

Hood's Sarsaparilla is unquestionably the greatest blood and liver medicine known. It positively and permanently cures every humor, from Pimples to Scrofula. It is the Best Blood Medicine.

To make milk that has been washed look like new put a teaspoonful of methylated spirits to a pint in the rinsing water and iron while damp.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hood's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 20 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood, and mucous surfaces of the system. It cures over one hundred diseases for any case it falls to cure, bend for circulars and testimonials.

Turkish women eat rose leaves with butter to secure plumpness.

Young women may avoid much sickness and pain, says Miss Alma Pratt, if they will only have faith in the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Judging from the letters she is receiving from so many young girls, Mrs. Pinkham believes that our girls are often pushed altogether too near the limit of their endurance nowadays in our public schools and seminaries.

Nothing is allowed to interfere with studies, the girl must be pushed to the front and graduated with honor; often physical collapse follows, and it takes years to recover the lost vitality, often it is never recovered. Miss Pratt says—

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel it my duty to tell all young women how much Lydia E. Pinkham's wonderful Vegetable Compound has done for me. I was completely run-down, unable to attend school, and did not care for any kind of society, but now I feel like a new person, and have gained seven pounds of flesh in three months.

"I recommend it to all young women who suffer from female weakness."—MISS ALMA PRATT, Holly, Mich.—$5.00 per bottle. If original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

Men Are Inferior to Cats

There are several points in which man is inferior to the cat. The cat, for one thing, has no vermiform appendix, and consequently never suffers from appendicitis. Furthermore, while man has chosen to be a nocturnal as well as a diurnal creature he has only the diurnal vision; whereas the cat, devoting "its days to civilization" and its nights to barbarism, can see in the dark as well as in the light, having a patent adjustable eye.

She possesses nine lives and all of them have to be taken in order to get rid of the cat. If the slayer thinks he slays he knows not well the subtle ways in which this admirable creature passes, turns and brings forward her successive entities for obliteration. Drowned in the pond she returns to the woodshed or the kitchen door, requiring to be shot. Shot, she comes back to be asphyxiated. Smothered by the fumes of chloroform, she revives and calls for prussic acid. She is a walking, living, breathing, vociferating exemplification of the principle of metempsychosis. Her reincarnations in one brief period outlive those to which man is condemned by the Hindu theology in hundreds of years and her avatars outnumber Buddha's.

It is no wonder that the Egyptians worshipped the cat. She has been able to get hold of some principle which man, the boaster, who vaunteth himself almost a god, is denied—New York Mail and Express.

Cure for Backache.

Randolph, Neb., May 30.—Cedar Co. has seldom heard of a more wonderful case than that of Mrs. Lucy Nicholls of this place. For a long time Mrs. Nicholls suffered with very severe pains in the back and almost instantly these pains left her. She has tried doctors and everything, but nothing had helped her till she used Dodd's Kidney Pills. She says:

"Dodd's Kidney Pills did me so much good I can't tell, it was so wonderful. My back hurt me all the time. I doctored and tried everything but did not feel any better. I thought my life was short on earth, but now I feel like a new person. I used one box of Dodd's Kidney Pills and I do not feel the slightest ache or pain. I can turn and twist any way without feeling it and I feel so proud of it I cannot hardly express my gratitude to Dodd's Kidney Pills for what they have done for me."

Small Coins Newer and Brighter.

"Have you noticed the improved quality of the coins now in circulation?" asked the trolley car conductor as he pulled a handful of bright pennies, nickels and dimes from his pocket for inspection.

"It's due to an effort on the part of the government to put better money into circulation by recalling the worn and shiny pieces from which the impression of the die has become effaced. I've noticed for the past two years a steady improvement in this respect. All the banking institutions now throw aside the coins that show decided traces of wear, and the treasury department redeems these with new ones. In England a soiled bank note is unknown. The paper money is always new and crisp, being recalled before it becomes worn. It's getting to be that way in this country with our small coins."—Philadelphia Record.

A Chum of Sir Henry Irving.

When Sir Henry Irving was staying lately at the Queen's Hotel, Manchester, a small boy, about 6 years old, son of William Mollison, a well-known member of Sir Henry's company, strayed into his rooms one afternoon. Invited to make himself at home, and take some refreshment, he consumed a pear and a bottle of lemonade with apparent satisfaction. Then gazing steadfastly at his host, he said:

"I do miss Phil May."

"So do we all," said Sir Henry, gravely.

"Yes, but I miss him most," pursued the child. "He was my chum."

"Ah! that makes it very hard," said Sir Henry.

There was a long pause, and then the little fellow asked very earnestly: "Will you be my chum now?" So they swore eternal friendship on the altar of Phil May's memory.

MASSAGE HEART TO LIFE.

Death from Anaesthetic Thrice Defeated by Marvelous Operation.

Massaging back to life a human heart that has ceased to beat is the marvelous operation three times successfully performed by modern surgery. A Philadelphia physician, Dr. W. W. Keen, is authority for the statement that two of the people thus brought back from the gates of death are now alive and healthy.

