A DISTINGUISHED LOBBYIST

The spectacle of an ex-governor of Oregon appearing at the State capitol for the purpose of lobbying in the interest of a set of thieves and perjurers who attempted to steal the State's land is certainly not a pleasing one, and yet that is exactly what ex-Governor T. T. Geer has been doing. The certificates to the land were secured by perjury, and the State, being in possession of evidence to this effect, refuses to issue patents to the land. Now comes Mr. Geer and urges that the State should not only return the money deposited but should pay the land thieves six per cent interest on their intended investment. We hardly believe the Legislature will be guilty of passing so infamous a measure, and if it does we are confident that Governor Chamberlain will stand between the people and the grafters. They have no equitable ground for such a claim. Instead of being rewarded they should be placed behind the bars of the penitentiary, and in morals there does not seem to be any great difference between them and their lobbyist. During the last primary campaign the Mist very strongly opposed the nomination of Geer on the Republican ticket, and after the election we were told that had he been the nominee instead of James Withycombe he would have been elected. We did not believe it then and do not believe it now; but even were it true we would still be satisfied with our course. A good man was defeated by a stronger but not a better man. The Republican party was not weakened by the result. It will probably elect the next governor; but, whether it does or not, it will be in much better shape to go before the people than if it had elected a man who is not ashamed to use his great ability in an attempt to help the land thieves consumate a raid upon the public treasury. The success of Mr. Geer's scheme would mean due notice that the State of Oregon will compensate criminals for any loss they may incur in an attempt to steal the public lands. Last Sunday's Oregonian discusses the matter freely and completely, yet it presents a most scalding indictment of the distinguished lobbyist who has been honored with the highest office in the gift of the people of the State and is now rewarding them by standing in with the public plunderers. It was said at the time that the editor of the Mist owed his defeat for the nomination as representative to his opposition to Mr. Geer. Mr. Geer had many sincere friends in this county who were attracted by his ability as a campaigner and who felt under obligations to him for his assistance in previous campaigns. They did what they thought to be right and we have no fault to find with them, yet we believe it was better to go down to defeat with James Withycombe than it would have been to have succeeded with T. T. Geer.

The report that President Roosevelt appointed a negro to an important federal office in Ohio for the purpose of testing the sincerity of Senator Foraker's profession of regard for the African race is probably untrue. It would certainly be a very poor reason for making an appointment, and entirely beneath the dignity of the chief executive. If the negro is worthy and well qualified he will probably meet with no opposition in the Senate and his appointment should receive no unfavorable criticism. To believe that personal motives influenced the President is to assume that he is not as large a man as the people credit him with being. The fact is that he is only human is beginning to be appreciated by all except the idolators who decline to admit that he can by any possibility be wrong upon any subject. Having placed him upon an unearthly eminence they refuse to believe that he can utter any but words of wisdom or do any act that does not seem absolutely square. He has done enough, up to the present time, to entitle him to the everlasting gratitude of the American people, and not the least of his services is that he has given them food for thought and an understanding of their power. In fact on some questions where he was thought to be a radical he has come to be a conservative and is somewhat behind instead of ahead of public sentiment. He belongs to the class of "king" presidents and is apt to believe that his will should govern. He is intolerant of opposition and not over nice in his methods. He is very much like Grover Cleveland in his mental makeup, and it is probable that before the close of his term he will have made many mistakes and accumulated enough enemies to defeat his re-election, should he be willing to accept a renomination. But the people have every confidence in his honesty and integrity, and his errors will be forgotten and forgiven and he will be remembered as a public benefactor in that he gave life and force to the paltitude that all men are created equal, and insisted that neither wealth, standing nor political influence should shield the evil-doers and that corporations as well as individuals are creatures of and subject to the law.
