A REVIEW

After the assembly adjourned in Portland the Mist expressed the opinion that it was a farce. The result justifies us and places the blame for the success of the Bourne-Chamberlain combination upon the men who were responsible for the calling of the Assembly. They plaved into the hands of Jonathan Bourne and George Chamberlain. Had there been no assembly the Republiican nominee would have been elected, though we have no doubt he would have been just as bitterly opposed by Jonathan Bourne as was Mr. Bowerman. The combination between Democrats and Republicans is nothing new, and Mr. Bourne is merely patterning after Senator Mitchel in his methods. He is a shrewd politican and understands how to take advantage of popular measures. Believing that no assembly candidate could be elected' his associates, (doubtless under his instructions) shaped matters so as to insure the nomination of the assembly candidate. There were three anti-assembly candidates for the nomination." Mr. Hofer. Mr. Abrahams and Mr. Dimick. Mr. Dimick was the first to announce his candidacy, and had there been no interference on the part of the Jonathan Bourne clique, Dimick would now be Govenor-elect. But Senator Bourne did not want to see Dimick elected. He knew he could not use Grant Dimick in his senatorial campaign two years from now. It would be much better for him to have the Democrats win. Therefore a meeting waa held in the private office of Postmaster Merrick in the city of Portland. The editor of the Mist was in Portland the day the meeting was held and was invited by Col. Hofer to attend, it being represented to him that the meeting was in the interest of the direct primary candidates. There were present at that meeting Postmaster Merrick, W. S. U'Ren, Frank Sinnott, Messrs. Orton, Hofer, and Flagg. It soon developed that all present, with the exception of the Mist editor and Mr. Abbott, were there for the purpose of advoncing the candidacy of Col. Hofer, thereby insuring the nomination of Jay Bowerman, the assembly candidate. Hofer was advised by Postmaster Merrick to come to Portland and open headquarters, and when he claimed he could not afford the expense the Postmaster asured him the money would be provided. It was a Bourne conspiracy against the Direct Law Primary, and it has so far succeeded. As to whether it will result in Senator Bourne's re-election remains to be seen. If the Republican faction that called the assembly abandons its opposition to the will of the people and supports for Senator some well-known anti-assembly, Statement No. 1 Republican, the Great Absentee will be defeated. He never had any great popularity, but his enemies were his best friends, and they can still aid him by their opposition to the will of the people.

Two great conventions of national interest are already scheduled for Portland next year. They are the gathering of the woolgrowers of the country next January and the session of the Christian church here next July.

Exports from Portland during October totaled 11,511,476 feet of lumber and 1,173,240 bushels of wheat.

TO DAIRYMEN

The Oregon State Dairy Convention will be held at Eugene December 8th and 9th, and Carle Abrams, the Secretary, earnestly urges the attendance of all Columbia County Dairymen.

A feature of the Convention which will be different from anything in the history of previous sessions, and of unusal interest at this time, will be a demonstration of the effects of tuberculosis in dairy cows. Several animals will be slaughtered under the direction of Dr. E. E. Lytle, State Veterinarian. This will be an object lession to dairymen which should be a drawing card to every dairyman in Oregon. Creamerymen and buttermakers of Oregon will meet in Eugene Dec. 7th, to complete an organization and discuss matters of importance to dairying. Dairymen are invited to attend this meeting which will make really three days convention.

AN INTELLIGENT PEOPLE

The people of Oregon were called upon at the recent election to pass upon thirty-two measures, and they rejected all but seven. This should demonstrate to the fearful ones that there is no great danger to the conntry as a result of direct legislation. When they were in doubt as to the wisdom of any measure they voted "no," and by so doing killed all of the county division schemes and by their affirmative votes provided a method for the people directly interested to pass upon such purely local measures.

Prohibition was defeated because the people at the present time prefer local option to State-wide prohibition, and because there were two measures on the ballot that divided the vote---the State-wide measure and the constitutional amendment --- providing for prohibition. Very few people have any faith that the Greater Oregon Home Rule Association will affect any material reforms in the saloon business, and unless some change for the better is made the people will put the saloons out of business two years from now. The campaign on the part of the liquor men was vigorously and skillfully conducted, with an abundance of funds to hire speakers and local workers everywhere who had a financial interest in the outcome. It takes a very strong preponderance of public sentiment to overcome such a combination.

Generally speaking, the people voted intelligently, and demonstrated that they had given considerable attention to the measures submitted to them. That they will make mistakes is very probable; but they can hardly do worse than have the Legislatures, and they will never surrender the power they have assumed. Ridicule of the people's laws should be abandoned and effort should be directed along educational lines, to counteract the efforts of demagogues and self-seekers who are endeavoring to use the people's laws for their own selfish purposes.

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP

In its news of advance along the lines of fondamental democracy, the Twentieth Century (Boston) for November gives testimoney on public ownership in Seattle from the pen of L. B. Youngs, superintendent of the Seattle water works. According to this instructive report the Seattle water works was acquired by the city in 1890 through purchase of a plant previously conducted by private parties, the purchase price being $352,289. Since then additions and imbrovements have been installed, until at the end of 1909 thi total investment amounted to $8,511,000. With the growth of the city the income increased until it reached $746,595 for 1909. The operation and fixed charge account for the same year amounted to $454,259, and the balance of the revenue was applied to the redemption of outstanding warrants and new construction. The bonded debt of the department is now $4,079,000, upon which there is an annual interest of $204,000. There are in use 492.3 miles of watermain, 3,710 water gates, 3,860 fire hydrants, 31,889 water taps and three standpipes and four reservoirs with a total storage capacity of 53,500,000 gallons. These figures are all for December, 1909, since which time considerable additions have been made to the plant, the meters now aggregating over 20,000. Tae large reservoirs, now building, will increase the storage capacity to 273,000,000 gallons. Every proposition to improve and extend the plant has carried at elections by large majorities. Any propositiou to revert to private management would not be listened to by the people. Mr. Youngs makes a report also on the lighting plant, the earnings of which have grown in less than six years to $468,000, with expenses and interest amounting to only $224,600. At the time the plant was installed the rates dropped 20 to 50 per cent from those previously charged.

