THE OLD FLAG.

Off with your hat as the flag goes by!
And let the heart have its say;
You're man enough for a tear in your eye
That you will not wipe away.

You're man enough for a thrill that goes
To your very finger tips—
Aye, the lump just then in your throat that rose
Spoke more than your parted lips!

Lift up the boy on your shoulder high
And show him the faded shred—
Those stripes would be red as the sunset sky
If death could have dyed them red.

The man that bore it with death has lain
This twenty years and more;
He died that the work should not be vain
Of the men who bore it before.

The man that bears it is bent and old,
And ragged his beard and gray,
But look at his eye fire young and bold
At the tune that he hears them play.

The old tune thunders through all the air
And strikes right into the heart—
If ever it calls for you, boy, be there!
Be there and ready to start!

Off with your hat as the flag goes by!
Uncover the youngster's head!
Teach him to hold it holy and high
For the sake of its sacred dead.
—Henry Cuyler Bunner.

MICKEY EMMETT'S FOURTH OF JULY.

He's a man now, and a good one, but July 4, 1872, he was a freckled-faced, barefooted school boy in Elwood, Kan. He's a division superintendent on the Illinois Central railroad now, and he writes his name "M. R. Emmett, Supt.," but in those days he was known at the village school as Mickey Emmett. Of course Michael Robert Emmett would have been more distingue and deferential, but in those days he didn't go in much for style, and, with the memory of his dead father's fine Irish brogue yet ringing in his ears, "Mickey" sounded all right.

Mickey's widowed mother "kept cows." Nobody called her little establishment a "dairy" except herself, but she managed to eke out a decent living for herself and Mickey, and she was proud of her ambition to give him an education and prouder of the fact that he always was first at his studies.

But when the glorious Fourth of 1872 drew near, Mickey made an eloquent plea for some fireworks. He wanted to show his patriotism. He had an ambition to make as much noise as the other boys, and his heart rebelled at the suggestion that "'twas a waste of money." The widow promised him a flag.

"Oi'll giv yez a two-bit flag," said she, "an' take yez over t' the picnic at Lake Conthrary. They's t' be a balloon ascinsion and free foir wurruks, and 'twill cost us both only four-bits."

Mickey preferred to make bedlam in his own yard, but the widow was bent on the picnic, and the boy agreed to go.

It was the balloon that fascinated the lad. He was no sooner on the picnic grounds than he sought out the cord-netted bag of yellow, with its wicker basket, its anchor and its gaping mouth. When the great charcoal fire was kindled and the pipe inserted into the big balloon, Mickey was the busiest lad in the neighborhood. His good mother watched him and cautioned him a hundred times, but he hovered about the balloon like a bee at an alfalfa blossom.

Finally, the aeronaut, Prof. Winball, came forth with a bath robe flowing gracefully from his shoulders. His spangled tights gleamed in the hot sunlight, and he superintended the inflation of his balloon with the careless confidence of a master. Mickey redoubled his efforts to help so great a man. He helped to lift the sand bags into the car, and as the yellow bulb, like a monstrous orange, bobbed upward in its efforts to be free, the little Irish boy was beside himself with delight. He hopped into the basket a dozen times. The professor smiled beamingly upon him and asked:

"Will you go up with me, little man?"

Mickey glanced at his mother, who shook her head fiercely, and then he dodged away again into the crowd.

Fifty stout arms were now holding the guy ropes which confined the balloon. The day was perfect. Not a breath of wind disturbed the air. The smoke from the little steamer in the lake curled straight upward in a widening cone of gray. The trees were motionless. No cloud specked the blue sky, the water lay flat and shining like a mirror in the sun.

"Now, my friends," thundered Prof. Winball, casting aside his robe and standing resplendent in the sunlight, "when I shout 'Let go!' you must all loose hold upon the ropes."

The volunteer assistants chorused "All right." Then there was a wait while the professor looked after some carrier pigeons that were to accompany him in the ascent. Somebody shouted "Let go!" The restraining ropes were dropped with one accord, and the balloon, tenantless and like a rayless planet, rose upward from the ground.

