LATEST RETURNS FROM ELECTION

Missouri Has Raised its Plurality For Roosevelt Second Count May be Necessary in Maryland.

(Observer Special)
The returns showed that an official count might be necessary in Maryland, that Colorado would give a majority of about 5,000 for the democratic governor, but would elect republican electors, and that Missouri had raised its republican majority of the national ticket to over 15,000 electing Folk, democrat, as governor

Judge Parker, in a private conversation admits that he will hereafter eschew politics and will reenter the legal profession after taking a vacation which is demanded by the condition of his wife's health. The pluralities in the various states, the completion of the next national house and the electoral vote for the presidential candidates are appended this evening, the figures being in all cases those of the latest dispatches and materially different from all previous estimates.
