THE SLAUGHTER OF THE INNOCENTS.

What is the matter with men-intelligent men-when they believe prayer can take the place of a medical treatment in the cure of bodily ailments? It will not do to say that they are insane or even that they lack in intelligence, for some of the brightest men and women of the State are members of what is called the Christian Science Church.

"Prayer." "Was the child in pain?" "Apparently, yes. But after receiving the treatment for an hour she seemed relieved, and when I left at 11:30 she was resting easily, and I knew nothing of her further illness until her mother telephoned me this morning that she had called a doctor."

The faith curist then coolly infers that the regular physician was responsible for the child's death, but consoles the mother with the admission that she was not blameable, as in calling the physician she acted according to her best judgment; so we suppose the poor woman will not be expelled from the church. It is a consolation to know that we who are as yet in darkness and are unable to believe that prayer can remove a wart from a man's nose or carbolic acid from a baby's stomach, may still resort to materia medica and its exponents without being deemed guilty of criminal negligence.

DIRECT PRIMARY NOMINATIONS.

The question of direct primary nominations, which is to be submitted to the voters of Oregon at the June election, transcends in importance any issue the people of Oregon will be called upon at that time to decide. There is no doubt that it will be vigorously opposed by the bosses and would-be bosses of both the great political parties. It is a blow at their occupation, and they have no desire to be put out of business. The theory that this is a government "of the people, by the people, and for the people," under the system of bossism that has been evolved in Oregon of late years has been subverted to government by the bosses and for the bosses, and from a superior to Governor the ambitious aspirant for political honors, before he can hope to succeed, must align himself with one or the other of the factional bosses. Merit does not enter into the question, except that the wise boss does not work with dull tools; neither has political principle anything to do with it, except that the party chiefs are used to make the bitter medicine palatable to the old-fashioned voters who believe they are standing up for a certain set of principles.

This is supposed to be a country in which majority rule, and Oregon is a strongly Republican State; yet we have a Democratic Governor, and the majority of the sheriffs are Democrats. It is very plain that the cause of this is too much bossism. Does anyone believe that Mr. Farah could have secured the nomination for Governor under the direct primary system? If elected he would have made an excellent executive, but he did not possess the personal traits to render him popular with the voters, and under the direct primary system he never would have been nominated, and Republican Oregon would now have a Republican Governor. The majority party in this State should "stand pat" for this system, because it will do away with the factional fights that have heretofore been made against the party nominees, and which have resulted in so many instances in the election of minority candidates. Leaders are necessary, but they should be chosen leaders and not self-constituted bosses. Under the direct primary system the Republicans of this State will have an opportunity to choose the nominees for whom they desire to vote, and, having so chosen, the entire ticket will receive the practically unanimous support of the party, and the contest at the polls will be as nearly as possible one of principle, and, to a much greater extent than in the past, devoid of the personalities that beget the issues and give hope of success to minority candidates.

The people of Quincy school district, No. 25, will soon begin the experiment of a collective district with a graded school, going as high as the eighth grade. They will have a four-roomed school house with four teachers, and will run at least one wagon to collect the children and bring them to school in the morning and take them home at night. The matter has created considerable excitement and some ill feeling, but we believe a trial will convince the parents of the benefits of such a system, which has given satisfaction elsewhere, giving good school facilities at less expense than they could be secured otherwise.

The Great Success of the Brownsville Woolen Mills

Is largely due to the honest treatment given their customers and also to the superior quality of pure wool goods manufactured from the best Oregon wool, and sold at less price than other stores ask for shoddy and cotton mixed goods.

We want the trade of people tributary to Portland, and will guarantee a saving of at least $5.00 on a good suit of clothes.

A DIRECTORY OF COLUMBIA COUNTY SCHOOL OFFICIALS

Complete List of the Officers, and Postoffice of the Clerks, of Columbia County School Districts for the year beginning June 15, 1903, and ending June 20, 1904.

