LIVELY RACE FOR A TRAIN

A Pendleton Young Lady Does not Propose to get Left—Switch Engine Comes to the Rescue.

Edith McBride of Athens caught the train Sunday. There were several other persons who caught the same train and their success is not especially noteworthy, but Miss McBride caught the departing train as probably no other girl in Umatilla county and how she caught it is a story.

Miss McBride with her sister Boss is arrived at the depot just in time to see the much desired train puffing down the track. Probably few girls would have had faith enough in their racing ability or hope enough in human events to start after a passenger train with the ambition of running it down, but Miss McBride wanted that train, she wanted it badly, and stopping only long enough to firmly clutch her handbag and wave a farewell to her sister she started up the track after the speeding train at a pace that was by no means to be laughed at. The train went about ten yards to her one, but that did not worry the belated girl, who bent every energy to break all records for amateur footracing in Pendleton.

It was when the racer's breath was about exhausted and failure confronted her that success came and perched on her banners. The success was in the shape of the yard engine that came puffing out on the main track. The engineer saw the girl's plight and stopped his engine, plucked her up in a second and throwing open the throttle started the small engine down the track at a pace that made the rails scream. The passenger train was almost at the junction and a couple of seconds would tell the story. Down the level stretch whizzed the yard engine, steam hissing out at the exhaust with a determined six, bill ringing to clear the track, a grimy engineer leaning out of his cab and waving at his brother engineer on the passenger, and a tired girl hanging on for dear life and praying that the passenger train would not depart before she caught it.

The conductor's arm was about to give the go ahead signal when he heard the chug-chug of the yard engine and looked around. He took in the situation at a glance and held the train for a moment until the transfer could be made and a minute later the passenger train chugged away through the hills with a happy passenger aboard and the switch engine came rolling back to the yards screaming its delight at every steam joint. About 500 people witnessed the race and expressed their approval of the girl's pluck and the engineer's courtesy by loud applause.

DROWNS IN A TEN GALLON JAR

Mascomb III Nov. 9—While within 100 feet of her father, the three year old daughter of Durham L each of this city was drowned in a ten gallon jar. The child was with its father while he was feeding the pigs. Returning he was horrified to see the little one's feet sticking from the jar.

She was dead when he pulled her out. It is supposed she reached into the jar to play in the water and lost her balance. There was only about seven inches of water in the jar.
