HOW WILL YOU VOTE?

How do you intend to vote in November? Two great national parties will appeal for your support and to make your vote effective you must give your assistance to one or the other. What considerations will influence you? Now is the time to think of these matters and make your decision wisely. If you are a first voter and have no strong party ties you are in a position to cast a vote absolutely without prejudice, basing your action upon what you believe to be for the best good of your country and yourself. You will hear the thunder of the campaign, see the flash and glare of the procession and listen to the plausible oratory of the spellbinder as he tells you of the great results that will be achieved for the common people by the election of his candidate. But the torchlight is uncertain and flickering and neither noise nor oratory should be permitted to obscure the only light by which men correctly read the past and prophesy the future—the light of experience.

History repeats itself. That which a party has been in the past, within certain limitations, it will be in the future. Administrative faults may be cured, a strong man may stamp out corruption; but time has no record of the evolution of a party so great and complete as to separate it from its basic principles.

* Politics, "the science of government," is a matter in which all are vitally interested. It touches the pocket book and affects the personal welfare of every citizen. The questions of to-day are those of economics. It is the pocket nerve to which the appeal is to be made, though considerations of personal welfare by no means exclude giving full scope to the altruistic sentiments of right and justice upon which all good government is based.

They who tell you there is no great difference between the two parties either deceive themselves or seek to deceive others. The issues are the same to-day that they have been for the past twenty years. The Republican party stands for the protective theory and the Democracy for what is known as a tariff for revenue only, and, as the Republican party has pledged itself to call a special session immediately after the next inauguration to revise the tariff, the great and overshadowing issue in this campaign and the great central question that should decide your vote is whether you wish the Republican or the Democratic party to have charge of this revision.

There are some beautiful theories upon the subject of free trade—and a tariff for revenue means as near an approach to free trade as possible; but the actual application of the free trade theory, so far as it has ever been embodied in any Democratic measure, has always proved disastrous to the best interests of the country. The only time that great and prolonged disaster fell upon the industries of the United States since the days of the civil war was when the Democratic Congress, under President Cleveland, enacted the famous Wilson tariff measure. Worse disaster would have befallen us had Mr. Cleveland been in harmony with his party on financial measures. He stood as a rock between the Nation and the money fallacies of Mr. Bryan, and for this the country owes him a tribute of gratitude. To say that the Democratic party has profited by experience and may now be trusted to avoid former errors is a mere surmise without a basis of fact. Whatever there is of good in the principles advocated by Mr. Bryan is more likely to be enacted into law by a Republican President, backed by a Republican Congress, than by the opponents of the party that placed Roosevelt in the presidential chair, gave its support to his measures and has nominated for the Presidency his chosen successor. No party is infallible, but the people do not trust with a confidence that has been shown to the public will and has met with vigorous state-manship every vital issue as it has been presented. The great prosperity of the country afforded the opportunity for selfish men to effect combinations of capital known as trusts, just as the civil war gave opportunity for like combinations of those who fattened at the expense of patriotism. As these combinations became more aggressive they attracted public attention and the demand for their regulation was heard by the party that "does things." A mild and non-aggressive president was succeeded by one who is the type of force and energy and the work of regulation was vigorously undertaken. That there will be no backward step the people may be assured, but neither will the deemed necessary to destroy American industries in order to regulate and control the trusts. Charles Lamb, the great English essayist, tells of the manner in which the Chinese discovered roast pork. A Chinese hovel burned, and in it was the pig, which was cooked. The son of the sun and moon, poking around in the debris, stuck his finger into the hot carcass of the porker, and immediately withdrew it with a howl and popped it into his mouth. The sensation was delicious to his palate, and when his father heard of it he built another hut and burned it over another pig. The news spread, and so did the conf-grations, until China resembled a timber country during the time of burning slashings. The craze for roast pig grew, and it threatened the annihilation of the timber, until one day some wise Confucian figured it out that it was not necessary to burn a house in order to roast a pig.

THE RECALL

Following is the law known as the Recall, which was adopted as an amendment to the constitution at the recent election.

