from the fact that very little of the smoke which they draw from the cigarette is afterward ejected.—London Lancet.

REGISTER OF THE U. S. TREASURY USES PE-RU-NA FOR SUMMER CATARRH.

Summer Catarrh Afflicts Men and Women

Hon. Judson W. Lyons, Register of the United States Treasury, in a letter from Washington, D. Two interesting letters from thankful women. Miss Camilla Chartier, 5 West Lexington St., Baltimore, Md., writes: "Late supper gradually affected my digestion and made me a miserable dyspeptic, suffering intensely at times. I took several kinds of medicine which were prescribed by different physicians but still continued to suffer. But the trial of one bottle of Peruna convinced me that it would rid me of this trouble, so I continued taking it for several weeks and I was in excellent health, having gained ten pounds."—Miss Camilla Chartier.

Mrs. Kate Bohn, 1119 Willoughby Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., writes: "When I wrote you I was troubled with frequent headaches, dizzy, strange feeling in the head, sleeplessness, sinking feelings, faintness and numbness. Sometimes I had heartburn. My food would rise to my throat after every meal, and my bowels were very irregular. "I wrote you for advice, and I now take pleasure in informing you that my improvement is very great indeed. I did not expect to improve so quickly after suffering for five years. I am feeling very good and strong. I thank you so much for Peruna. I shall recommend it to all suffering with the effects of catarrh, and I consider it a household blessing. I shall never be without Peruna."

For those phases of catarrh peculiar to summer Peruna will be found efficacious. Peruna cures catarrh in all phases and stages. If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis. Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

As Others See Us.

"I wonder if my face will change, too, when I am your age?" asked the sweet girl graduate in a tone redolent with innuendo.
"Undoubtedly, dear," replied the elderly female, "and you ought to be thankful for the loss of a generous portion of your cheek."

ONE OF NATURE'S DREGGERS.

Great Lava Streams Attending an Eruption of Mount Pelee. Since the disaster at Martinique most people, especially those of scientific and venturesome spirit, have taken a new interest in volcanoes. Old craters, whose tricks are still unknown, and craters that have just taught men to beware of them, have been studied with unusual care. Interesting experiences have been common. Hardly one of the recent papers on volcanoes is without some tale of adventure in which the human side appears even more strongly than the scientific. George Carroll Curtis in a paper entitled "Looking into the Caribbean Craters," published in the Century Magazine, narrates an adventure he had on Mount Pelee. He says: As we were passing on our return over the rugged, lava-like mounds three sharp peaks of thunder rang through the valley. Rolling up over the mountain top was a great brown, convoluting cloud. It ascended in dark, rounded masses, stately yet with great speed, thousands and thousands of twisting, worming globules, brain-shaped, cauliflower-topped, dark almost to blackness. As it shot direct from the crater, this menacing shape spread out and charged toward us down the mountain-side. Running would, I realized, be useless. The eruption and its nearness held me in wonder and dread, so that I did not call to my companions below, but waited until they had labored half way up the slope; then I shouted down. "Look at the mountain!" and scrambled to the highest point on the flat above. As I gained it in hard breath and looked back, a black thing jumped from behind a bend in the canon. With a heavy, earthy roar, a plunging wall of blackish stuff hurried itself with fearful speed against the side of the ravine, bounded to the opposite slope and tore it down. It lashed and tore away the earth like paper. We saw the banks melt away as in a nightmare. Sand, pebbles and masses of rock flew into the air before the resistless onslaught, and fell into the raging food and were borne away like chaff. We could feel the shock of the ponderous mass plowing through the ground, as when a train at high speed grinds the rails. Looking down in wonder, awe, perhaps fright, not one of us had spoken a word. In twenty minutes the sixty-foot channel of the main stream was dug four feet below the mouth of a tributary, which, coaling in silent, molasses-like surges, dropped in a mud-fall into the river. We watched for half an hour, by which time the stream had decreased a third, and the erosion of its banks was nearly ended. Already, however, the catastrophic had dredged the channel to a depth of ten feet and had carried off this vast load into the sea. And when in the gathering darkness we reached the coalesced mouths of the two rivers, the Seche and the Blanche, the hot ash beds there, lying over the dead of the Guerin Sugar Works, were sending out such heavy volumes of steam that our sleep had left her mooring and was standing well offshore.

Trolleys Beat Steam Roads.

The statement is made that in Massachusetts last year four times as many passengers were carried by electric cars as on the steam roads, says the Iron Age. Of course that was due chiefly to the dense city traffic, but still the city street car systems were pretty complete seven years ago. The trolley passenger business, however, has doubled since that time, while the steam passenger business has actually declined.

TEN YEARS WITH GYPSIES.

Romance of an English Lad Who Lived Among the Romany. A child romance, almost incredible in these days, is presented in the restoration to his friends of the youth Francis Joseph Holton, of Manor Street, Woolwich common, after having been lost for ten years.

The police found him a few days ago sleeping on a Drury Lane doorstep, says the London Mail. Taken to the Bow street police court, he stated that he had run away from a caravan of gypsies, with whom, so far as he could remember, he had lived all his life. At any rate, he knew nothing whatever of his parents. From the police station he was taken to the Catholic home in Westminster bridge road.

When interviewed at his father's home in Manor street, Woolwich, the lad spoke clearly and readily of his sojourn of nearly eleven years with the gypsies. But as to his parents and his childhood his mind is an utter blank.

"There were seven of us in the caravan," said the lad, "the husband and wife, three daughters, a son and myself. We traveled up and down the country, making and selling brushes here, snaring hares and rabbits there, going into Kent for the hop-picking and fruit-gathering seasons, pitching our van on commons and by the roadside in lonely parts, visiting large towns like Birmingham and Manchester, and I had a hard time of it always. "No, the gypsies' fare does not consist, as people seem to think, of rump steaks and hots of good things. They gave me a rough time. My food was generally bread and cheese and water all the week, and a share of hare or rabbit or other flesh food on Sundays. Their living was but little better than mine. "They never spoke any Romany—nothing but English. It was hard work most of the time, and my share was poor food and a thrashing when I did not work hard enough for them. We all worked at the hop-picking, but the man took all the money. At last I saw nothing to keep me with them, so I watched my opportunity and got quietly away. "I have often been round this way with the gypsy caravan. Sometimes we came quite near my home. I used to come to these very barracks over here and bag some bread, little thinking I was close to my father's home."

Remember that a great many good things cost more than they are worth.