If this operation is finally established as a successful feature of surgery, both laymen and scientists look forward to the following important results:

1. A material lessening of the number of deaths which occur while the patient is under the influence of ether or chloroform.
2. The possibility of a remedy and a cure for that dreaded and mysterious ailment known to science as catalepsy.
3. A removal of the awful dread of being buried alive.

Dr. Keen does not stand sponsor for all these claims. But he does assert that life apparently extinct has been renewed by continuing the heart's closed pulsation through massage. In a case recently reported the patient was to all intents and purposes dead. The heart had ceased to beat, breathing had stopped, and the collapse from chloroform was apparently complete. Death had been apparent to the physicians and nurses for five minutes before an operation was undertaken. Then the surgeon in charge deliberately cut open the diaphragm, reached for the heart, and employed the massage treatment. At the end of five minutes, after repeated chafing, the heart resumed its beating, and respiration was restored by artificial means. In two other recorded cases the patients were brought back to life and the operation was entirely successful.

It is related that some of the great surgeons of Europe who have been working upon this theory have spent many years in experimenting on dumb animals. In quite a number of their cases the hearts of dogs that have been frozen for fifty hours after the supposed death have had their pulsation restored by massage.

Physicians shake their heads over the possibility of the new treatment being applied to restore those attacked by catalepsy. But if it could be employed in this way it would remove one of the awful terrors of that disease, the fear of being buried alive. So great is this terror that men have asked that a knife be plunged through their heart to make death absolutely certain.

IN A CHICAGO NIGHT SCHOOL.

Difficulty of the Sleeping Urchin in Rendering Shakespearean Lines.

A certain night school is in session three evenings a week in a cavernous building on the river front. One mounts a draughty staircase, gropes through bleak passages that echo to the tread and enters a gas-lighted, odorating classroom, where the air is filled with the murmur like the sound of rain on the roof; it is the diligent scratching of a hundred pens on a hundred copy books. Boys of many nationalities, of many ages, ranging from 12 to 30, and of many degrees of griminess, toil stoically at their copying. The "smallest boy" is very small and particularly grimy. His head droops devotedly above the work, and his fingers are fairly paralyzed with the rigidity of his grip on the pen. "Truth crushed to earth shall rise again," he whispers to himself, repeating the copy book text as he laboriously transcribes it. Nothing has been able to break the "littiest boy" of hisping. It is the hisp of nervous childlikeness, and in astonishing contrast to the astuteness of his vocabulary on occasion.

Along the walls stretch blackboards, where dusty processions of straggling sums and conjugated verbs trail like caravans across a desert. In one corner the blackboard blossoms into an oasis, a roll of honor in cold-inked chalk, with the "smallest boy's" name at the top.

When copy books are put away there is the ordeal of mental arithmetic, and after that the reading class. To-night the selection is Shakespearean, a part of the second act of "As You Like It." The boys read in turn, up one aisle and down the next, their earnestness and the admonitions of the master redeeming the performance from ridiculousness, though Orlando's impassioned address is delivered in a Dutch brogue, and Jacques is variously a Swede, an Italian and a Jew. The "Seven Ages" are accomplished in triumph, down to the "justice," full of wise saws and modern instances, and now it is the "smallest boy's" turn to read. Rising, he bows out the lines that follow with breathless eagerness—as one who knows his lesson well:

The thirteenth thir
Into the lean and thimpered pantaloon;
With th-pactacleth on noth, and pouch on thide;
Hith youthful both, well-thaved, a world too wide
For hith thrunk th-bank, and hith big many voith,
Turning again to childth treble, plith And whiteth in hith thound.

She Was Kissed.

The bride and groom sat side by side. "Dearest," he said, looking up into her eyes, for he was smaller, so that he really and truly looked up and into her eyes.

"Yes, love," she responded in soft, frightened mouse tones.

"If I had known that tunnel was that long I would have kissed you."

"Didn't you kiss me?" she asked with much surprise.

"No," he replied.

"Well, somebody did."—Cleveland Leader.

WATER IN DESERT CACTUS.

Natives Are Accustomed to Tap Plant When They Are Thirsty.

The marvelous strength of desert plants is well known, but we are at a loss to explain the source or reasons of their luxuriance in regions where only a few inches of water fall during the year, and that little is immediately drunk up by the torrid sun. What enables the yucca to thrust its head through thirty feet of gypsum and sand or the barrel cactus to store and enormous quantities of water and to hold the water for months, perhaps years, or the sunnack to cling so tenaciously to its ground when everything else is swept away, are questions which none can satisfactorily answer. No less marvelous and luxuriant is the mesquite shrub, which sometimes has roots over fifty feet long, and other desert plants whose hairy coverings and resinous coatings prevent the evaporation of moisture. These secrets may soon be discovered, however, as the Carnegie Institution has established a desert botanical laboratory at Tucson to study them.

