Call Meeting

There will be a call meeting of the La Grande Prohibition Alliance No. 11 at the home of W. A. Worstel, Tuesday evening Feb. 23. All members and friends of prohibition are requested to be present. 90-6-

In its most widely practiced form the basis of the Japanese game of ken is that the fully outstretched hand signifies stone, and two fingers alone extended, the rest being closed, scissors. Each of the players, counting one, two, three, throws out his hand at the moment of pronouncing three, and the one whose manual symbol is superior to that of the other, according to the theory of the game, wins the trial.

Superiority is determined on the hypothesis that whereas scissors cannot cut a stone they can cut paper, and whereas paper is cut by scissors it can wrap up a stone. Consequently scissors is inferior to stone, but conquers stone; stone is inferior to paper, but conquers paper; and paper is inferior to scissors, but conquers scissors. There are innumerable varieties of the game, for it is not a mere method of determining a dispute or priority, and they are constantly added to by ingenious young ladies, the dancing girl class especially, who play it with exquisite grace and judicious enhancement of beautiful hands and arms.—Japan Mail.

TOLD OF HANNA TOLD BY A FRIEND

Which will Give Some Conception of the True Character of the Dead Statesman, Would not Enter Combine.

Some conception of the true character of Senator Hanna may be obtained from the following narration by a personal friend who had done business with the Senator for many years: Some time ago a movement was on foot to consolidate all the furnaces in the Middle West, and this gentleman was appointed to wait on Senator Hanna and explain the matter to him and obtain his consent to become a party to the transaction. He visited the Senator and told him that Mr. Hanna thought the plan a feasible one, and that the accomplishment of the purpose would result in the making of much money, but he declined to go in to it. His friend was surprised, and the Senator explained. He said: "My friend, look about you. Do you see all these old, gray-headed men at the desks?" "There were quite a number of old men telling away," "Yes," said the friend, "I see them." "Well," replied the Senator, "so long as I and my family control these furnaces the men will have employment. Many of them have been with me for more than twenty-five years. They have helped make me, have helped to give me all I have. If I go into this deal the central passes from me, and I could have no assurance that these old men would be permitted to keep their positions. And I want to tell you that I would rather find a paper than to see such a thing come to pass."

Mr. Hanna did not go into the deal. He was not in any trust combination, notwithstanding what the opposition party press may say about the matter, and the old men are toiling at their desks secure in the protection which shadows them from a great and tender and grateful heart. Such is a glimpse into the secret soul of the man who won the affection and the confidence of the American people.

Such was the man who while he lay in the robes of death, the Oregonian slandered.

Their Jewels Not Paid For. A London jeweler has made the suggestion that he and other dealers in gems should make a blacklist of crafty women who do not pay their bills and send it to the lord chamberlain, requesting him to exclude these women from court assemblies until they have settled their accounts.
