

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Your doctor will tell you that thin, pale, weak, nervous children become strong and well by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Small doses, for a few days.

Sarsaparilla

The change is very prompt and very marked. Ask your doctor why it is. He has our formula and will explain.

When 13 years old, for many months one thought I could live because of thin blood. But, in a few weeks, Ayer's Sarsaparilla completely restored me to health.

Left a Letter on the Desk

Our little youngster, six years old, has just reached the "learning-to-write" stage in school. Sometimes his teacher has the children copy moral precepts from the blackboard into their copy books. Among these was the statement: "Kind words are never lost." In Freddy's book, however, written clear across the paper to the other margin, this appeared: "Kind words are never lost." When he was asked: "Where is the T, Freddy?" he replied: "Oh, there was no room on the paper for the T, so I left it on the desk. You can see it there if you go to the school."

The same youngster has a sister who was married recently. Being on a visit to her parents, and happening to catch Freddy in some mischief, his sister reproved him. "Umph," sniffed Freddy, "you needn't scold me! You don't belong in my family, anyway."

Greatest Things Are the Simplest.

The trouble with us is that we look too high and too far away for our chances. We forget that the greatest things are the simplest. In hunting for roses, we trample the daisies under our feet. We are blind to the chances and blessings near us because we are looking so far away for them. Everything depends upon the power of the mind to see opportunities. It is the eye that can see the chance, the pluck and determination to lay hold of it and wring from it every possibility that we lack, rather than the chance "to make good."—Success Magazine.

MILLET'S EDUCATION.

Millet, the famous French painter, was born of peasant folk, from whom he had the habit of simple living and a powerful physique. From them, too, writes the author of "Jean Francois Millet and the Barbizon School," he obtained his great tenderness toward the people, whom he was destined to delineate so powerfully.

By working with his folk upon the farm he had not only the opportunity of incessantly watching the appearance of figures in different sorts of toil, but he obtained as well an actual knowledge of the farm laborer's crafts. He learned how to plow and how to sow; he learned all about the peculiar nature of all kinds of crops and every kind of domestic animal; and he became acquainted with the discomfort, with the agony that arises from continuous bodily exertion, with all that a farm laborer suffers from exposure to scorching sun and biting wind or frost.

Millet was happy in his instructors. His great-uncle, Charles Millet, a priest, divided his farm and giving instruction to his little nephews and nieces. At all times this priest's necessity upon his grandnephew the necessity of being industrious, upright and courageous; and from him proceeded the impulse of that education that sent Millet more suitably equipped for the task that lay before him than many another artist whose name has been written large in history.

It is said that Vergil's words, "It is the hour when the great shadows descend upon the plain," first revealed to the boy the beauty of his own surroundings, and first lighted that fire which was to be productive of some of the finest paintings of evening scenes that the world is likely ever to possess.

As to his Bible and Vergil, he read and reread them, and always in Latin; and Sennier says, "I have never heard a more eloquent translator of these two books." Instead of being an illiterate person, indeed, when he went to Paris, Millet, "The Wild Man of the Woods," as he was called by Delacroix's pupils, among whom he found himself, was already a cultivated man. His education had been far better than if he had been an ordinary member of a bourgeois, or even of a noble family. Its great characteristics were its thoroughness, its simplicity and its refinement—the very characteristics that make his own works lovable.

A Developed Daisy.

For many years Mr. Burbank worked upon the daisy, taking the tiny field daisy, the best of Eastern farmers, as a basis of his experiments, and developing it until it is now a splendid blossom from five to seven inches in diameter, with wonderful keeping qualities after cutting. In the same way he has greatly increased the geranium in size, and at the same time has made it far more brilliant in color.—From William S. Harwood's "A Wonder-Worker of Science" in the April Century.

Japan and Russia Compared.

Although the population of Russia is nearly three and a half times as great as the population of Japan, says the World's Work, and its area nearly six times as great, the Japanese have a million more pupils in their schools than the Russians. They publish more periodicals and books. Although Russia has nearly nine times as many miles of railroad, the Japanese roads carry more passengers, though less freight.

They send half as many again letters by post as the Russians send. With only about one-fourth as many miles of telegraph wires, they send nearly as many messages. Their trade per capita is greater than the Russians both in imports and in exports, although the total trade of the Russians, of course, is very much greater.

The apparent financial and military strength of the Russians is incomparably the greater. Yet so cheaply does the Japanese soldier live that Japan may do more with little money than Russia with more.

Do you expect to send your son to college?

"Well, I haven't decided yet. In view of the hazing and the football, I'm half inclined to believe it would be more merciful to finish him up with chloroform."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Stranger—So you went to school with Rudolph Kipling, eh? I suppose you know he is now a famous writer? Uncle Fletch—Sho! Why, him an' me used the same copy-book, an' I know my writin' 'd beat his'n all hollow.—Exchange.

