Trouble On The Train

Yesterday evening as passenger train No. 5 pulled into Baker City it was boarded, amongst numerous other passengers, by a man bound for North Powder. From appearances this party had been "looking upon the wine when it was several different colors of the rainbow" and the result of his raving was that he "had on his fighting clothes" and was looking for trouble. The first thing to attract his attention was an unpretentious chin-man, and when he was asked by the news "butch" to permit the "beath on chin" to rest in peace, his anger arose, and he proceeded to explain to the "butch" in a manner more forcible than elegant that it was none of his business to interfere. However, in the first round the car tender and the conductor came to the scene of action and the rebellious passenger was overpowered. Although overcome by numbers, he was still unconquered in spirit, and it was necessary to guard him until his destination was reached.
