

IN BRIEF

Strawberry Festival on tap Father's Day

One more Father's Day idea: crafts, music, food, a beer garden and strawberry shortcake with ice cream at Silverton's annual Strawberry Festival on Saturday, June 16.

The event is from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Coolidge McClaine Park. A bowl of strawberry shortcake costs $6, with guests 80-and-over and 2-and-under eating free. Bowls of berries will be located on the tables as free "seconds."

Silverton Rotary Club and Homer Davenport Community Festival are event organizers. All proceeds go back into the community.

Music Mondays season opens June 17

Music Monday's Summer Creekside Concert Series, funded by Silverton Friends of Music, starts June 17 with music from The Junebugs.

The concert series occurs Monday evening 6:30 – 7:30 p.m. through August 26 and features a different band or group each week. Concerts are at Old Mill Park next to Silver Creek behind the library parking lot. Entrance is free.

June 19 dinner benefits ASAP

Community members can support Silverton's community-based after-school program by attending a fundraiser on Wednesday, June 19.

Gallon House Farms is hosting the fundraiser from 6:30 – 9:30 p.m., and the evening will feature dinner, music and raffles. Jenna Ellefson, La Paz and Syco Billy's are the evening's musical entertainment.

Gallon House Farms is located at 7263 Gallon House Rd. All proceeds support ASAP (After School Activities Program), which offers free after-school programming for local middle school students three days a week.

derness — and indeed, Forest Service officials said last week the route was mostly snow-free.

The trail climbs at a steady but not steep clip, past many small waterfalls to the lake, where there are a number of places to explore. For a postcard-worthy view of Mount Jefferson, head to the lake's southeastern side. If you're camping here, there are 14 designated campsites.

The lake and surrounding forest look pretty nice now, but that apparently wasn't always the case. Before the permit system was installed in 1995, the area was becoming badly damaged by overuse, said Chris Lillegard of Dallas, who said he's been hiking here since 1973.

"Before the permit system, boy, people really were treating this area pretty badly," he said.

Pamelia Lake hike

In a nutshell: An easy and pretty hike to a mountain lake in the Mount Jefferson Wilderness. Buying a permit in advance is required.

Season: May to November

Difficulty: Moderate-Challenging

Round-Trip: 4.4 miles

High point/Elevation gain: 800 feet

Grizzly Peak climb: There's a great hike from Pamelia Lake up Grizzly Peak. The climb requires a difficult 2,000-foot and 2.8 mile climb from Pamelia Lake. You'll likely hit deep snow until July, but the views of Mount Jefferson are stunning.

"They were cutting down trees, cutting space for new campsites, leaving cans in the fire pits. And there just wasn't enough room for everybody because it's such an easy hike."

"Maybe when you have to get a permit, people realize, 'Hey, we should take care of this place,'" Margie Lillegard said. "It has certainly been better."

The downside, of course, is that not everybody knows about the permit system. People often show up at trailheads unaware of the fact that they need a permit. It's a hassle. And if you're caught hiking without one, you can be fined $200.

But no matter what you think of the new permit system, it's likely coming to a forest near you — and soon. So, fire up the computer and fill up your backpack and head to Pamelia to see what the brave new world of hiking is all about.
