PRINCIPLES AT ISSUE.

Secretary Shaw is making a strong and manly speech in favor of the great principles of the Republican party, and insists everywhere that it is principles and not men that are at issue in the present campaign. If a man believes in the Democratic idea of tariff revision, the management of the Philippines, and is willing to trust to its heretofore enemies and lukewarm friends the maintenance of the gold standard, then he should vote the Democratic ticket; for the personality of the Democratic nominee is fully as good as that of his Republican opponent. If, on the contrary, he believes in a protective tariff, the retention of the Philippines and that the gold standard should be maintained by the party that established it, then he should vote for Theodore Roosevelt, against whose personal character there has been no attack made.

But Secretary Shaw's utterances are in refreshing contrast to the mess of hogwash that is being sent out by the Republican literary bureau to the country papers of the United States, and which the papers will do well to ignore. Charges of corruption, made twelve years ago by Parker's enemies in New York, and which did not affect his standing among his neighbors or the citizens of that great commonwealth, are apt to prove boomerangs when published at this late date. They are decidedly dead issues, and to invoke them now will prove useless if not dangerous. Put the real issues to the front, and do not obscure them with personalities.

A NATION OF LAWBREAKERS.

We as a nation are a nation of lawbreakers. It's a habit, this disregard of the plain statutes. Nobody thinks anything of it. Sheriffs take oaths and don't keep them. Never have any idea of keeping them. Mayors and District Attorneys and Chiefs of Police all do the same thing. Oaths of office are a farce. Perjury in this line is a flourishing felony that nobody thinks anything of. It ought to be stopped.—Sheriff Brown, of Baker.

And Sheriff Brown is right, the Oregonian's specious reasoning to the contrary notwithstanding. The sheriff was not speaking of obsolete laws, or of laws that come in conflict with the constitution of the United States; but of laws that have the sanction of a great majority of the people of Oregon's metropolis—the laws prohibiting gambling.

The Constitution of the State of Oregon provides that no negro shall come into the State or own property, but the amendments to the Federal Constitution nullify that provision.

The violations of the State Constitution in regard to salaries, location of State institutions, etc., have cost the taxpayers immense sums of money, and have created a system of log rolling or reciprocal robbery that will continue to benefit the grafters, at the expense of the producers, for years to come.

The greatest of all President Roosevelt's claims to the good will of the American people is that he stands for the enforcement of the law. He does not ask the trusts whether they approve of the Sherman law. He does not ask humbler anarchists if they approve of the laws against anarchy. He is the executive—sworn to uphold the Constitution and the laws, and he will do so without fear or favor.

Sheriff Brown is right, as President Roosevelt is right, and as the Supreme Court of the State of Oregon is right when it upholds mandamus proceedings to compel officers of the law to do their duty, leaving to the legislative body the duty of enacting good laws and repealing bad ones. A rigid enforcement of all the laws will have a purifying effect upon the nation.

PROPOSED OREGON ROAD LAWS.

In accordance with a resolution adopted by the last meeting of the State Good Roads Association, held in Portland last year, President Scott, of the association, last week announced the personnel of the legislative committee, as named by him, the purpose of which committee will be to draft and offer to the State Legislature such legislation as is deemed necessary to the best interests of the good roads movements in this state. The committee is as follows: M. B. Miller, of Lebanon; C. J. Smith, of Pendleton; W. W. Steiwer, of Fossil; J. H. Albert, of Salem; M. A. Wertz, of Grants Pass.

Among matter suggested to the committee, to cover which it is presumed bills will be drafted for presentation to the Legislature, is the matter of public road construction by convict labor, a subject which has been agitated quite freely the past year.

Other prospective laws which the committee will also probably draft, is one permitting the County Court to condemn property for the purpose of straightening out roads, and another for the purpose of requiring petitioners for the establishment of new roads to pay the cost of survey and viewing.

Assessors in heavily timbered counties are doing right in doubling and trebling former assessments of timber lands, and probably the present assessment should be doubled again next year. Outsiders who are going to make millions out of Oregon timber ought to pay more taxes.

The Mist and Oregonian $2 per year. The Mist is the oldest and best paper published in the county.