COMPILED BY COUNTY SCHOOL SUPT. I. H. COPELAND, HOULTON, OREGON.

Table with columns: NAME OF CLERK, NAME OF DIRECTORS-TIME TO SERVE (THREE YEARS, TWO YEARS, ONE YEAR), and CLERK'S ADDRESS. Lists school officials for various districts in Columbia County, Oregon.

There are eighteen school districts in this county that teach four months or less of public schools. They have an attendance of about one hundred and twenty pupils, who are deprived of the opportunity to acquire a reasonable degree of education to fit them for the battle of life. At Chemawa, near Salem, the United States Government maintains a completely equipped Indian training school, where any one with a trace of Indian blood is given education, board and clothing free of charge, without regard to the poverty or affluence of their parents. The course of study is far beyond that of our common school, and music, drawing, etc., are taught to the more or less dusky wards of the Government. It may be that this is the white man's legitimate burden. It may be all right to scour the country for Indian pupils and pay their transportation to the schools; but it strikes us that while so much is being done for the Indians of various degrees, some thing should be attempted for the white children of the men and women who are endeavoring to hew out homes in the remote sections of Columbia and other thinly settled counties of Oregon.

Farm for Sale. The whole 160 acres lying in section 28, 6 north, and 2 west, the north half belonging to D. W. Copp, and the south half to Thomas R. Copp, of Calgary, Alberta, Northwest Territory. If you want a good, cheap farm, with plenty of good timber, one mile from a sawmill, and four miles from the Columbia river, write direct to us, as we have no agents. It is one of the best farms in the vicinity of Goble. Address D. W. COPP, Currier Crossing, Canada.

WILL YOU HAVE A DOZEN RAW?

An Oyster Shell that Weighs Seven and One Half Pounds.

About ten days ago, while the St. Helens Reading Club was discussing Prof. London's geological sketch of Oregon, a member had occasion to refer to a fossil oyster shell which he had in his pocket. It was a specimen of the Santa Lucia mountains, a California, which seems to have escaped the notice of most writers on the geology of our country. The size of these shells, as mentioned by that member, created such surprise as to result in sending for a specimen, and M. D. Dillard, the member referred to, through the kindness of Mr. W. R. Brock, of San Luis Obispo, Cal., has just placed before us the entire value of one of these ancient oysters, perfect in shape and preservation, which measures 1 1/2 in length and weighs 7 1/2 pounds. It was, probably, originally several inches longer, as it has been shortened by breakage at one end.

This specimen is so complete in itself, and so free from extraneous matter, as to deserve the name of petrified shell, rather than fossil; but Father Time has probably worked on it for many, many thousands of years without destroying its identity.

The aborigines of that country ate a few dozen fried oysters of that size for breakfast, they probably built the Santa Lucia Mountains for a playhouse. The Santa Lucia Mountains are the coast range in that section, and are 2,000 feet high. The shells are found along the eastern foothills, a mile 1,500 feet above sea level and thirty-five miles from the coast.

Largest store and largest stock can be found at Perry & Graham's store at Houlton. Goods delivered free.

KEASEY'S CONTRIBUTION. The editor asks for news, but this vicinity is like Mother Hubbard's cupboard - scarcely a bone. The only wall that we hear from the headquarters of civilization on Rock creek all along to Vernonia is Hay! Hay! Hay! "My kingdom for some hay." A few tons, heavy with age, is to be found, that might sustain life if put to the test. A number of barns are almost entirely empty, and two months' feeding yet to be done. The schoolhouse at Keasey is at last - after ten years - about completed. The inside work has been done by G. H. Sitts and James Adams, and the hardware appearing removed by a ceiling and wain scotting. New curtains and pictures for the inner ornaments and a coat of paint for the outside is next in order. The Keasey postoffice has at last taken its flight four and one-half miles up the creek, and been established at the old ranch, Mr. G. H. Sitts, P. M. Rural delivery will be in order along the route from Vernonia.