Then the round, brown, freckled face of a small boy peeped over the rim of the basket. A woman screamed and fainted, and Mickey Emmett, the small boy of Elwood, Kan., went sailing toward the zenith alone in a slender basket, swinging by four taut cords, with the upward sweeping bulb of yellow silk lifting him beyond the sound of voices and into the measureless space where the winds are free and the world is but a silver-striped ball of green and yellow.

"When I looked over the edge of that basket," said Superintendent Emmett, telling the story, "I didn't realize that I was going up. For five minutes or more it seemed to me that the earth had suddenly dropped downward into space. I heard my mother scream and was vaguely convinced that she had felt the earth dropping under her and was frightened. It didn't occur to me that I was in danger. I rather felt that I was lucky to be in a balloon at the very moment when the world fell from its place. I speculated upon what would happen when the globe went crash against the moon, and selfishly chuckled at the thought that I, at least, wouldn't be in the smash-up.

"The only breeze I felt seemed to come straight down from above. I dropped my cap out and it fell like a pound of lead. Then, for the first time, I began to realize that I was going up and the earth was standing still, doing business in the same old place. For a quarter of an hour the ground below me looked like a concave basin. The horizon seemed like the high outer rim, and below me, so far that the people looked like small bugs, was the bottom of the hollow dish. To the west, like a yellow ribbon winding among green fields and forests and squares of golden harvest field the Missouri river lay flashing in the sun. Lake Contrary, a sheet of water four miles long, looked like the half-closed blue eye of a woman. St. Joe, smokeless and spangled with tin roofs and glass, seemed almost beneath me, like a toy village on a checkerboard, its hills flattened and its streets merely dotted with crawling specks.

"It must have been past 6 o'clock in the evening when the balloon let go. The sun was low, and yet before it set beyond the Kansas plains the world no longer looked flat. Just as the sun, monstrous in size and brazen with the dull color that you have seen at sunset, struck the horizon, the world suddenly assumed the appearance of a globe. The lake below me, now looking like a silver dime, seemed like the apex of the sphere, and then, as the sun dropped below the sky line, shadows crept about it. I saw, like stars reflected in the water, the city's lights shining dimly below. Soon the globe, down upon which I gazed with fascinating interest, lost all color. The pale lights seemed to be swimming round and round. But yet my balloon, still in the sun's half light, was luminous with a pale yellow glow.

SCREAMED AND FAINTED.

"I became fascinated with the sparks of light and streaks of fiery red that then began to glimmer and flash in tiny lines and arcs upon the earth. Sometimes a muffled roar like that of thunder and then the crack of lesser noises would reach my ears, and I began to fancy that I was far above the clouds and was looking down upon a miniature thunder storm. But finally I remembered that it was the Fourth, and then I knew that the disturbed area upon which I saw so many little darting lights was St. Joe and its evening display of Roman candles, rockets and bombs. They all seemed very trifling and pitiful to me then, and I remembered conceiving a genuine contempt for so small a thing as a pack or even a box of firecrackers.

"Then I noticed that the breeze no longer blew downward upon my bare head. I watched the bag which had been rotund and bulging, and saw that its sides were dented and flabby. I found a package of cards in the basket, advertisements for the balloonist, and throwing them out saw that they sailed lazily upward.

"'I'm falling!' I murmured, and for the first time became conscious of the most terrible fear. My hair was rather long, and stood on end partly with terror and partly from the upward draught through which I was descending more rapidly each second. The moon peeped over the eastern hills suddenly, and then I could see the earth again, luminous in a pale green glow and apparently soaring steadily toward me. Then I could see blotches of darker shadowy green, the river looked broader, and now I could see the lake as if coming up directly under me, silvery blue. Then I heard a murmur as of many distant voices which mur as of many distant voices which grew louder and louder. I heard cheers and looked over for the last time. I was falling so swiftly now that I prayed and thought of my mother by turns. Then I covered my face with my hands and waited for the crash.

