THE CRIMES OF CAPITAL.

When ignorant men, armed with a sense of injustice, or misled by sound-bite who make it their business to brew strife between employer and employee...

The horrible loss of over seven hundred lives, mainly those of children, by the burning of the steamer Steamer in New York harbor recently is remarkable only in the number of those sacrificed to the owners' greed for gain.

How is it possible, under a system of government inspection, that such a state of affairs could have existed as was proven in this case? The life preservers were useless, and the apparatus that should have been in competent hands...

There is much food for thought in Secretary Shaw's address before a Bazaar workmen's club at Wilmington, Delaware, on the evening of June 6th.

The average wage rate has increased largely since then, and employment has been steady since 1897. Mr. Shaw pointed out that wages have advanced in a larger proportion than have the average prices of the articles of household consumption.

The secretary pointed to the prosperity which came in 1897, when the passage of the Dingley protective tariff law gave the conditions for a revival of industry.

"For years I have been continuously" writes P. A. Gullidge, Verben, Ala. "I had a terrible case of Piles causing 21 tumors. When all failed Bucklen's Arnica salve cured me. Equally good for Burns and all aches and pains. Only 25c at St. Helens Pharmacy."