Hon. Geo. C. Brownell is certainly one of the most patient, eventempered politicians. He is the most effective orator the Republican party has in Oregon and his best efforts have always been at the service of his party. In addition to this he has worked earnestly in the interest of the triumphant faction, and it is not too much to say that had it not been for his efforts Mr. Binger Hermann would not have received the nomination for Congress two years ago. Yet Mr. Brownell gets nothing for his services, while men who apparently deserve nothing get it all. Mr. Brownell was, until quite recently, a candidate for the presidency of the State Senate. Now he announces that he is supporting Senator Kuykendall for that position, and Senators Fulton and Mitchell are interviewed to the effect that they highly esteem Mr. Brownell and are concerned with a desire to do something for him. Well, there should something come of this great desire to help the gentleman from Clackamas, but judging the future by the past, they will continue to accept his services and pay in promises.

The fruits of Oregon's new inheritance tax law are just beginning to be harvested and stored up in the state treasury. There are over forty estates coming under its provisions now in process of settlement and several thousands of dollars already in the fund. Recently there was the sum of $672.98 received in the state treasury as the tax upon the estate of Mrs. Lucy Cowles, late of Yamhill county. The total appraised value of the estate was $75,846.

The Japs are making preparations to celebrate the fall of Port Arthur.

ASK ME NO MORE.

Chicago Chronicle.

[The following pathetic lyric in which Henry Gassaway Davis voices his anguish to Tom Taggart, is after the fashion of a poem of the same name by Thomas Carew, an English poet of the 16th century, who is said to have gone to school with the Democratic Vice-Presidential nominee.]

Ask me no more, Tom Taggart, please.
In suppliance on your bended knees,
My wealth was given to have and hold,
I will not throw away my gold.

Ask me no more; you've asked enough,
I dare not, must not, cough up stuff.
Leggo my leg and let me go,
You've made it too long by a foot or so.

Ask me no more to loosen up
And pour my money in your tin cup.
'Twas pelf, and that alone, I see,
That made them make me a nominee.

Ask me no more, with tears that flow,
To let my hard-earned dollars go.
Though I may seem decrepit, old,
I'm not too old to hold my gold.

Ask me no more. Begone! Away!
Why hanker for shekels night and day?
I gave you a nickel one day last week.
For mercy's sake, Tommy, take a sneak.

LOWER EXPORT PRICES.

Our Democratic friends appear to be worried over the fact that our manufacturers sometimes meet foreign competitors on their own ground by cutting prices. There is no denying that this is some times done, and there is no apology to offer for doing it. Sometimes it is for one reason, sometimes for another. Here are a few given to the Industrial Commission:

"Cash payments and large purchases in the foreign trade, whereas the domestic trade is based on credits and small purchases.

"The drawback or rebate of the tariff on imported raw material of goods manufactured for export:

"To overcome the tariff of other countries.

"To secure new markets.

"To hold a market against new competitors.

"To clear our surplus stock or to prevent a shutdown and increased cost of production, and keep mills running and men employed.

"To get rid of samples and out of date goods.

"Because the expense of selling and advertising is less abroad than at home."

Absolutely no one is injured, and many are benefitted. First, the workman is benefitted, because he has more employment. If we export $500,0000,000 worth of manufactured goods, no matter what the selling price, the laborer gets about $450,000,000 of it. He gets it in the direct manufacture, in the transportation, in the making of tools and machinery, the clerical work—in every process, coming and going, first, last and all the time. The farmer benefits, because he sells more of his products right at home at profitable prices. The manufacturer benefits, because he disposes of his surplus stock and gains or retains a new foreign market. The tariff has nothing to do with it, except that both Democratic and Republican tariff laws have provided for a rebate of 99 per cent of the duty on materials imported which enter into manufactures for export.

Just why the Democrats and Freetraders object to our manufacturers building up a foreign trade it is hard to guess, unless they object to the American workingman being constantly employed and well paid. They will hardly win votes for their candidate on this issue.

HAPPY KANSAS.

According to William Allen White's paper, the Emporia Gazette, this is the way that Kansas feels:

Kansas is called excitable—but she is as calm as a basket of chips this year. Not a wave of trouble rolls across her peaceful breast. Eight years ago people were flocking into the Gazette stopping the paper. T. G. Wibley stopped it three times in that campaign. But this year he is taking the paper—insides and tops and all—without so much as a yip of disapproval. And when Wibley is satisfied the world is soaked in goose grease and is smooth all over. Eight years ago the Populists were going to reform the world at the next meeting of the Legislature, and were carrying banners up and down the street denouncing Wall street, waving flags at the octopus, and shaking sticks at the gold bugs. These were hot, happy and rambunctious days. A man could start a riot by reading the alphabet in a loud tone; produce a revolution by reciting the multiplication table in a dramatic manner, and get six months in the hospital by declaring for either of the Ten Commandments against the Chicago platform.

