

Half a Carload of New Wall Paper.

Sporting Editor

The religious editor of the chieftain [T] Express took a vacation and as he had no one to leave in his place he asked the sporting editor—the one who reported the ball games a few weeks ago—to attend church and report the sermon. Here is what he wrote, unblemished by the editorial blue pencil: "The weather was perfect and the grand stand-bleachers were packed. Be Rev Dr — was in the box for the christians, and he certainly had the book When he tackled the New Jerusalem he used the six ball artistically, but when he warmed up on haves he had speed to burn and whipped them over like a shot. He had swell control and never lost sight of the plate for a minute" especially after it had been passed around. The choir did a good deal of rooting from the players' bench, and occasionally a voice from the bleachers yelled "Amen!" Although it was an extra inning game he never let up for a minute and had the visitors properly looked up throughout, putting some of them to sleep.
