Drowning victim at Three Pools ID'd

LAUREN E HERNANDEZ
STATESMAN JOURNAL

MARION COUNTY SHERIFF'S OFFICE
The Three Pools drowning victim has been identified as Kung Shing Yau, 25.

The 25-year-old man who died after jumping into the Three Pools recreation area has been identified as a student from Linn Benton Community College, according to officials.

Kung Shing Yau, of Hong Kong, China, was last seen jumping from a cliff and into the upper pool of the Three Pools of the Little North Santiam River May 22.

Yau was swimming with friends when he did not resurface around 4 p.m.

Yau, a student at LBCC in Albany, had been studying abroad in the United States for the last seven years, according to the Marion County Sheriff's Office.

Kayakers found Yau's body May 24 and informed Marion County Sheriff's Office. Salem Fire Department and Jefferson Fire Department recovered the man's body May 25.

Members of the Clackamas County Sheriff's Office dove into the upper pools of the recreation area to search for the man May 23, but suspended the search due to high water and dangerous conditions.

The Marion County Sheriff's Office suggests swimmers exercise caution by following some simple steps:

- Never swim alone
- Avoid alcohol and marijuana around water
- Wear a lifejacket
- Know how to perform CPR
- Know how and where you can call 911

The sheriff's office reminds visitors there is very little to no cell phone reception in the North Fork area of the Santiam River. There are two 911 call boxes located on the outside wall of the Elk Horn Fire Station and at the entrance to Salmon Falls Park.

Hit-and-run suspect found guilty except for insanity

WHITNEY WOODWORTH
STATESMAN JOURNAL

A Salem man who purposely struck and killed a pedestrian was found guilty except for insanity and committed to the Oregon State Hospital.

Dillon Van Diviner was found guilty except for insanity for killing Bradley Goad.

He was sentenced to as much as a lifetime of jurisdiction under the Psychiatric Security Review Board.

According to a mental health evaluation, Van Diviner, 22, has schizophrenia.

The morning of Dec. 2, Van Diviner was parked along Grant Road near Silverton High School. He told police he had just smoked marijuana when he saw Goad crossing the street.

Goad, a 45-year-old West Salem construction worker, was on his way to work.

Van Diviner told police he felt an "intense overwhelming feeling" that Goad posed a danger to others. He said he needed to get rid of that danger.

He sped toward Goad and struck him with his car. Goad died at the scene.

Following the crash, Van Diviner drove away, abandoned his running vehicle at the dead end section of Grant Street and ran into a nearby farm field.

Officers found him running down a nearby street. He was arrested and charged with murder, hit-and-run and DUI.

During his interview with police, Van Diviner admitted his impairment at the time of the crash was "seven" on a scale of zero to 10. His field sobriety test indicated he was under the influence of a controlled substance, police said.

Goad's family said he was known in the community as a warm-hearted musician, loving father, and adoring grandfather.

worked as a certified sound and light technician and traveled the country. Between gigs, he worked for a construction company.

In the wake of his death, his family worked to honor Goad's passion for music and helping others.

They held a memorial concert, where his musician friends played along to a recording of him playing the bass, and helped raise money for his children and 1-year-old grandson.

Two months after the attack, Van Diviner's attorney David Kuhns filed a notice of intent to rely on insanity as a defense.

He was found guilty except for insanity Wednesday. According to court records, Van Diviner poses a substantial danger to others and requires commitment to a state mental hospital.

Opening delayed for swimming hole on Little North Santiam

ZACH URNESS
STATESMAN JOURNAL

A popular park and swimming hole on the Little North Santiam River won't open until June 16 following a delay in finishing a construction project.

North Fork Park, northeast of Mehama, was previously scheduled to open June 1 after a construction project to expand and pave the parking lot.

Due to weather and construction delays, the season opening has been delayed, Marion County officials said in a press release.

Other parks in the North Fork corridor, including Bear Creek Campground and Park,