"But suddenly the basket in which I crouched stopped with a sudden jerk, and then the big silken bag came softly rustling down over me. I felt another gentle bump, the voices were ringing in my ears, and I felt a hundred hands pulling away at the empty balloon. When I came to I was in a hammock on the porch of the little hotel near the lake. I wasn't hurt in the least, and my mother, laughing, crying and thanking God in her reverent old Irish way, was holding my hands. I had descended within a hundred yards of the place I had started from and had spent nearly three hours at a great altitude. Of course my mother was wild with fear, but Prof. Winball, who knew his business, reassured her somewhat by his own certainty that the absolute stillness of the air would insure my safe descent near by. His only worry was that I'd fall in the lake, and a score of boats were patrolling the waters watching for me. The balloon anchor was what caused the first jolt as I swept downward, but it broke the force of the fall and probably saved me from a broken limb at least. No, I never went near a balloon again, but I'm not sorry for the experience."—John H. Raftery in Chicago Record-Herald.

THE FIFTH OF JULY—CALLING THE ROLL.

(Adapted from a famous old poem.)

"Benjamin Jones!" the father cried;
"Here!" was the answer loud and clear,
From the lips of a youngster standing near;
And "here!" was the word the next replied.
"Johnnie Jones!" and a silence fell
This time, no answer followed the call;
Only his brother saw him fall,
Killed or wounded, he could not tell.

There they stood in the morning light
On July the fifth, the present year,
And the roll was read in accents clear
By the senior Jones, who was ghastly white.
"Charley Jones!" At the call there came
Two ambulance men and some doleful groans
As they bore in the body of Charley Jones,
Greatly disfigured, to answer his name.

"Albert Jones!" and a voice said "here!"
"Chauncey Jones!" "He's down at St. Luke's
With a couple of badly damaged 'dukes,'
The doctors say he'll be well next year."
"William Jones!"—then some one said:
"A small toy pistol went off and shot him,
And the ambulance people hurried and got him
To make some repairs on his injured head."

'Twas a gallant day, but it cost us dear;
For that family roll when called to-day,
Of a total of seven that entered the fray,
Numbered but four that answered "here!"
—Chicago Tribune.

Origin of "Yankee Doodle."

While "The Star Spangled Banner" is the United States government's official hymn, to the strains of which the flag is raised and lowered on forts and men-of-war, and "America" is the tune most favored by the patriotic populace, "Yankee Doodle" seems to best typify the "spirit of 1776."

It has long been asserted that "Yankee Doodle" was derived from a military march played by the Hessian troops during the Revolutionary war. In a recent German publication Johann Lewalter expresses the opinion that it was originally a country dance of a district of Kur-Hesse called the "Schwalm." In studying the dances of the "Schwalm" Lewalter was struck by the similarity in form and rhythm of "Yankee Doodle" to the music of these dances. At the kirmess last year in the village of Wasenberg, when the band struck up "Yankee Doodle" the young men and girls swung into a true "Schwalmer" dance, as if the music had been composed for it.

During the War of Independence the chief recruiting office for the enlistment of Hessian mercenaries was at Ziegenhain in Kur-Hesse. It seems probable, therefore, that soldiers from the "Schwalm" who fought under the banner of King George brought with them to America the tune of their childhood and played it as a march. The derisive words set to the air were no doubt added by some British wit whose joke was turned upon him when the colonists adopted the song as their own. The British, it is said, evacuated Boston playing this air. When they heard it at Yorktown, played by their conquerors, they realized that "Yankee Doodle" was indeed a "dandy," and their own bands marched out of the supposedly impregnable "last stand" playing "The World Turned Upside Down."

An Epitaph.

Stop, traveler, and weep for him
Who's lying here below.
He filled his cannon to the brim—
That's all you'll ever know.

TRADE OF UNITED STATES.

Foreign Commerce is Greatest With European Countries.

Washington, June 26.—An analysis of the foreign commerce of the United States, contained in a bulletin issued by the department of Commerce and Labor, says that in the fiscal year 1905, 48 per cent of the imports into the United States was drawn from Europe, 20 per cent from North America, 13 per cent from South America, 14 per cent from Asia. Of the exports from the United States in the same year, 67 per cent went to Europe, 17 per cent to North America, 4 per cent to South America, 8 per cent to Asia, 2 per cent to Oceanica and 1 per cent to Africa.