But now Kansas is as idle as a painted turtle on a plaster paris log; pisend as a hired man asleep under a hedge fence, and happy as a big sunflower that nods in all the breezes.

The reason is that Kansas has paid her debts; has money in the bank, clear conscience, and "organ in the parlor to give the place a tone." Everything is lovely and the altitude of the goose is above timber line.

NOT "NAVAL" ORANGES BUT "NAVEL."

A prominent grocer in the city where The American Farmer is published recently hung out a card announcing "Naval Oranges, Fresh From California." The grocer either did not know the true name of the fruit he had for sale or else he had a "bad spell" when he wrote his placard.

There is no such thing as a naval orange. California and Florida produce fine oranges, Florida the better of the two, but they have no relation to the navy. They are equally as well suited for the army as for the navy, and the great army of civilians consume far more of them than both of the classes together. California has no navy and consequently no occasion to raise naval oranges.

What the grocer had to sell and what he intended to advertise was "navel oranges." By erroneously spelling it "naval" instead of "navel" he perverted the meaning of the term and set many land lubbers to wondering if he had a new kind of orange produced at sea. The fact was he was at sea in his spelling. The navel orange, which, by the way, is produced only in California, is so called from the peculiar formation of the fruit at the blossom end, resembling the navel in the young human body. Intelligent readers of The American Farmer know, of course, that the navel in the human body represents the channel by which it was fed and nourished before birth. It is peculiar to all animals which suckle their young and is one of the most wonderful and interesting provisions of nature.

It is not known who produced the navel orange of California, or whether it was accidental or the result of careful experiment and, as one might say, breeding. This orange is only one of the hundreds, probably thousands, of instances of new and valuable varieties of grains, fruits, and vegetables produced by experimenting, crossing and interbreeding. The same law of progress runs through the plant world that prevails in the animal world. It is the law of the survival of the fittest under which, while like always tends to produce like, there is also a constant tendency on the part of nature to produce varieties. Scientists know this theoretically and farmers, florists, gardeners and fruit growers know it practically.—American Farmer.

A Boy's Wild Ride For Life.

With family around expecting him to die, and a son riding for life, 18 miles, to get Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, W. H. Brown, of Leesville, Ind., endured death's agonies from asthma; but this wonderful medicine gave instant relief and soon cured him. He writes: "I now sleep soundly every night." Like marvelous cures of consumption, pneumonia, bronchitis, coughs, colds and la grippe prove its matchless merit for all throat and lung troubles. Guaranteed bottles 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at St. Helens Pharmacy.

ALWAYS TOO BUSY.

This is indeed a busy, bustling age, a time when people are living fast, a time when people rush through life seemingly oblivious to personal comfort, or present surroundings. An exchange makes some comments upon this fast life we are leading, which might be well for all to consider. It says:

Are you too busy to live today? Is that the reason we put off living until to morrow?

There is a friend whom we should like to visit. The days, the years go by and we have not called. The friend is taken away. We were too busy.

There is pleasure to be found in a little trip to the country. It would rest the husband and the mother and be a holiday for the children. We put it off until some other time, and that other time seems to never come. We are always too busy.

There are a hundred little kindnesses we should do if we only had the time. The chances pass, the time never comes. We are always too busy for the kindnesses.

We are too busy today; we are too busy. We are too busy week in and week out.

There is a time for everything if we place the most important thing first. We are too busy over trivial matters to get the real good out of living.

When we get over our hurry, we promise ourselves to live. And we never get over our hurry.

Some day we shall live as we wish. We cheat ourselves into believing. But the some day never comes. We come, we pass and we never know the joy of life. We have been too busy getting ready to live. Too busy—always too busy.

THE BASEST OF CRIMES.

Oregonian.

The utter folly of parents who, in their age and helplessness, barter the home that shelters them for a promise to pay, in care and protection through life, given by a son who has other and paramount interests, has been again shown in the lonely death, following months of isolation, lack of care and scanty food, of an old man of 80 in his cabin near Stayton, Marion county. After a futile attempt on the part of relatives to send him to the insane asylum, the old man retired to a cabin on the corner of the farm that he had deeded to his son in consideration of care in his old age, and there, after he had been dead two or three days, his body was found by passing neighbors. Aged parents cannot be expected to heed the warning. A simple statement of Will Carleton in his poem "Over the Hill to the Poorhouse" gives the all-sufficient reason for this:

Every couple's children
Are a heap the best to them

The old people do not believe that their boy will turn them out. This is the whole story. It is dictated by Nature itself, and the sad sequel, so often written in sorrow and neglect, makes no impression upon the loyal hearts of aged parents who are asked to surrender their rights to live in their own home for the privilege of living in that of another. The daughter-in-law in this case was the offending power that drove the old man off. One can but wonder what the son was doing in the three days that the body of his father lay unvisited in his hut after death "from natural causes" gave the old man release.