"Every public officer in Oregon is subject, as herein provided, to recall by the legal voters of the State or the electoral district from which he is elected. There may be required twenty-five per cent, but not more, of the number of electors who voted in his district at the preceding election for justice of the Supreme Court to file their petition demanding his recall by the people. They shall set forth in said petition the reasons for said demand. If he shall offer his resignation, it shall be accepted and take effect on the day it is offered, and the vacancy shall be filled as may be provided by law. If he shall not resign within five days after the petition is filed, a special election shall be ordered to be held within twenty days in his said electoral district to determine whether the people will recall said officer. On the sample ballot at said election shall be printed in not more than two hundred words, the reasons for demanding the recall of said officer as set forth in the recall petition, and in not more than two hundred words, the officer's justification of his course in office. He shall continue to perform the duties of his office until the result of said special election shall be officially declared." Other candidates for the office may be nominated to be voted for at said special election. The candidate who shall receive the highest number of votes shall be deemed elected for the remainder of the term, whether it be the person against whom the recall petition was filed or another. The recall petition shall be filed with the officer with whom a petition for nomination to such office should be filed, and the same officer shall order the special election when it is required. No such petition shall be circulated against any officer until he has actually held his office six months, save and except that it may be filed against a senator or representative in the legislative assembly at any time after five days from the beginning of the first session after his election. After one such petition and special election, no further recall petition shall be filed against the same officer during the term for which he was elected unless such further petitioners shall further pay into the public treasury which has paid such special election expenses, the whole amount of its expenses for the preceding special election. Such additional legislation as may aid the operation of this section shall be provided by the Legislative Assembly, including provision for payment by the public treasury of the reasonable special election campaign expenses of such officer. But the words "the Legislative Assembly shall provide" or any similar or equivalent words in this Constitution or any amendment thereto, shall not be construed to grant to the Legislative Assembly any exclusive power of law-making nor in any way to limit the initiative and referendum powers reserved by the people."

THE VICE PRESIDENT

Sketch of the Republican Nominee

James Schoolcraft Sherman was born October 24, 1805, in Utica, N. Y., where he still resides. He has been a member of the National House of representatives since 1886, with the exception of one term, 1890-1892. He was chairman of the republican National Congressional committee in the campaign of 1900. He is a lawyer, banker and manufacturer and is the business as the political leader of Utica, being president of the Utica Trust & Deposit Company.

Mr Sherman was educated in the Utica Academy and Hamilton College, being graduated from the latter institution in 1828. He was admitted to the bar in 1830 and at once took an active interest in political affairs. In 1884 he was chosen Mayor of Utica and two years later was elected to Congress.

For years he has been regarded as the best parliamentarian in the lower house, and has been frequently mentioned as a candidate for the Speakership. He was a formidable opponent of David B Henderson when the latter was first elected Speaker. He has acted as chairman of the committee of the whole through many a turbulent battle in the House.

He has been chairman of two New York State conventions. In the work of the House, he has distinguished himself as chairman of the committee on Indian affairs, and as one of the most influential members of the interstate and foreign commerce committee.

A Good-Wish Rose

"A clever idea was carried out at a recent 'show' for a bride-to-be," says July WOMAN'S HOME COMPANION. "In the invitation each guest was requested to send in, prior to the party, a wish for the bride. The hostess made a beautiful large white paper rose, and before putting it together she wrote on each petal a wish and the name of the wisher. As is usual in most cases, some of the guests forgot to send in a wish, but brought one with them, and others wrote them after they arrived. For this purpose a large paper rose had been made, into which the wishes were slipped, and the bud twisted up again. The guest of honor was charmed with the rose and rosebud, and said that she should always keep it as a pleasant reminder of her friends, whom she was soon to leave for a new home in a distant city."

Badly Sprained Ankle Cured
Three years ago our daughter sprained her ankle and had been suffering severely for two days and nights when she slept a minute. Mr. Stallings, of Tenn., told us of Chamberlain's Pain-Expeller Balm. We went to the store that day and got a bottle of it and bathed the ankle two or three times and she was able to sleep and had a good night's rest. Next morning she was much better and in a short time could walk around. She had no more trouble with her ankle. M. Baumert, Hampton, Tenn. 25 cent sizes for sale by A. Deering, druggist.