A comparison with the figures for earlier years shows a gradual decline in the share of our imports supplied by Europe and in the share Europe takes of our expots. This is due largely to the enlargement of our trade with the Orient.

Imports from Europe have grown from $384,000,000 in 1895 to $541,000,000 in 1905; from North America, $134,000,000 in 1895 to $227,000,000 in 1905; from South America, from $112,000,000 to $151,000,000, but the bulletin adds that in 1906 they will fall about $14,000,000 below those of 1905, chiefly on account of a reduction of the quantity of coffee and India rubber imported. From Asia the imports have grown from $78,000,000 to $163,000,000 in 1905.

Exports to Europe have grown from $628,000,000 in 1895 to $1,021,000,000 in 1905; to North Amercia, from $108,500,000 to $260,500,000; to South America, from $33,000,000 to $50,000,000, and to Asia from $17,330,000 to $128,500,000.

MARINES ARE READY.

May Be Called Upon to Quell Incipient Revolution at Panama.

Panama, June 26.—The administration of President Amador has been perpetuated as the rresult of the electicns here today, but the conditions are now such on the isthmus that were it not for the presence here of a large body of American marines, well armed and equipped, and several gatling guns mounted along the canal strip, a revolution would already be in progress. As matters stand there is a feeling of sullen discontent among the more progressive of the inhabitants of the Panama republic, which may yet break out in open revolution.

Threats of assassination are freely made and it is openly asserted by the Liberals that Dr. Amador will hardly live much longer.

Today's election, while only for members of the Municipal council, was admitted to be a test, and upon its outcome depended the result of the general elections to be held later.

It is rumored that a large number of Guatemalans are on the way here for the purpose of aiding in an attempt to overthrow the Amador administration. Color is lent to this report by the presence on the outskirts of the city of a detachment of 300 American marines with gatling guns. They were sent by Governor Magoon, who has so far declined to explain their precence.

IMPORTED YELLOW FEVER.

Single Case is Reported at Mississippi Quarantine.

New Orleans, June 26.—One case of yellow fever was reported today at the Mississippi river quarantine station, 95 miles below New Orleans. This is the first case of yellow fever reported in Louisiana this year by the state board of health. The patient is a Cuban sailor who arrived at quarantine June 18 on the steamer Holstein from Havana. The Holstein is still detained at quarantine, having been disinfected. No other cases of elevated temperature have yet appeared on the Holstein.

Dr. C. H. Iron, president of the state board of health, said to the inspecting party that he does not believe yellow fever is epidemic in New Orleans or in Louisiana. The existence of yellow fever at Rio Janeiro and also of two cases of bubonic plague at that port were reported to the state board by officers of the steamer Sallust, arriving here today. The Sallsust was disinfected at quarantine.

Rebels Gaining Ground.

Mexico City, June 26.—Several travelers from Salvador arrived here tonight. They report that the Guatemalan ports of Chammperico and San Jose are well fortified and provided with the best artillery. They state that the revolution has by no means ended, and that the revolutionary leaders are popular in Guatemala. The defeat suffered at Manguay by the revolutionists has not discouraged them. It has brought about reorganization of their forces and they have received additional artillery.

Track Cast Into Swamp.

Salt Lake, June 26.—A gang of 100 men in the employ of the Oregon Short Line picked 60 feet of Rio Grande Western track at 3:30 this morning and threw it into a swamp. Ignoring a deputy sheriff who attempted to serve a writ of injunction from the District court, the men put down Short Line steel and ran a train of flat cars on the new track. The contested right of way is in the northern part of the city and gives access to a factory.

Governor Harris Ill.

Chicago, June 26.—A special to the Record-Herald from Cleveland says: Governor Andrew L. Harris, of Ohio, is ill at his home in Eaton, Preble county. He is suffering from exhaustion and acute indigestion and it is doubtful if he will be able to return to Columbus to take up his duties.