EASTERN MAIL ORDER "MELON."

The directors of a big Chicago mail-order house have decided to divide a $10,000,000 melon among the stockholders. Presumably to cover up the enormous profits as well as they can they have also recommended a stock dividend of 33⅓ per cent on the common stock amounting to $30,000,000. Such great dividends, even when distributed by big railroad systems embracing thousands of miles of tracks and employing thousands of men and indirectly affecting the welfare of hundreds of thousands, even millions of people, never fail to bring forth unfavorable comment from the very class on which the Eastern mail order business levies its greatest toll.

In producing the ten million dollar "melon" which the mail order millionaires are about to cut, Oregon, Washton and Idaho contributed heavily, along with every other State in the Union, and the contributors incidentally received no benefits, financial or otherwise from the transaction. There are so many reasons why a customer living thousands of miles away from Eastern mail-order houses should not send his money to them that it is an economic mystery how they annually wheedle so many millions out of victims scattered from one end of the country to the other.

To begin with, quality and quantity considered, every order sent out of the Pacific Northwest to the Eastern mail-order houses could be duplicated here at a saving of from ten to twenty-five per cent to the buyer.

In specific cases, which have been reported in the Palouse and in the Big Bend country, the loss to the mail-order patron has run as high as $40 on a $100 order. In such circumstances it is easy to understand how $10,000,000 dividends can be rolled up in short order. Aside from this actual loss in fist cost to the mail-order patron, there is a heavy indirect loss. The Eastern mail-order house pays no taxes in the Pacific Northwest, it employs no labor and loads down the mail carriers on the rural routes with tons of alluring, but misleading, literature. The local merchant is a permanent business fixture on whom even mail order patrons are dependent at times. The extent of his stock and its importance depends on the support that he receives.

It is not at all complimentary to the intelligence of a large number of people that by clever advertising Eastern mail-order houses can sell poor goods in large quantities at higher prices than Pacific Coast merchants can secure in small quantities. The Pacific Northwest, which made liberal contributions to that $10,000,000 "melon," will not share in the benefits, but numerous local merchants will probably enjoy the blessed privilege of extending credit to many of the contributors who paid cash for their shore of the $10,000,000.—Oregonian.

THE PACIFIC HIGHWAY

For the immediate improvement of road conditions on the Pacific Coast, the Pacific Highway Association is sending out a reprint of instructions for construction and operation of the "Split Log Drag", commonly known as the "King Drag", invented by D. Ward King. The information contained in the matter sent out by the Pacific Highway Association is reprinted from a pamphlet written by Mr. King, that is being distributed by the Pennsylvania Highway System throughout the east.

The Highway Association has sent them to every county Commissioner in the Counties of the states of California, Oregon and Washington, through which the Pacific highway will pass, for the purpose of stimulating the use of this inexpensive method of road improvement, not only on the roads that will ultimately become the Pacific Highway, but for all public thoroughfares. The work of the Pacific Highway Association continues to receive encouragement from all parts. The Automobile Club of Seattle at its annual meeting last week voted to formally affiliate with the Association and assist it financially.

A monster good roads rally was held under the joint auspices of the Tacoma Chamber of commerce and the Tacoma Commercial Club, at the Commercial Clubs' Headquarters in Tacoma, Thursday Evening, November 10. This meeting was attended by local enthusiast as well as representatives of all Seattle's Commercial Organizations and Good Roads Boosters from Victoria and Vancouvea, B. C.

It has been suggested that soon as Washington's part of the Pacific Highway is located by the State Highway Commissioner, that the County Officials of the counties through which the road will pass, be asked to mark this road with uniform sign boards and designate it as the Pacific Highway. This will tend to not only advertise the internationol road, but stimulate interest in it.

OUR OREGON

She Flies With Her Own Wings and Has the Record Beaten

The fruit crop of the Hood River district for 1910 is valued at approximatly $1,000,000.

One monster log, the biggest ever sawd in the Coquille Valley, Coos County, was 9 feet in diameter and made 11,000 feet of lumber.

Eight acres near Eugene produced 103 bales of hops, which is over 2,500 pounds an acre.

The Mount Hood Railway & Power Company has started a saw mill near Bull Run with a capacity of 30,000 feet daily. It will saw ties almost exclusively.

Much interest is manifested in walnut culture in Oregon, and the fact that trees of bearing age are loaded with nuts of fine quality gives great encouragement to growers.

Crook County contains one of the largest bodies of irrigible land in the West, having 350,000 acres.

Oregon's apple crop is gaining on the original estimates and the State of Horticulture places the 1910 yield at 1,250,000 boxes.

Postal receipts for Portland for Oct. show an increase of 22.65 per cent over the corresponding month of last year. Moreover the latest figures are the biggest in the history of the city.