Fearful Odds Against Him.

Bedridden, alone and destitute. Such in brief was the condition of an old soldier by the name of J. J. Havens, of Versailles, Ohio. For years he was troubled with kidney disease and neither doctors nor medicine gave him relief. At length he tried Electric Bitters. It put him on his feet in short order and now he testifies: "I'm on the road to complete recovery." Best on earth for liver and kidney troubles and all forms of stomach and bowel complaints. Only 50c. Guaranteed by the St. Helens Pharmacy.

Look out for Oakman, the Hillsboro murderer. He is said to be in this country, and there is a reward of $200 for his capture. Be sure, however, to get the drop on him.

TOOK A CHANGE OF VENUE.

The following is told of a couple who attended the Oregon state fair last fall and stopped at one of the best hotels in Salem. About 2 a. m. the husband was seized with severe stomach cramps and was almost frantic. His wife was very much frightened, but knew that something must be done quickly, so without waiting to put on clothing started down stairs on the jump with naught on but her "nighty." Rushing into the dining room she saw a mustard cruet on the table. Emptying the contents into her handkerchief she started upstairs on the run, and entered the first door she came to. Here she saw a man lying on the bed, who in the dim darkness she mistook for her husband, and gently tucking up his lingerie slapped the poultice on his abdomen. The man let out a howl and sitting up quickly shouted in angry tones: "Woman, what in h—l are you doing?" There was a shriek, a patter of nushod feet on the hall floor, and, frightened half to death, the poor wife found her room and suffering husband. She told him her troubles, and it tickled him so that his cramps took a change of venue.

CLATSKANIE CORRESPONDENCE

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Downing, who have been visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Conyers the past week, returned to their home in Portland Monday evening.

Mr. Carter, the contractor, is building a brand new porch around the dwelling of Mr. J. A. Smith, on Nehalem street, and when completed will add to the beauty of that part of the city.

We noticed the smiling countenance of Mr. John Cameron upon our streets this week. Jack, as he is usually called, is a genial, whole-souled good fellow. His old friends here are glad to meet and greet him once more.

The game of base ball played last Sunday between the "Injuns" and Selwood teams, seemed to be altogether a one-sided affair. The score stood 12 to 7 in favor of the home team.

The Base Ball Tournament to be held at this place this week promises to be a grand affair. The weather has cleared up and every one here is in high glee expecting that the "Injuns" of Clatskanie will sweep the field, carry off the trophies, and be big "Injuns" generally.

Our public schools will begin next Monday morning, with Mr. J. H. Collins, as principal; Mrs. Collins and Miss Mary Tichenor, teachers of intermediate departments, and a young lady of Astoria, teacher in the primary department. We have not yet learned her name.

Trains on the A. & C. R. R. all seem to be crowded with visitors to the Seaside resorts this summer. If the travel to the seacoast continues to increase as it has in the past few years, the railroad company will have to double track their road in order to accommodate the travel to the seashore.

Mr. Vernstein, of Brookville, Pa., and Mr. E. C. Hall, of this city, are out in the Nehalem this week, rusticating.

Mr. Joseph Pilcher and family, who have been running the Imperial Hotel in this city the past several years, have pulled up stakes and moved to Kalama, where they will renovate and open out the Kalama Hotel. We bespeak for them the patronage of the traveling public. Mr. and Mrs. Pilcher will be missed here by the citizens of this place as well as the travelers coming this way. They set the best meals and furnished the cleanest and best beds of any hotel ever run in this place.

Our justice of the peace and constable are kept quite busy nowadays settling difficulties between neighbors and looking after parties who go astray, violate the laws of the land and take property that does not belong to them. It is said that both officials will try and raise a mustache and grow burnsides, so that they can be distinguished by their general appearance.

The Latest Styles.

Of men's and boys' suits are in now. We are from $2.50 to $5 lower in price, comparison high-rent stores' prices. We also save you from 50c to $1 on a pair of shoes, of which we carry a complete line. Good assortment of men's hats and pants, at $1 or $1.50 less, in comparison with high-rent stores' prices. Our prices on men's woolen underwear are not to be equaled. Big cut on blankets and comforters. John Dellar, corner First and Yamhill streets.