"What is a counter-irritant?" asked Mrs. Smithers. "A counter-irritant," replied Smithers, "is a woman who makes the clerk pull down everything on the shelves for two hours, and then buys four cents' worth of hairpins."—Cleveland Press.

"Ugh!" exclaimed the exchange ticket, withdrawing as far as possible into the corner of the pocket, "you're from a pawnshop." "Suppose I am," retorted the pawn ticket, "I am the pawnshop's one redeeming feature."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Naggus—What are you going to do with the hero and heroine of that magazine story you're running now? Mary—they're married in the last chapter. Naggus—I'm glad of it. It will serve them right.—Chicago Tribune.

Distinguished Artist—Perhaps if you came here you will get a better light on the picture. This studio is not nearly large enough. Fair Visitor (desiring to understand)—Yes, yes; I know. One can't get far enough away from your pictures!—Punch.

Employment Agent—What was the matter with your last place? Domestic—The missus was too particular. Employment Agent—In what way? Domestic—She wouldn't let me look the baby in the foidin' bed when I had company.—New York Weekly.

In Good Trim—Cityman—So you are going to plant a garden again this year. Were your vegetables last year a success? Suburbanite—Great! Why, my neighbor's hens took first prizes at all the poultry shows, and they ate practically nothing but my vegetables.—Judge.

"I must warn you, Bridget," said Mrs. Nurich, "to see that the peas are thoroughly mashed." "Mashed, is it?" remarked the new cook in surprise. "Yes; Mr. Nurich is so high-strung, you know, they make him nervous when they roll off his knife."—Philadelphia Press.

One Man's Wisdom.

She (after the proposal)—Are you in favor of a long or short engagement? He—Well, that depends. If you can cook, I'm in favor of a short one, but if you can't, we'd better make it long enough to give you a chance to make good.

A NOBLE CAREER.

The Life of William H. Baldwin an Inspiring and Hopeful Success.

The noble career, untimely ended, of President William H. Baldwin, of the Long Island Railroad, illustrates the encouraging fact that good men, also, we have always with us. At a time when certain men and certain combinations of men in great business are under public suspicion for selfish and unsocial practices on a large scale, here was a brilliant business man, at different times high in railroad enterprises in the West, South and East, and holding responsible place in large affairs of finance, who had the perfect confidence of his financial associates, of workmen and of the general public. In addition to this—though this itself and alone would be sufficient honor—he was endlessly, wisely, intensely interested in some of the most important enterprises of good citizenship, local and national; above all, in the cause of education in the Southern States. His benevolence had the stamp of statesmanship. He was truly a builder of the nation. Year by year his influence and his good fame were increasing; only a little past forty, it seemed that the future held for him twice the opportunities of his already beneficent and exemplary career. Here were unselfishness, modesty, devotion and mental and moral strength splendidly combined.

His death, after a short life not marked by dazzling gifts of money, but of human service, was followed by an outburst of praise and of affectionate regret. What a contrast here to the spectacles of men absorbed in the preposterous fight for unearned millions; men whose paths are strewn with the wrecks of other's fortunes; whose examples are evil; who go down to gilded tombs with the cold regard or the bitter execration of their fellows.—Century.

Debs Wanted Hill to Join Union.

Despite James J. Hill's belief that wages have been raised to a fictitious standard, there has been only one strike on his railroad, the Great Northern, and this was settled to the satisfaction of the strikers. An interesting episode in connection with it is told by Eugene V. Debs, who led the agitation.

"President James J. Hill and I had shaken hands," said Mr. Debs, in relating the story, "and declared the hatchet buried. He said he was glad it was over, and assured me that he had no feeling or resentment. As we stood chatting in his office, he remarked: 'By the way, Debs, you'll have to be my general manager, tonight, for the men won't go to work except on your orders.' I replied: "'All right; I'll guarantee that by morning the trains will all be running on schedule time.' Then Mr. Hill suddenly asked me: "'How about my wages, Debs? I'm an employee, too, you know, and, since everybody gets a raise, where do I come in?' He laughed heartily when I answered: "'Join the union, and we'll see that you get a square deal.'"—Success Magazine.

"Put the Hellum Apert."

It adds to the impressiveness of a pulpit discourse to dwell at some length on certain points, but this sometimes has been overdone.

An earnest preacher who, in warning sinners against the rocks of ruin, had brought up the favorite illustration of a ship in imminent danger of going to pieces on a reef, was prolonging the horror of the scene, demanding what must be done, etc., when he was interrupted by an impatient sailor among his listeners with: "Put the hellum apert, you lubber, and luff!"

A Year and a Day.

He—To-morrow is my birthday. She—I suppose you will take a day off. "I shall." "And how do you think I celebrate when I have a birthday?" "Oh, I presume you take a year off."—Life.

It is the involuntary impulse of nine in ten, when picking up a postal card, to turn it over to see what is written on it.

BROKE THE RIDING RECORD.

