Fragrant Flowers in Grande Ronde Valley

We people of the Grande Ronde Valley, as well as others from different parts of the country, have had our ears filled with praises of the beauty of the sunny California, of its delightful climate, of its wonderful fruits, and of its gorgeous flowers. We have been told that the flowers bloom not only in the summer time, when flowers bloom everywhere, but that, in the winter time, when King Frost holds other climes in his chilling grasp, in this land of California, "beloved by Heaven o'er all the world beside," as Californians seem to think, the buds burst forth and the flowers bloom in all their splendor. But we of the Grande Ronde Valley should not grow despondent as we listen to these wonderful tales of this garden spot of the world, for lo, there comes to our ears the information that Oregon apples demand the highest price in all the markets of the world, and it needs not to be told that our climate is unexcelled, as all who have lived in the valley during the winter can testify. And now it is learned that in the winter time the Grande Ronde Valley produces flowers which bud and bloom and cast their sweetness on the balmy air. Today as Mr. J. M. McCall was going from his Valley View farm up into the hills, he discovered buttercups in full bloom upon the hillside, sweet and fragrant, turning their faces up for the kisses of the sun. Now why should not the spirit of the people of the Grande Ronde be proud when they live in a place where their different resources are so unexcelled, and where the climate leaves nothing for the heart of mortal to desire.

Small Fire

At eleven o'clock last evening the alarm of fire was sounded and the department took the carts to the depot where there was supposed to be a fire of considerable magnitude. It developed that a defective chimney in the switchmen's house had allowed the sparks to set the roof on fire. The railroad fire department had the fire under control by the time the city department reached the depot. The damage was very slight.
