Silverton graduations

Statesman Journal staff

After adjusting to remote learning, hybrid learning and masking during the COVID-19 pandemic, the Class of 2022 settled back into a more typical routine of classes and activities for its final year of high school. And with challenges overcome, the students are now graduates. To recognize their accomplishments, the Silverton Appeal-Tribune is publishing the lists of Silverton-area high school candidates scheduled to graduate. The lists were provided by the schools.

Credit recovery is helping Oregon students

Brye Murphy
Guest columnist

While we celebrate the Class of 2022 this month, many students didn't receive their high school diplomas because they're missing high school credits.

Numerous freshmen, sophomores and juniors have also fallen behind and need to get back on track to graduate on time.

Credit recovery gives students a second chance.

High school can be overwhelming for teens, but the pandemic added an unprecedented level of challenges for students. Oregon's graduation rate and the number of freshmen on track to graduate dropped.

The state no longer requires students to demonstrate certain essential skills to graduate, but they're still required to earn 24 credits in subjects like math, language arts and science.

When a student doesn't comprehend a concept the first time, often the rest of the class moves on, and that student falls even more behind. Thankfully nearly ninety percent of school districts offer credit recovery programs.

What is credit recovery?

Credit recovery is a term for a variety of educational strategies allowing students to "recover" credits in a particular course where they need additional help.

Using credit recovery, students can redo coursework earning credit based on competency of the content standards for that particular class.

What kinds of students take credit recovery classes?

There are many reasons students seek a makeup class, from those who struggle academically to ones very active in sports. Recently, physical and mental health issues have made school harder for some children, making credit recovery programs a good option for them.

Credit recovery might suit middle school students seeking extra support as they transition to high school. Children