It was among the desert hills west of Torres, Mex. The Indian cut the top from a plant about five feet high and with a blunt stake of palo verde pounded to a pulp the upper six or eight inches of white flesh in the standing trunk. From this, handful by handful, he squeezed the water into the bowl he had made in the top of the trunk, throwing the discarded pulp on the ground. By this process he secured two or three quarts of clear water, slightly salty and slightly bitter to the taste, but of far better quality than some of the water a desert traveler is occasionally compelled to use. The Papago, dipping this water up in his hands, drank it with evident pleasure and said that his people were accustomed, not only to secure their drinking water in this way in times of extreme drought, but that they used it also to mix their meal preparatory to cooking it into bread.—National Geographical Magazine.

REBUFF WAS CUTTING ONE. Fitting Retort of "Mad Poet" to an Ungentlemanly Remark.

Many stories are told of McDonald Clarke, known fifty years ago in New York as the "mad poet," which show that he had a vein of great shrewdness, such as is often possessed by people who are counted insane.

One day he was seated at a table in a New York hotel quietly eating his simple dinner when two young men took their seats at the same table. McDonald Clarke was a well-known figure, and the young men at once recognized him, though he did not know them.

They were not gentlemen in the best sense of the word, and it occurred to them that they might have some sport with the poor poet. Consequently one of them said in an unnecessarily clear tone:

"I have seen almost everything and everybody in New York except McDonald Clarke. I have a great admiration for his poems, and I would give a great deal to see the man."

When he passed the mad poet leaned forward and said with evident gratification: "Sir, I am McDonald Clarke, whom you say you wish to see."

The young man stared at him with much rudeness for a moment, and then drawing a quarter from his pocket, he laid it on the poet's plate, saying, "That's for the sight!"

Clarke looked at the coin for an instant, and then placing it in his pocket, he took out a "York shilling," 12½ cents. This he handed to the young man, saying gravely, "Children half price."

Natural Ice Is Passing. For several years past the business of the ice-man of former days has been decreasing steadily, and at the present rate ere long he will find his occupation gone. It is no longer necessary to wait for cold weather to secure a supply of the refrigerating product; it can be produced easily and cheaply in the warmest weather by chemical processes.

In the State of Maine, where in former years the harvesting of ice for market in more southern latitudes was carried to enormous proportions, the total quantity cut during last winter, which embraced perfect conditions for the securing of a large crop, was but 485,000 tons, against 700,000 tons gathered in the winter of 1902.

The advantages offered by chemistry and modern machinery for the production of ice and the perfect control of temperature at whatever degree desired, when and wherever needed, irrespective of climatic conditions, renders their mechanical requirements cheaper than can be obtained from natural ice when transportation from remote districts of storing and the great wastage of original bulk through melting is taken into consideration. In all manufacturing necessity for cooling and for maintaining uniform degrees of temperature, as well as certainty of control of such conditions, together with their greater economy, present systems of artificial refrigeration are crowding nature out of the field of competition and reducing the latter to chiefly local value.

Hug Was Expensive. "Geraldine," said Tompkins to the maiden who had just accepted him, "this is indeed the supreme moment of my life. The divine joy of holding you in my arms as my promised wife is far beyond any earthly happiness I have ever dreamed."

Geraldine nestled lovingly. "I have had my share of this world's pleasures," Tompkins continued, tenderly. "In this moment they are all eclipsed. I have had my share of this world's sorrows. In the heavenly exaltation of your love they are all forgotten. With you in my arms my soul is beyond reach of earthly troubles and translated into serene."

Deliciously impulsive, Geraldine clasped her arms about him and pressed herself to his noble heart, saying the New York Times, then, oh, cruel fate! in the midst of his exaltation the love light faded from poor Tompkins' eyes, and with a wild cry he clutched at his heart.

"Just my luck," he gasped weakly. "Confound it, Geraldine, that last hug of yours completely crushed two cigars in my vest pocket—15 cents straight!"

Mrs. J. E. Finn, 83 East High street, Buffalo, N. Y., writes: reuna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio. Gentlemen:—A few years ago I had to give up social life entirely, as my health was completely broken down. The doctor advised a complete rest for a year. As this was out of the question for a time, I began to look for some other means of restoring my health.

"I had often heard of Peruna as an excellent tonic, so I bought a bottle to see what it would do for me, and it certainly took hold of my system and rejuvenated me, and in less than two months I was in perfect health, and now when I feel worn out or tired a dose of two of Peruna is all that I need."—Mrs. J. Mrs. J. W. Reynolds, Elton, Ohio, writes: "I owe my health and life to Peruna. We rarely call in a physician, in fact it has been years since I have taken any other medicine than yours. I am afraid of drugs, and although I have been sick many times I have taken only your medicines. They are wonderful indeed. We have a very large house and entertain a great deal and I do all my own work, thanks to Peruna."—Mrs. J. W. Reynolds.
