COUNTY OFFICIAL PAPER.

WHY WASHINGTON COUNTY FAILED.

The Hillsboro Independent appears to be unable to understand why Washington County failed to receive the credit to which it should have been entitled at the hands of the committee that awarded the county prizes at the Lewis and Clark Exposition, and for the benefit of our friend Bath we will endeavor to explain it, as we understand it:

In the first place, the gentlemen in charge of Washington County's interests made the mistake of looking at the matter entirely from an agricultural standpoint, and if this had been the true point of view Washington would have been entitled to a much higher rating, for her products were of the very finest. But the committee on awards very rightly decided on the point system, giving credit for minerals, forestry, fish, game, livestock, manufactures, and all the other resources of the county, and in these varied classes Washington was outpointed by much smaller counties, including Columbia. Washington received the largest number of gold medals awarded any county in the State, but they were procured by making separate entries of each bunch of grain, and several gold medals were awarded different persons on precisely the same article. For instance: Emil Cap, Mrs. Georgia Hughes, and Thomas Talbot were each awarded a gold medal on Chili Club wheat. Such awards had no effect on the jury that passed upon the respective merits of the county exhibits, and were probably made for the purpose of encouraging the corporation's pet jeweler, as there is certain to be a rakeoff on every medal manufactured.

Columbia County did not make so many separate entries, but we endeavored to have something on hand to score in each department. Points were given for installation, and our booth was conceded to be the peer of any in the agricultural building. Then we had fish, minerals, forestry, dairy, agriculture, and horticulture. Our agricultural exhibit did not compare in quantity with Washington County's, but our entire showing, taking into consideration the development of the two counties, was considered worthy of second place, while Washington was placed in the fourth class.

The jury of awards, to determine the distribution of the cash prizes offered by the State Commission, was composed of one representative from five different States. Each of these men had charge of his own State's interests at the Exposition, and presumably was one of the leading citizens of his State. It was an ideal jury, and its findings are entitled to the greatest respect. Washington failed simply because her exhibit was made upon the one-idea plan, and was not broad enough in its scope.

No great space will be given to any refutal of the Register's statements. The fact is, however, that Mr. Mitchell furnished the interview to the Oregonian regarding George Mayger and now denies it. Just as he retailed a lot of gossip about the Congregational minister, and denied it the same day.

Gov. Folk said at Philadelphia that boodlers are cowards when attacked. That is a great truth which can not be too often spoken. Boodlers grow arrogant only through long toleration.

On sober second thought the Japanese have concluded that the treaty with Russia is about the right thing, and secured all that would not have cost more than it came to.

There seems to be something in the nature of a popular regret that Pat Crowe was not spared to the public long enough to take a pull at some of the big insurance swindlers.

Gov. Jeff Davis is carrying his prejudice to a ridiculous length. He refuses to sit at the same table with certain white men.

It is acknowledged that Missouri can make a great exposition display, but it ought to have an asbestos setting.

An armored battleship is modern enough to count if its men behind the guns are good marksmen.

Oregon's Exposition is over and it can now devote its time to finding a better grade of congressmen.

SAVE THE CHURCH.

Rev. Kemp announced last Sunday that, unless some move was inaugurated to prevent it, the Methodist Church Extension Society would shortly foreclose its lien upon the church building at this place, and that it would be torn down and such parts of it as were available would be used in the construction of a church at Rainier. The debt upon the church amounts to one thousand dollars, and the Extension Society offers to accept five hundred dollars and turn the building over to the church free of all incumbrances. Just at this time St. Helens is not a good field for so many churches, and if we believed the present local stagnation would continue we would think it best to allow the church to be torn down. But we believe that in two years from now the population of this place will be more than doubled, and that we will need all the present church facilities. The Methodist denomination, with the assistance of people of other beliefs, and some of no belief, built the old church on the hill, and for many years it was the only place of worship in this city. Ministers of all denominations held services there, and they did not seem to be any the worse for their contact with each other; but the time came, as it appears to in all communities, when the different sects thought it necessary for each to have a separate place of worship, and it appears that in order to accomplish this the Methodists have assumed a burden greater than they can bear.

Would it not be a good thing, from every standpoint, for our citizens to help them bear this burden? On the eve of a revival of our business interests, we do not want it said that it was necessary for any church to be torn down and moved away from St. Helens when the sum of $500 will save it.

How much can you afford to give to keep a handsome church edifice from destruction? Let the editor know, and we will see what can be done about it. Several contributions are assured, but more are needed.

VERNONIA ITEMS.

Margaret Spencer, who has been in Portland the last three weeks visiting her brother and sister, Omar and Oril, and taking in the Lewis and Clark Exposition, returned on Wednesday of last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Adams were out to St. Helens the first of last week on business.

C. B. Armstrong, Geo. H. Sitts, Wm. Deerberry and W. W. Allen went out this week with teams for loads for our merchant, H. G. Downing. It looks as though Mr. Downing is expecting some trade during the winter.

Claude and Vernie Chamberlain moved into the H. A. Harris property on Wednesday of last week. This will make them a very pleasant and comfortable home.

R. Sesseman, Joseph VanBlaricom, Oscar Lindstrom, and D. H. Keasey went out to St. Helens Friday last as witnesses in the Coulter case, which was tried Saturday.

The Parker boys had a shooting match here last Saturday, but as it had not been advertised there were but few in attendance. It pays to use printer's ink.

Frank Tracy has been carrying the mail to Kist and Albion the past week. Frank is very much at home in this business, having served on this same route several years ago

Clare Eddy, the young man who has been stopping with Druggist Stewart during the summer, getting the benefit of our delightful Nehalem climate, visited his mother in portland the past week.

Hazel and Vivian Bonnick, who have been spending the past three weeks in Portland, visiting the Fair, as well as relatives there, and also their father at Houlton, returned Friday last, glad to get home again. They entered school Monday.

Corwin Skidmore and wife of Missouri, who had been visiting with G. P. Spencer and family the past two weeks, left the first of this week for Portland, where they will take a steamer for San Francisco, it being their intention to do a little touring in the Golden State before returning to their home. Mr. Skidmore, while here was wonderfully impressed with the bigness of our Nehalem Valley trees. There are some pretty good specimens in this vicinity, but we do not claim the largest in the world.

L. B. Stewart, who has been attending the Exposition in Portland, and from there going to St. Helens on important court business, came home Thursday of last week.

John Pringle spent several days of last week in St. Helens on court business. In the meantime his son John G. looked after the store. The boys tell it that "Jack" had an interesting experience one night in being aroused along in the wee small hours by a noise on the outside of the store, which he took to be burglars or incendiaries. He arose, and with an electric flash lantern in one hand and a revolver in the other, he went out to investigate, and on turning the light in the direction of the disturbance, lo, and behold! Well, ask Sidney what it was he saw.

Will Lindsay and Ed. Sesseman "hit the trail" toward St. Helens Sunday morning to attend court, being called there as witnesses.