Half-Breed Who Made 120 Miles in Ten Hours at a Gallop.

"You people who came here since the railroads were built have an idea that we used to have a bad time of it in getting about Washington Territory," said the old-timer the other day. "That's where you are wrong. Distances were no greater than they are now. True, we didn't always go so fast as you do now, but we made speed that would astonish you."

"I remember one trip an old friend of mine made, a big cattelman from Kittitas county, afterward the owner of considerable property in Seattle. His divorced wife was living here, and she took it into her head to go after him through the courts for non-payment of alimony. There were a number of reasons why he shouldn't pay, but he didn't care to stay here and argue it out with the courts, so getting a tip on what was doing he decided to go back to the cattle in Kittitas.

"About 6 o'clock one evening, accompanied by his horse wrangler, who happened to be here with him, he struck out horseback for Ellensburg. The two rode all night—it was in midsummer and at the full of the moon—and the next morning they ate breakfast in Ellensburg—110 miles away. And they didn't think it was much of a ride at that.

"At that time nearly all the Indians on the reservation had a half-breed or at least one pretty good horse in his riding string. This particular young half-breed boy had an extra good one, and he was selected to carry the dispatches, being a reliable and faithful fellow. Well, he rode through to Walla Walla in ten hours, a distance of 120 miles, and during the ride he never slowed down from a gallop. That was in midsummer, and if you ever have been in that Snake river region at this season of the year you can imagine that was some riding."—Seattle Post-Intelligence.

Force of Habit.

"Give me a two-cent stamp, please," said the young lady to the drug clerk. "We are just out," replied the d. c. absently, "but here is something just as good." And he handed her a couple of ones.

Mothers will find Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup the best remedy to use for their children during the teething period.

Afraid to Hink It.

Druggist—You didn't take a vacation this year, did you? Doctor—No; I couldn't afford to take any vacation.

"Why, how's that?" Doctor—Well, you see, I have a number of wealthy patients on the string, and I was afraid if I went away for a few weeks they might get well.

The Oldest Living Twins.

Publication of an item from Washington, Pa., regarding twins 81 years old, has brought out the fact that Freeport, Pa., leads by several years. Dr. Charles H. Gillespie and his sister, Miss Mary Gillespie, are twins, and were born in October, 1820, thus being 84 years old. Dr. Gillespie has practiced medicine for nearly half a century. He was captain of Company F, Seventy-eighth Pennsylvania regiment, and served throughout the civil war. Freeport has been the home of the twins since the close of the rebellion. It is believed they are the oldest living twins in the United States.

HOW TWO BEAUTIFUL WOMEN ESCAPED PELVIC CATARRH BY AID OF PE-RU-NA

Female Weakness Is Usually Pelvic Catarrh. Pe-ru-na Cures Catarrh Wherever Located.

Mrs. Lizzie Redding 3184 B Clifton Place, St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I found after trying many different medicines to restore me to health, that Peru-na was the only thing which could be depended upon. I began taking it when I was in a decline, induced by female weakness and over-wrought nerves. "I began to feel stronger during the first week I took Peru-na and my health improved daily until now I am in perfect health and enjoy life as I never did before."—Lizzie Redding.

Mrs. Mable Bradford, 13 Church Street, Burlington, Vt., Secretary Whittier Oratorical Society, writes: "Peru-na is certainly a wonderful medicine for the ills of women. I have heard it spoken of in the highest praise by many, and certainly my experience is well worthy of a good word. "I began to have severe pains across my back about a year ago, brought on by a cold, and each subsequent month brought me pain and distress. "Your remedy was prescribed, and the way it acted upon my system was almost too good to be true. I certainly have regained my health and strength, and I no longer suffer periodical pains and extreme lassitude."—Mable Bradford.

Thousands of Women Cured Every Year by Correspondence.—This is What Dr. Hartman Proposes to Do For You Without Charge.

Women who suffer should read the evidences presented here. We have thousands of letters from grateful friends who tell the same story.

Half the ills that are peculiarly a woman's own are of a catarrhal character. Female weakness was not understood for many years.

Dr. Hartman deserves the credit of having determined its real character. He has made catarrh and catarrhal diseases, including pelvic catarrh, a life-long study.

Peru-na cures catarrh, whether of the pelvic organs or any other organ of the human body.

Peru-na, a Natural Beautifier. Peru-na produces clean, mucous membranes, the basis of facial symmetry and a perfect complexion.

The women have not been slow to discover that a course of Peru-na will do more toward restoring youthful beauty than all the devices known to science.

Many a girl has regained her faded beauty, many a matron has lengthened the days of their comely appearance by using Peru-na.

In Peru-na these women find a prompt and permanent cure.

Thousands of testimonials to this effect are received by Dr. Hartman every year. The good that Peru-na has accomplished in this class of cases can scarcely be over-estimated.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peru-na, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis. Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio. All correspondence held strictly confidential.
