SPECIAL TO THE APPEAL TRIBUNE

If you're a property owner in the Mt. Angel Fire District, your insurance premiums may decrease by year's end. Thanks to a nine-month effort by the district and its partners, Mt. Angel's fire protection rating just got better – a whole lot better. On July 25, the city's public protection classification (PPC) went from a "5" to a "3," and in the surrounding areas, it went from an "8" to a "4." The new classifications go into effect Nov. 1.

"I'm conservatively estimating the combined insurance premium savings for policy holders within our small district will be in excess of $500,000 annually," said Craig Emch, co-owner of Butsch Insurance and a former Mt. Angel firefighter. "That is a tremendous economic boon to the local community, and all involved should be proud of this accomplishment." Lower is better on the 1-10 scale used by Insurance Services Office, Inc., a company that inspects fire department throughout the nation and sells the data to insurance companies. The rating system is designed to reflect how quickly and efficiently a firefighting agency can respond to fires or other emergencies.

Mt. Angel improves fire risk rating

It's been 16 years since Mt. Angel was last inspected by the ISO, so it had many upgrades to demonstrate.

Two gleaming 2014 Piece Saber pumpers respond to fires from the 35square-mile district's downtown station. They were purchased with funds from a $950,000 bond sale approved by voters in 2012. At 35 cents per $1,000 of assessed value, the owner of a $200,000 home is paying roughly $70 per years for the next seven years.

Now some property owners may see their bond payments partially or fully offset by savings on their insurance policies. With the new rating,

Emch found residents in town could save an average of 5 percent while rural residents could save more like 15 percent. 'Actual results are going to vary greatly by individual policy holder and individual insurance company," he cautioned. A few companies State Farm and Sublimity ductions range widely,

Company, for example use their own metrics rather than ISO ratings. So possible premium refrom 0 to 14 percent in the city, and from 0 to 24 percent in the country, he Chief Jim Trierweiler was "pleasantly sur-prised" by Mt. Angel's new protection class, although he did expect improvement of some kind.

But it's the community, volunteers and other partners that helped he fire district make the grade, he said.

Angel Mt. Public Works maintains city's hydrants, while "auto aid" agreements set through METCOM 911 with Silverton, Marion County, Woodburn and Monitor fire agencies are critical, especially when it comes to water supply in rural areas.

Also helping halve Mt. Angel's fire risk rating is a new formal agreement with local farmers and other property owners identifying some irrigation wells as rural hydrants.

This kind of pre-planning may impress investigators, but it also simply makes for safer homes and businesses, Trierweiler said. And new technology - including an app called Active 911 - puts building pre-plans and hydrant locations at the fingertips of all volunteers with cell phones.

"Because ISO changed the rating system, and we've done some housecleaning and organizing, I had a feeling we'd show improvement," he said.

Currently, only one fire department in Oregon has earned a PPC rating of Class 1, while 27 are Class 2, 73 are Class 3, 118 are Class 4, 140 are Class 5 and 66 are Class 6.

The lowest rating, 10, is reserved for those who meet the minimum requirements; it's also automatically assigned to properties farther than 5 miles from a fire station.

Mt. Angel's neighbor, Silverton Fire, is rated "4," however it's partway through an ISO evaluation and may see changes soon. Marion County Fire District No. 1, now rated "4" inside Salem's urban growth boundary and "8" outside it, has just begun the process.

For those in the Silverton Fire District, there's already some good news. Over the last fives years. the ISO hasn't recognized the Crooked Finger Station in Scotts Mills due to a misunderstanding, said Chief Bill Miles. On April 1, that mistake was corrected, so "(property owners) need to go back and revisit their insurance. They were a 10, and they're a 4 now," he said.
